THE GOVERNMENT OF BIHAR established the Mithila Institute of Post-Graduate Studies and Research in Sanskrit Learning at Darbhanga in 1951 with the object inter alia to promote advanced studies and research in Sanskrit learning to bring together the traditional Pāndits with their profound learning and the modern scholars with their technique of research and investigations to publish works of permanent value to scholars. This Institute is one of the five others planned by this Government as a token of their homage to the tradition of learning and scholarship for which ancient Bihar was noted. Apart from the Mithila Institute three others have been established and have been doing useful work during the last three or four years—Nalanda Institute of Research and Post Graduate Studies in Buddhist Learning and Pālī at Nalanda, K. P. Jayaswal Research Institute at Patna and the Bihar Rashtra Bhasha Parishad for research and advanced studies in Hindi at Patna. In the establishment of the Mithila Institute the State Government received a generous donation from the Maharajadhiraja of Darbhanga for construction of the building on a plot of land also donated by him.

As part of this programme of rehabilitating and re-orientation of ancient learning and scholarship the editing and publication of this Volume has been undertaken with co-operation of scholars in Bihar and outside. The Government of Bihar hope to continue to sponsor such projects and trust that this humble service to the world of scholarship and learning would bear fruit in the fulness of time.

Preface

The following pages present the posthumous studies on the History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā by the late Professor Dineshchandra Bhattacharya who was a specialist in the much neglected branch of Indology—Study of Mss. His contributions on the History of Vaidyaka, Dharmaśāstra, Navya-Nyāya and Sanskrit Grammar scattered in the pages of different scholarly journals will immortalise him. It was in his mature years that he began to systematise the results of his studies. His Bengali work—Vaṅge Navya-Nyāya-carcā was well received and fetched for him the much coveted 'Rabindra Prize' from the Government of West Bengal.

It was a matter of gratification that he accepted my offer to write a volume on the History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā. He came to Mithilā and examined the Manuscript Libraries of the Mithilā Institute and Raj Darbhanga, thrown open to him. But the beckon from beyond impelled him to make hurry and he could not finish the work on the plan chalked out. His health was deteriorating rapidly and he breathed his last soon after he handed the press copy of the present work over to me.

The work, however, will show that the author collected every available material in India and abroad and gave his considered and impartial verdict on the problems taken up. It may be hoped that it will serve as an invitation to younger scholars to carry out further fruitful researches in the line

A few minor omissions and anachronisms may be noticed. But in the absence of the author, I thought it fit to preserve his text as it is. Interested scholars may refer to his above-mentioned Bengali work for more details. The author could not add his Introduction which would have much enhanced the value of the Volume

Professor Bhattacharya's MS. collection, so often referred to in these pages, has as it is reported, been donated to the Sanskrit Sahitya Parisad, Calcutta.

I take the opportunity to thank all those, particularly the authorities of the Raj Library, Darbhanga, Asiatic Society, Bengal, Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona, and Sarasvati Bhavana, Banaras, who allowed the author to utilize the materials at their disposal.

I also like to record with thanks the help I received from Prof Anantalal Thakur of the Institute in carrying the work through the press and preparing the index for this volume

HISTORY OF NAVYA-NYĀYA IN MITHILĀ

CHAPTER I

UDAYANĀCĀRYA AND HIS PREDECESSORS

MITHILĀ with her natural barriers and a compact social and cultural hierarchy has held her own through the millenniums against disruptive forces, and has shed lustre right from the Vedic times in all phases of human knowledge. Her literary history has no parallel for its antiquity, diversity and continuity. By far the greatest contribution, however, that Mithilā has made to the philosophical literature of India is the Nyāyadarśana, or applied Logic with a very wide sphere of operation. This system is broadly divided into two distinct schools, ancient and modern. In the following pages we shall attempt to give a brief account of the ample materials now available through further spade-work on the history and bibliography of Navya-Nyāya or the modern school of Indian Logic in Mithilā.¹

This modern school is commonly believed to have been founded by Gaṅgeśa Upādhyāya, who only consolidated it. The real founder is the great Udayanācārya, who had the supreme privilege of occupying the threshold to ring out the old and usher the new age by his monumental works. On the

1. Rai Monomohan Chakravarti Bahadur, who was a scholar of Botany and a member of the Executive Service, was, curiously enough, the first in the field and published the results of his unique labours in an 'excellent' paper (History of Navya-Nyāya in Bengal and Mithilā : JASB, 1915, pp. 259-292). He was followed notably by MM. Dr. Gopinath Kaviraja, who succeeded in unravelling many new facts (Sarasvatī Bhavana Studies, Vol. III, pp. 81-157). Also S. N. Sinha's History of Tivhut, 1922, pp. 108-88 : App. A. Sanskrit writers of Mithilā. In this book family records were consulted for the first time. Also Dr. Vidyabhusana's History of Indian Logic, 1921, Part III.

one hand Udayana's Parīśuddhi forms the last part of the surviving 'classics' of the older school of the Nyāya popularly known as the Quadruplet or the Quintette¹, and on the other his Kusumāñjali is up-till-now a text-book of the Navya-Nyāya. Fortunately all his works are now available in print except a major portion of the Parīśuddhi. These are :—

1) Lakṣaṇāvalī (Vindhyeśvarīprasāda's ed., 1897, pp. 13), a Vaiśeṣika manual. Its authenticity, which is sometimes questioned, is proved by a reference in the Sarīadarśanasaṅgraha (Abhyankara's ed. p. 221 : the verse cited is from the present work) and by its several commentators viz. Śeṣa Śārṅgadharma (fl. 1500 A. D. in the Nyāyamuktāvalī, S. Gosvāmin's ed., Benares, 1900, pp. 72), Bhaṭṭa Keśava of the Laugākṣi family of Benares (Ms at Baroda : cf. Tanjore Cat. p. 4643), Mahādeva Somayājī (Mahādeva Puṇatāmbara's Ms. copy at Sarasvatī Bhavana, Banares) and Viśvanātha Jha of Darbhanga. Its date of composition 906 Saka ('सर्काम्वराद्') is recorded in one single Ms. dated 1708 Samvat (No. 594 of Sarasvatī Bhavana).

2) Lakṣaṇamālā : this long-lost Nyāya manual of Udayana has at last been discovered and published (Journal of Oriental Research, Madras, XIX. i pp. 44-52). As there was a later

1. Two foremost Maithilā scholars Vācaspati II and Saṅkara refer to the older classics as चतुर्ग्रन्थी consisting of भाष्य-वार्तिक-सातसर्गटीका-परिचुद्धि. Thus—यदप्यतिशयोक्तं जयति सा चतुर्ग्रन्थिका

तथा यदपि भास्करो यदपि तत्त्वबोधोपधिकं ।

वाचस्पतिवृत्त-न्यायतत्त्वालोके आरम्भश्लोक ३ ।

रितुर्व्याख्यां कृत्य मनसि भक्तायस्य कृतिः ।

चतुर्ग्रन्थोपन्यासद्वयिह विमोक्षु व्यवसित ।

शंकरमिश्रवृत्त-त्रिमूर्तीनिबन्धन्यायव्याख्याम्ने ।

Abbayaṭilakopādhyāya in the Nyāyālaṅkāra uses the happy term पञ्चग्रन्थान-न्यायमहातर्क adding the original Sūtras to the list —इति युगप्रधान-धर्मोपदेशमूर्तिव्याख्या-धर्मप्रयत्नलक्ष्योपन्यायनिर्मितार्था पञ्चग्रन्थानन्यायमहातर्कविषयपदव्याख्यायां न्यायलक्ष्यरत्नावली पञ्चमोपन्यायः सन्निवृत्त ॥ (Rotograph preserved in the Mithilā Institute).

work of the same name by Śivāditya Miśra the anonymous copy has been ascribed by the editor to the latter. But it is undoubtedly the lost work of Udayana. The first verse is identical with that of the Gunakīraṇāvalī, and Śivāditya cannot possibly have borrowed Udayana's verse to begin with. The learned editor has correctly noted that none of the numerous quotations from Śivāditya in the Chitsukhī-tīkā can be traced in the present work. We should add that both the quotations found in the Tārkikaraksā (pp 179 & 225) are exactly traced herein (pp 46 & 50) and in both places the commentator Mallinātha clearly ascribes the present work to Udayana. The very first Sūtra of this manual ('तत्त्वानुभूति प्रमा') is quoted and refuted in the Khandana along with two others from the Kusumāñjali, and Śaṅkara Miśra correctly stated that it was taken from the Laksanamālā of Nyāyācārya (Śāṅkarī p 146). Śivāditya could have no claim to that title as against Udayana specially in Mithilā in the times of Śaṅkara. This elementary manual should be introduced in seminaries with great benefit to beginners.

3 4) Ātmatattvavivēka or Bauddhadhikāra and Nyāya-Kusumāñjali, both published with commentaries in various editions.

5) Nyāyapañiṣṭha or Prabodhasiddhi a separate commentary on the 5th chapter of the Nyāyasūtra the most intricate portion of the book (edited with Vardhamāna's Prakāśa by N C Vedāntatīrtha Calcutta 1938) In the last verse Udayana woefully laments that his exposition will hardly find a reader in a world devoid of intellectual eminence.

6) Nyaya-vārtika-tātparya pañisuddhi, better known as the Nibandha. About one-third of the book was published from the Asiatic Society with Vardhamāna's Prakāśa (pp 768)

All the above six works of Udayana, it should be carefully noticed are complete and each of them ends suitably with con-

been published (by M M Vindhyeśvarīprasāda in the Intro to the Nyāyaśāstra, 1916) forming the 30th chapter of the Bharatapurana Parīkṣita which is on the face of it a recent work. It narrates the interesting story of his academic contest with a Buddhist scholar who came to the royal court of Mithilā with disciples and books for the purpose. Udayana came out successful in the debate which lasted for several days, and a miracle performed by the Buddhist before a Śālagrāma was countered by Udayana by a greater miracle. In the final ordeal they both jumped from the top of a palm tree in which Udayana escaped unhurt and the Buddhist died. Udayana was highly honoured by the Lord Jagannatha at Puri as His own incarnation and died a natural death in old age at Kāsi. It is clearly stated that his descendants were still living in Mithilā —

विद्वांसः शास्त्रसंपन्ना पाठयन्ति गृहे गृहे ॥

A somewhat different version of the story was published by Vidyābhūṣana (1 c p 142 originally in the Journal of the Buddhist Text Society 1896, Pt I pp 20-21) probably from Tibetan sources. When the Buddhist died in the ordeal by jumping from the top of a hill Udayana was stigmatised by the Lord Jagannatha as a murderer and died by self burning uttering the following verse still widely current among scholars addressing the Lord —

ऐश्वर्यमदमतोऽसि मामवलाय वर्तसे ।

अपस्वितेषु घोरद्वेषु मदर्घानां तव मयि ॥

and no other work is ascribed to him. The sharp fling at a Gaudamīmāṃsaka in the Kuṣumajñāna itself (under III 14) is a convincing proof that the author never belonged to Bengal. A clever Vārendra scholar of the last century wrote (Laghubbāṣita Vol III p 160-61) about Udayana Bhidukā —

स लघुद्वेष्य-विविधस्य वृत्तव्यक्तिः ।

हर्ष-सम्पाद-गोविन्द-प्रकारितः ॥

The Pauranic version of the story seems to be more reliable. Academic contests were the rule in those days, and Udayana's contest with a proud Buddhist scholar in the presence of the king of Mithilā seems to be substantially true.

We append below an alphabetical list of authorities cited directly and indirectly by Udayana in his works. This list is obviously not exhaustive and the classical works—the Bhāṣya, Vārtika and Praśastapādabhāṣya as well as the names of Dignāga and Dharmakīrti are omitted. We have attempted to collect all available information about some of the prominent names in the list.

ANIRUDDHA the name of this ancient author was traced by us in the Didhiti tīkā of Rudra Tarkavāgīśa (grandson of Bhavānanda Siddhāntavāgīśa) of Navadvīpa, who composed it about 1660 A.D.¹ There are two references both on the denotation of a pronoun. It now appears that he is probably identical with the author of the Vivaraṇa pañjikā, a commentary on the Bhāṣya, Vārtika and Tātparyā. In Udayana's Parīśuddhi the comment of a previous commentator on the Tātparyāṭīkā is cited and refuted in the following passage: अनेनैव कारणमविद्यादृष्ट्ये कार्या प्रवृत्तिरुपनिष्ठा धर्माधर्माविति टीकाव्याख्यानमपहस्तितम्। (pp. 74-5).

(cf. Tātparyāṭīkā, Vizianagram ed., p 6, line 7). Whether this is a reference to Aniruddha we cannot say. It is our concluding verses Only the Parīśuddhi ends with a closing phrase (इति सर्वं निस्तरङ्गमिति) which is not metrical (Tanjore Cat, p 4487) But the next work is a notable exception on this point

1 Didhiti-Raudrī is an extremely rare book there is a unique Ms copy preserved in the Alwar Maharaja's Library. A complete transcript in 349 folios was very kindly procured and lent to us by Maharajakumar Dr Raghurib Sinha of Sitamai. The two passages of Aniruddha are found in fol 21b & 22a. For Rudra's date and works vide our Bengali book Vaṅge Navyanyāyacarā pp 144-47. For Aniruddha's newly discovered commentary vide Dr J N Jetly's paper in the Journal of the Oriental Institute of Baroda, Dec 1954 to March 1955, pp 240-44. It is really surprising that a 17th century scholar of Navadvīpa could mention the long lost name of an ancient authority on the Nyāya who probably preceded Udayana.

7) Kīranāvalī the celebrated commentary on the Praśasta-pāda-Bhāṣya upon which a vast literature flourished in Mithilā and Bengal It is, as is well-known incomplete, and as far as available ends quite abruptly in the midst of the section on Buddhi in the second part of the Bhāṣya There is not even the word इति at the end of the extant portion The editor of the Varanasi edition (Chowkh ed p 340) is quite wrong in stating that the section on Buddhi ends along with the extant text of the Kīranāvalī As a matter of fact, more than a third of the section remains unexplained by Udayana and the particular section of the Bhāṣya ends only on page 348 of that edition Only two alternatives are possible here Either Udayana left it incomplete by sudden death or the last portion of the gloss was lost due to unknown causes The first alternative seems to be more probable though further investigation on the text of the Kīranāvalī is necessary¹

The chronological order of Udayana's works (including Nos 1-2 which may be taken as preparatory manuals) is probably what we have given above The Ātmatattvavivēka is cited by name in the Kuṣumāñjali (under V 3) both of which are mentioned in the Kīranāvalī (pp 103 & 147) The Parīśuddhi cites the Kuṣumāñjali (SB Ms No 51 under II 1 fol 58b & under II 11 foll 63a & 66b Also Baroda Ms No 1207 fol 18a under V 11) the Parīśista (under V 11, Baroda Ms foll 7b 10b & 16b) and the Ātmatattvavivēka (under II 1 fol 58b along with Kuṣumāñjali सूष्टिमहाप्रलयसाधकान्यनुमानानि आत्मतत्त्वविवेके न्यायकुसुमाञ्जली च कृतपरिभ्रमाणामनायासप्रपञ्च-

1 It is learnt that a further portion of the Kīranāvalī has recently been discovered and is being edited by Muni Śrī Jambuvijaya

नोयानि) Vāchaspati cites Praśastapāda's elaborate definition of happiness under the caption गथाद्. पदार्थविद- (Tātparyatikā, p. 81) Udayana explains it in the Parisuddhi (B.I. ed pp 531-32), without referring to the Kīranāṭī, which evidently was not yet written or planned

It is clear that Udayana wrote the independent treatises before the commentaries We have left out Nos 1-2 from this investigation, as they are to be taken as mere appendices to Nos. 6-7, both of them borrow benedictory verses from No 6, which was composed evidently before them

UDAYANA BELONGED TO MITHILĀ

For a proper understanding of Udayana's great achievement, it is necessary to ascertain the age and environments in which he lived. Though his provenance is not mentioned in his works, it is almost universally admitted by scholars that he belonged to Mithilā. He lived in a village named Kariyona near the Railway station Kāmataula, where his descendants are said to exist still with the surname 'Ācārya' and the ruins of his seminary are still pointed out¹ Maithila scholars still narrate his anecdotes with delight An Udayanacanta has

1 Hist of Tirhut 1922 p 174 fn 2 Another less known tradition is recorded in fn 3 Vidyabhūṣana (i c p 142) is quite wrong to mention Manrona as his birth place All the local traditions about Udayana should be carefully collected and properly investigated There was a famous Udayanacarya in the Bhaduri family of the Vārendra Brahmanas of Bengal who is stated in their genealogical works to be author of the Kusumāñjali We quote a half verse from an old Pañji in our possession (fol 3a)

वेदानुद्धतवान् निरुद्ध सकलान् बोद्धानस्त्रादिनो

प्रत्यध्रीनुसुमाजलेरयमहो य सृष्टिर्ता महान् ।

This widely current tradition is entirely baseless This Udayana Bhāduri introduced certain reforms in the Vārendra community with the help of the famous KullukaBhatta sometime after the reign of Ballala Sena He lived therefore, late in the 13th cent A D Moreover, Kusumāñjali alone

been published (by M M Vindhyeśvarīprasāda in the Intro to the Nyāyaśāstra, 1916) forming the 30th chapter of the Bhāṭṭyapurāṇa-Parīkṣā which is on the face of it a recent work. It narrates the interesting story of his academic contest with a Buddhist scholar who came to the royal court of Mithilā with disciples and books for the purpose. Udayana came out successful in the debate which lasted for several days and a miracle performed by the Buddhist before a Śālagrāma was countered by Udayana by a greater miracle. In the final ordeal they both jumped from the top of a palm tree in which Udayana escaped unhurt and the Buddhist died. Udayana was highly honoured by the Lord Jagannatha at Puri as His own incarnation and died a natural death in old age at Kāśī. It is clearly stated that his descendants were still living in Mithilā -

विद्वांसः शास्त्रसंपन्ना पाठयन्ति गृहे गृहे ॥

A somewhat different version of the story was published by Vidyābhūṣana (1 c p 142 originally in the Journal of the Buddhist Text Society 1896 Pt I pp 20-21) probably from Tibetan sources. When the Buddhist died in the ordeal by jumping from the top of a hill Udayana was stigmatised by the Lord Jagannatha as a murderer and died by self burning uttering the following verse still widely current among scholars addressing the Lord —

प्रेक्ष्यममदमनोऽसि मामवज्ञाय वर्तसे ।

उपस्थितेषु बौद्धेषु मदघीना तव स्मिन्नि ॥

and no other work is ascribed to him. The sharp sting at a Gaudamūṇa saka in the Kuṣumajāl itself (under III 14) is a convincing proof that the author never belonged to Bengal. A clever Varendra scholar of the last century wrote (Laghubhāṭya Vol III p 160-61) about Udayana Bhaduri —

स एवेत्यनायासविनाश कुसुमजलम् ।

वीर्यपूर्णतने हन्व तस्माद् गोत्रे प्रचारितम् ॥

The Pauranic version of the story seems to be more reliable. Academic contests were the rule in those days, and Udayana's contest with a proud Buddhist scholar in the presence of the king of Mithilā seems to be substantially true.

We append below an alphabetical list of authorities cited directly and indirectly by Udayana in his works. KANDALI-KĀRA : In the whole history of Indian Logic there is only one author Śrīdhara-cārya who definitely stated the date of composition of his major and only surviving work, the Nyāyakandalī, and the date 913 Śaka (991-2 A. D.) is happily beyond any dispute.¹ Rājasekhara, a Jaina scholar, wrote a sub-commentary on the Nyāyakandalī in 1226 Śaka (1304 A.D.). He stated that the first commentary on the Prasastapādabhāṣya is the Vyomaīatī, the second one the Nyāyakandalī and the third one is Udayana's Kiraṇāvalī. In other words Śrīdhara of Bengal preceded Udayana. This chronological order is exactly corroborated by internal evidence abundantly found in the three great Vaiśeṣika classics. Though Udayana has not referred to Śrīdhara or his work by name he undoubtedly consulted his work and refuted his views at every step in the Kiraṇāvalī.

(i) Vādiṇdra explains the line प्रकरणशुद्धेः संप्रपञ्चेनैव दर्शितत्वात् (Kiraṇāvalī, Chowkh. ed., p. 5) as a refutation of Śrīdhara-

1. Vizianagram ed., p. 331. In the introd. (p. 22, fn. 5) the editor notes and rejects a variant 'varṣābde' for 'Śakābde'. The variant is manifestly wrong, for the word 'varṣa' is a synonym of the word 'abda' and can by no stretch of exegesis be taken to mean the 'Vikrama-Samvat'. Rājasekhara's passage is cited in the Introd., pp. 19-20. Vide also Peterson's third Report, 1887, p. 273. For Śrīdhara's account vide our Bengali work Vaṅge Navyanyāyacharchā p. 6-8. He belonged to a village named Bhūriṣṭi still existing in the Hughli district of West Bengal. Śrīdhara's profound scholarship in all the six systems of philosophy, so much in evidence in his extant work, turned his native place into a famous seat of learning in Eastern India. Kṛṣṇa Miśra, the court poet of Chāndella Kīrtivarmā, about a century after Śrīdhara describes Mr. Pride of his immortal drama Prabodhachandrodaya as an inhabitant of this very birth-place of Śrīdhara. Evidently the poet's attack was directed against a proud scholar, may be, of Śrīdhara's own family.

cārya :—इति श्रीधराचार्यस्तदनुपपन्नमित्याह - प्रकरणशुद्धे: (B.I. ed., p. 622 about to be published). Vāḍindra (fl. about 1225 A. D.) is the earliest commentator on the Kiraṇāvalī so far available.

- (ii) Śrīdhara's well-known views about tamas, which he carefully recorded thrice in the Kandali (pp. 9, 179, 240) apparently as his own, were discussed in the Kiraṇāvalī (B.I. Ed., pp. 111-12) and Vardhamāna definitely states here कन्दलीकारमतमुत्थापयति. Vardhamāna vouches for the Kandali-kāra's priority to Udayana also in the Guṇaprakāśa (S. B. Ed., p. 77 vide Kiraṇāvalī, Ben. Ed., p. 204).
- (iii) The line कथं भावधर्माध्यारोपोऽभाव इति चेत् । न किञ्चिदेतत् (p. 110) is also exactly taken from the Kandali (p. 9, last line).
- (iv) Similarly the line पार्थिवपरमाणुगतरूपादिसंताने नैकान्तिकमिति चेन्न of the Kiraṇāvalī (p. 58) refers to the Kandali (pp. 4, 11, 13-14).
- (v) In the section on ākāśa (Kiraṇāvalī, Ben. Ed., p. 109) we find अन्ये त्वात्मान्तरमाहृत्वादिति अनेकप्रतिपत्तुसाधारणत्वादिति हेत्वर्थं वर्णयन्ति, स तु संदिग्धासिद्धः । This is also a clear reference to the Kandali (p. 60) as stated by the late Mm. V. P. Dube (vide Intr. to the Nyāyakandali, pp. 21-22).
- (vi) In the section on Prthivī in the Kandali (p. 31) we read :—परमाणुस्वभावायाः पृथिव्याः सत्त्वे किं प्रमाणम् ? अनुमानम् । अणुपरिमाणुतारतम्यं क्वचिद् विश्रान्तं परिमाणुतारतम्यत्वात् महत्परिमाणुतारतम्यवत् . This argument is exactly reproduced in the Kiraṇāvalī (Ben. Ed., p. 52, B. I. Ed., p. 224) with the heading अपर आह and refuted. Mathurānātha Tarkavāgīśa in his Dravyakiraṇāvalīrahasya (Ms No. 139 of the Cal. Sans. College, fol. 88a) comments here—कन्दलीकारोक्तं परमाणुद्वयणुकसिद्धिप्रयोजकमनुमानमाह - अपरस्त्विति । अणुपरिमाणुतारतम्यमिति । Mathurānātha must have had access to an unknown source in the present case, as he is not borrowing either from Vardhamāna or Padmanābha, both of whom are silent on the point.

- (vi) In the second part (Gunakhaṇḍa) of his book also Udayana controverts the views of the Kandalī in several places. For instance we read on page 160 — रत्नतत्त्वमिव गुणत्वमुपदेशापेक्षेण चक्षुरादिना प्रत्यक्षत एव प्रतीयते इति तु स्वशिष्यव्यामोहनं निमित्तमन्तरेणोप-
देशस्यागममात्रत्वात् । This is a clear reference to the Kandalī (p. 94) and Udayana's manner of refutation seems to suggest that he had contact with Śrīdhara's pupils
- (vii) The passage न तु स्थायमेव रूपमस्य सहकारि (Kiraṇāvalī, p 176) is also a refutation of the Kandalī (p 104). Compare also p 266 of the Kiraṇāvalī (यत्तु...इति केचित्) with the Kandalī (p. 179).

It should be mentioned here that Śāṅkara Miśra in the Kanādarahasya stated three cases where the views of the Kandalī are refuted in the Kiraṇāvalī and in every case the views controverted belong not to the Kandalī at all but to the Vyomavati. Vide Kanādarahasya (pp. 81, 82 & 86) and the Vyomavati (pp. 488, 494 & 502). The fact remains, however, that Śrīdhara's priority to Udayana was quite well-known in Śāṅkara's times

Before the publication of the Kandalī it was the opinion of MM. Vindhyeśvarīprasāda that Udayana preceded Śrīdhara, who wrote the Kandalī on the basis of the Kiraṇāvalī (Introd., 1941 V. S. , p. 25). Subsequently he held the view that they were contemporaries and made a statement, which is on the face of it almost absurd that they cited each other's views (Introd. to the Kandalī, pp. 20-22). As a matter of fact the two instances of Śrīdhara's citation from Udayana referred to here (ibid. p 21 f n. 3) are quite wrong. In the first instance Śrīdhara states that according to some scholars (and Udayana is not certainly one of them) the age-difference between the young and the old is caused not by the time-element but by the number of revolutions of the sun (Kandalī p. 64)—a view ascribed in the Līlāvati (p. 283) to the Bhūsaṇa and found already cited in the Vyomavati (p. 343) and the Tātparyāṭikā of Vācaspati (p. 280) In the second instance (Kandalī p. 119) it is Udayana who violently criticises (p. 204) Śrīdhara — नष्टस्यापि समवायिकारणत्वमिति त्वलौकिकमवैदिक च. Śrīdhara has nowhere referred to the peculiar views of Udayana, who proves himself to be far more advanced and intricate in his arguments than Śrīdhara, for instance on the subject of the perceptibility of Vāyu (Kīranāvalī pp. 82-84, Kandalī p. 46) Nevertheless eminent scholars relying on the statement of the late MM. believed that Śrīdhara lived to refute the views of Udayana (Keith Indian Logic and Atomism, 1921, p. 32; also S. B. Studies, Vol. III, pp. 111-12)

KĀŚIKĀKĀRA A passage of the Ātmatattvavivēka (B. I. ed., p. 837 तर्हि तर्कापरिशुद्धिरस्तु and cf. also Kīranāvalī, p. 101 and Nyāyasilāvatī, Chowkh. ed. pp. 260-61) refers according to Saṅkara Miśra to Kāśikākāra i. e. Sucarita Miśra, author of the Kāśika on the Śloka-vārtika. The variant Kanikākāra is evidently wrong as we are unable to trace the passage in Vācaspati's Nyāyakamkā. Moreover, this Kāśikākāra is cited also by Ratnakīrti in two of his tracts—Īśvarasādhana-dūṣaṇa (p. 42) and Vyāptinirṇaya (p. 99) and Ratnakīrti elsewhere cites Vācaspati's Kaṇikā separately¹

VYOMASIVĀCĀRYA—Udayana in the Kīranāvalī (p. 114) while explaining the argument establishing 'time' as a separate entity quotes the following passage —

1. Vide Ratnakīrtinibandhāvalī edited by Anantalal Thakur p. 9 Also J. B. R. S., XXXVII, Pt. 3-4 Prof. Thakur's paper "Ratnakīrti and his works" (p. 4 of Reprint) The lower limit of Sucarita's date is now fixed at 1000 A. D. before the times of Udayana and Ratnakīrti These tracts of Ratnakīrti throw a flood of light on a dark age

न चात्माकाशौ तथा भवितुमर्हते विरोपगुणवत्वात् पृथिव्यादिवदित्याचार्याः ।

The reference is evidently to Vācaspati (cf Tātparyasūtrikā, p. 280 अपि चाकाशात्मानौ न परापरव्यतिकरकारणम् असाधारणगुणयोगित्वात् पृथिव्यादिवत्). But curiously enough Vardhamāna in his gloss here definitely identifies this Ācārya with Vyomaśivācārya¹ and not Vācaspati. This can only be explained by the assumption that according to Vardhamāna Vācaspati came after Vyomaśiva. It should be noted in this connection that a careful study of the relevant passages of the Vyomavati (pp 342-43), Kandali (pp. 64; 168-9), Tātparyasūtrikā (pp. 280-1) and Līlāvati (p. 283), seems to show that all the scholars including Vācaspati attempted here to meet a familiar argument ascribed in the Līlāvati to the Bḥuṣaṇa (of Bḥāsarvajña) —न च परत्वापरत्वसिद्धिरपि । बहुतरत्तपनपरिस्पन्दान्तरित-ज्ञानत्वेनैव तदुपपत्तेः इति भूपण . Vyomaśiva preceded both Udayana and Śrīdhara. Let us give some references on the point. On p. 46 of the Kandali the views of a scholar (kaścit) on the perceptibility of vāyu is refuted. The views belong to Vyomaśiva (pp. 272-4). Udayana (pp. 82-84) mainly agrees with Śrīdhara here but criticises one of his arguments न च स्पर्शमात्रमेव तत्र प्रतीयते । वायुस्त्यनुमीयते इति युक्तम् । On p. 52 of the Kandali the grammatical explanation of the word वृत्तिलब्धा is a direct answer to Vyomaśiva's objection (p. 300). The views of 'eke' on p. 134 & 136 are exactly taken from the Vyomavati (pp. 474, 477). The scathing criticism of the solution of an 'un-schooled' intellectual (Kandali p. 147) is also directed against Vyomaśiva (p. 490). Compare also p. 200 of the Kandali अन्ये तु with p. 563 of the Vyomavati, here also Udayana agrees with Śrīdhara. On p. 392 of the Vyomavati a temple apparently built by a contemporary monarch named Śrīharṣa is referred to by way of illustration श्रेष्ठं देवकुलमिति ज्ञाने । This monarch cannot certainly be identical with the great Harsavardhana who reigned about four centuries before Śrīdhara. The latter's scathing remarks about Vyomaśiva (Kandali pp. 146-47) point normally to a contemporary scholar, slightly senior to him. We are inclined, therefore, to identify the monarch with Śrīharṣadeva of Mālava, the grandfather of the famous Bhojadeva. This Śrīharṣa's known dates range from 1005 to 1029 V. S. (948-72 A. D.). The Vyomavati was written about 950 A. D. and quickly circulated among scholars of the different parts of India through the patronage of the Malava king Vyomaśiva was the pupil of a very distinguished scholar, who had written a number of dialectical tracts mainly against Buddhist views (vide Vyomavati pp. 46, 189, 308, 399, 546, 557, 565, 584 & 586). Unfortunately his name is not mentioned by Vyomaśiva. A saint Vyomaśiva is abundantly eulogised in vv. 22-42 of the Ranod stone inscription (Ep. Ind., I, pp. 351-61) and it has been suggested that he is identical with the present author (Introd. to Tarkasangraha G O S, p XIX, also LH Q., X, pp 165-6). But the undated inscription has been assigned to the end of the 10th or the beginning of the 11th cent. A. D. and unless the date is pushed back by half a century the identification cannot stand. It has been suggested (Journ G. Jha R I, Vol. III, p 44) that the date of the inscription along with that of Vyomaśiva and his patron Harsavardhana is about 645 A. D. more than three centuries before the date indicated by paleography. This is on the face of it impossible and places the numerous authorities cited by Vyomaśiva (Dharmakīrti, Kumāṛila, Prabhākara and others) even before 500 A. D., of which we have not the slightest evidence yet discovered. Avantivarman mentioned in the inscription is not the Maukhari king, but the Kaśmīr monarch who reigned in the 9th century A. D. The statement that Vyomaśiva's views on Mokṣa have been cited by Maṇḍana and the Jaina scholar Akalaṅka cannot be substantiated.

JÑĀNAŚRI : Udayana wrote the Ātmatattvaviveka to meet the arguments of Buddhist scholars and among them by far the greatest target of his attack was Jñānaśrī. Though he is mentioned by name only once in the book (B I. ed , p 292) we gather from Śankara Miśra's commentary that he is cited and refuted more than a dozen times (289, 292-3, 317, 356, 367, 371, 436, 453, 464-5, 489-90 & 841). The Ātmatattvavivēka is the very first work of Udayana and it should be carefully noted that the first stroke of his genius was brought forth by his conflict with the last and the greatest dialectician among Buddhist logicians viz. Ācārya Jñānaśrīmitra—a fact which is now entirely forgotten¹. The following facts about Jñānaśrī (who should not be confused with the Kashmirian Jñānaśrībhadrā) should be carefully considered. As many as twelve of his dialectical treatises in original Sanskrit have been discovered in Tibet and their photographs are now preserved in the Bihar Research Society. These are ज्ञानमहाध्याय, व्याप्तिचर्चा, भेदाभेदपरीक्षा, ईश्वरवाद, अनुपलब्धिग्रहण, सर्वशब्दाभावचर्चा, अपोहप्रकरण, कार्यकारणभावसिद्धि, योगिनिर्यय, अद्वैतविन्दुप्रकरण, साकारसिद्धि and साकारसप्रहसून. Except कार्यकारणभावसिद्धि a small tract of only 6 folios none of his works nor any of the numerous works of his disciple Ratnakīrti have been translated into Tibetan. This proves that a period of decadence has already set in among the Buddhists and that they were losing in the intellectual fight with their opponents. This is one of the reasons why Buddhism soon perished in India.

Jñānaśrī's masterpiece is the ज्ञानमहाध्याय and this was sharply attacked by Udayana in his youthful zeal in a masterly way. We shall refer here to one brilliant stroke of Udayana as an illustration. Jñānaśrī summarises his arguments in favour of the theory of momentariness by the logical method of difference in one single verse —

धर्मस्य कस्यचिदवस्तुनि मानसिद्धा
वाचाविधिव्यवहति किमिहास्ति नो वा ।
कायस्ति चेत् कथमियन्ति न दूषणानि
नास्त्येव चेत् स्ववचनप्रतिरोधसिद्धि ॥

1 Anantatal Thakur Jñānaśrīmitra and His works—JBRS Buddha-Jayanti Special Issue pp 186-92

This verse is quoted by Udayana in the Parīśuddhi (B. I. Ed. p. 713 यदुक्तं ज्ञानभिया) and by Ratnakīrti (Tracts, p. 62) under the caption यथाहुर्गुरुव But in the Ātmatattvavivēka it is fully answered with remarkable banter and biting criticism and hurled back at its author with the change of three words — शब्दस्य काचिदपि वस्तुनि अस्त्येव (B I Ed *p 423) As typical instances of Udayana's early style we reproduce two of his remarks under this topic — त्वयैव ग्राहितं शिष्यं न चैव चेतनो ग्राहयितुमपि शक्यते ॥ तस्मादलमद्भुलिदीपिकया ध्यान्तध्वसविधिमनुस्रजेति ॥ Jñānaśrī is also cited by Udayana in the Parīśuddhi under III ॥ 17 — अतोऽनवमुद्धटोकार्येन ज्ञानभिया यत्किञ्चिदुक्तं तन्न लगतीति । इत्येतावन्मात्रमुत्वादनपरश्चाय गभीरतरो ग्रन्थमहाह्वर—सोऽयमुपरिपरिप्लवमानै कथमिवावगच्छताम् । (Chap. 3 fol 13a) It is wonderful how apparently with maturity of age and scholarship Udayana gives up his bantering style altogether : Even a banter of Jñānaśrī which he carefully reproduces here (तदिय भेदाभेदानुकरणार्था नैयायिकाना गोपनुस्वात्वायसमिष्टाश्रुतिमनुहरति (ib fol 13b) could not bring out a retort from him His answer was simple and dignified (तदेतदपि अनाकलितदीकार्यस्य व्याहृतम्) It is our conjecture that Jñānaśrī was alive when the Ātmatattvavivēka was composed but he was dead when the Parīśuddhi was written That may have been another reason for Udayana to adopt a sober style

Jñānaśrī according to Tibetan evidence was born in Gauda and was a pillar of Vikramaśīlā in Magadha (Vidyabhusana p 341) When Naropanta just before his death visited Vikramaśīlā (in 1038 A D) ' he leaned on the right arm of Atīśa while Jñānaśrīmitra helped him with his left arm ' (Indian Pandits in Tibet, 1893, p 21) This proves that Jñānaśrī was junior in age to Naropanta and was a true contemporary of Atīśa or Dipankara Śrījñāna (982-1055 A D) By all circumstances of age attainments and provenance, therefore, Jñānaśrī was a formidable opponent of Udayana, whose eminence in the field of scholarship sprang from a desire to refute this Buddhist Philosopher and incidentally the first inception of the modern school of Logic resulted from the conflict.

TRILOCANA He was the professor (विद्यागुरु according to Vardhamāna) of Vācaspati as stated by himself (Tātparya, p 87) Udayana informs us that though a considerable literature based on the standard work Vārtika had been existing before Vācaspati (Parīśuddhi, p 9 बह्वो निबन्धा सन्तीति) they failed miserably because the vigorous Vārtika tradition had long vanished. It was Trilocana who revived it. Jñānaśrī at the end of his masterpiece regarded him as one of the great pillars of Indian Logic —(J B R.S., XXXVI, pt. 1-2)

दुर्नीताश्रमवेदिकादृढतरस्तन्मानमून् राकर-

न्यायालकरण त्रिलोचन-वचस्पत्याह्वयान् हेतया ।

उन्मूल्य क्षणभङ्ग एव विहितो यत् पुण्यमाधत्त मे

तेन स्तात् परपारगस्त्रिभुवने ज्ञानत्रियोऽयं जन ॥

Actual passages from Trilocana were hitherto almost untraceable in the classical works. Only one reference to him we could trace in the Parīśuddhi under III n 17, where Vācaspati's passage beginning with यदि मन्येत (p 388 last line) is according to Udayana (fol 12b), a refutation of Trilocana. A much more important reference is found in the following passage of Nyāyasāraṇicāra by Bhaṭṭa Rāghava (Ms. No 65 of the Sarasvatī Bhavana, dated 1252 A D) —ये तु दृष्टान्तदोषद्वारेणाभासा अविहितास्ते यथा (दृष्टान्तदोषनिश्चयान्निश्चितास्तथा तदोपसदेहात् सविधा इति यत् न्यसमत तत् त्रिलोचनाचार्यसमत) मित्याह—अन्ये त्यिति । (fol 39a the portion within brackets is restored in the margin vide Nyāyasāra B I ed p 13) This makes Trilocana earlier than Bhāsarājña. Many important facts are now available about Trilocana from recently published Buddhist works. In Ratnakīrti's Sarvajñāśuddhi (p 18) there is a quotation from Trilocana's Nyāyaprakīrṇaka. In Durveka Miśra's Dharmottarapradīpa (Patna, 1955) there is a long quotation from Trilocana's Nyāyabhāṣyatīkā (pp 173-74) ending with the enigmatic phrase —तदेतत् कार्पटिकवर्णादृढतरमग्रेय धीमताम् ॥ A 'Karnāṣa in rags' probably points to his place of origin in the Karnāṣa country of South India. The most important discovery at the present moment is the fact that Trilocana's masterpiece was named the Nyāyamañjarī, probably identical with the Bhāṣyatikā cited above. His distinguished pupil Vacaspati in his earliest work the Nyāyakanikā distinctly mentions it in his obeisance to his professor in verse 3 at the beginning —

प्रसवित्रे प्रभवित्रे विद्यातरवे नमो गुरवे ॥

That this cannot be a reference to Jayanta's celebrated work will be convincingly proved by the following evidence. Ratnakīrti wrote all his works as abridgments of larger works of his teacher Jñānaśrī.¹ There is a quotation from Trilocana in a tract of Ratnakīrti (B I ed, p 58, Patna ed, p. 79) which is exactly borrowed from Jñānaśrī's Āsanabhangadhyāya. But the latter refers it to the author of the Nyāyamañjarī (एतेन यदपि न्यायमञ्जरीकार प्राह). In a subsequent passage also Jñānaśrī clearly indicates that the Nyāyamañjarī is a work of Trilocana (यथा तर्हि त्रिलोचनश्चर्ययति तथानयोरपि नीयतामभिप्राय — तथा च न्यायमञ्जरी fol 15a). In his Īśvaravādadūsara Jñānaśrī quotes again from the Mañjarī of Trilocana (मञ्जर्यां त्रिलोचन पुनराह fol 22b).² It will now be quite clearly understood that Aniruddha's numerous reference to the Mañjarī (J O I, Baroda, Dec 54-March 55, pp 241-44) are not to Jayanta at all as mistaken by the learned Doctor but to Trilocana. The first two important references by Aniruddha are under the Sūtras II. 1 20 21 which are not even touched by Jayanta. Aniruddha refers to Trilocana by name separately, but he does not seem to be acquainted with Jayanta or his work. It should also be carefully noted that none of the Buddhist scholars ever referred to

1 Anantalal Thakur Ratnakīrti and His Works, J B R S, Vol XXXVII

2 We are indebted to Prof. Anantalal Thakur of the Mithila Institute for kindly drawing our attention to these passages discovered by him after painful search. The photographs of these valuable works are reserved in the Bihar Research Society (vide Prof. Anantalal Thakur's notes on Guru Trilocana in J B R S, Vol XLI, pt. IV, pp 508 10 & .C, Vol XIV No 1 pp 36-40)

Jayanta or his work. He was almost unknown in Eastern India, the venue of the great intellectual conflict between the Buddhists and the Tīrthikas. A well-known definition of the term Vyāpti (स्वाभाविक संबन्ध) is really of Trilocana (Moksākara's Tarkabhāṣā, p 23)

RATNAKĪRTI According to Śāṅkara Miśra Udayana refuted the views of this Buddhist scholar in two places in the Ātmatattvaviveka (B I ed., pp. 435 & 462) Both the passages are traceable in the Chitradvaitasiddhi, a tract of Ratnakīrti mentioned by himself in the Kṣanabhaṅgasiddhi (B I ed, p 71, Patna ed p 90) and published recently from Patna (vide Ratnakīrtinibandhāvalī 1957,). Ratnakīrti was a prolific writer. Besides the ten works published he wrote at least three more, mentioned by himself, which are yet to be discovered. His works were mostly abridged from the elaborate and larger treatises of his teacher Jñānaśrī as stated by himself at the end of the Sarvajñasiddhi (p 28) that work was but a summary by 'worthy' Ratnakīrti who was frightened at the prolixity of his teacher (सक्षेपो मम रत्नकीर्तिकृतिनस्तद्विस्तरासिनः ।).¹ This proves that Jñānaśrī reached the peak in the dialectics of the Buddhist Logic and he lived to witness the fright of his worthy pupil who failed to meet the trenchant criticisms of Udayana against his own teacher. For it is our conjecture that like Jñānaśrī Ratnakīrti was alive when the Ātmatattvaviveka was written. Instead he only gratified himself by reproducing the arguments of Jñānaśrī against Vacaspati. The latter's brilliant advice to his Buddhist opponent for 'silence' (Tatparya, p 115) is answered by Ratnakīrti (B I ed p 64) evidently in the language of Jñānaśrī, but the retort of Udayana remains unanswered. Udayana's sarcastic reference to Jñānaśrī's lessons to his 'senseless' pupil is evidently meant as a fling at Ratnakīrti.

RĀJAKULAPĀDA a Buddhist logician cited by Ratnakīrti (Patna ed p. 96) He preceded Vācaspati. For under V 11 3

1 Introduction, Ratnakīrtinibandhāvalī

Vācaspati (p 496) quotes an unnamed opponent (यत्सुनरुच्यते परैः) and refutes his arguments with the concluding remarks — सोऽयमोदशोऽसत्प्रलापो भवद्भिः शास्त्रे निबन्धनीयो न त्वस्माभिरिति, व्यकमिय राजकुलस्थितिरिति The same phrase also occurs under V : 17 (p 481) There is little doubt that in both the places the reference is to this hitherto unknown Buddhist scholar, who probably belonged to a royal family

ŚĀNĀTANĪ Saṅkara Miśra in his Vādivinoda (p 2) refers to this scholar, according to whom a debate ('kathā') is four-fold and not three-fold as almost universally regarded. The selfsame view of Śānātani is also referred to by Vācaspati Miśra II in the Tattvāloka (fol 82a) and the Nyāratnaprakāśa (fol 34a) as traced by us. It now appears that both Śaṅkara and Vācaspati derived their information from the following illuminating passage of the Parīśuddhi under I : 1 — भौदगौड-नैयायिकमते चतस्र कथा । स प्रतिपक्षस्थापनाहीनो विवर्णहेत्यत्र (११२।३) जल्पवद्वादस्यापि परामर्शान् । पुरुषाभिप्रायानुरोधेन चतुर्थोदाहरणस्यापि उपपत्तेरिति तानातनि । एक एवायं कथामार्ग इति याज्ञा । से द्वे अपि तिस्र एवेति नियमयता निराकृते । (fol 95b vide Tātparyā, p 215). This proves that Śānātani was an ancient Ācārya who preceded Vācaspati and belonged to Bengal. Under V : 1 there is a discussion as to what is the gist of the whole chapter According to Śānātani &c it is scrutiny ('parīkṣā') and according to others, including presumably Vācaspati (p. 473) it is definition Udayana accepts the latter view (fol. 2a of Chap V of the Parīśuddhi : लक्ष्यमिति मूम) Vardhamāna in the Tattvabodha elaborately brings out the arguments in favour of the former view characterising it as the older one (fol 3a — तत्र प्राचामिदमाकृतम्) Under V : 32 again Vardhamāna has a long and interesting discussion as to why the Sūtrakāra defined 'anūtyasama' before 'nūtyasama' by changing the order of his own list (in V : 1) Two former views on the intricate point are stated and rejected by Vardhamāna, who gave his own explanation in the matter (fol. 57-58), which as far as we know, is not touched by any other commentator At the conclusion he raised the question whether the Bhāṣyakāra was really responsible for this change of order and not the Sūtrakāra. On the authority of ancient ācāryas like Sānātani Vardhamāna positively asserted that it was done by the Sūtrakāra himself —अथ भाष्यकारस्यैवायं क्रमविपर्ययो न तु सूत्रकारस्य इत्येव किं न स्यात् । मैव—सूत्रकारस्यैवायं क्रमविपर्यास इति पूर्वाचार्यैः ज्ञातानिप्रभृतिभिरप्यभिधानात् ॥ So the supreme authority of this ancient scholar of Bengal, who must have written a commentary on the Nyāyadarśana was still recognised in the times of Vardhamāna

ŚRĪVATSA was the professor of Udayana himself This important fact which was quite unknown till recently, is now revealed through an examination of the unpublished portion of the Parīśuddhi Udayana begins each chapter of the Parīśuddhi with a prayer verse (vide Tanjore Cat. pp 4483-87) But the second chapter has the following additional verse —¹

सरोध्य दर्शितरसा मरकूपरूपा
टीकाकृत प्रथम एव गिरो गभीरा ।
सात्पर्यतो यदधुना पुनर्यमो न
श्रीयत्सयत्सलतयैव तथा तथापि ॥

It is a fact that Vacaspati's commentary is expansive on the first chapter (forming about half of the whole book) where his profound exposition has been aptly described by Udayana as desert springs Udayana likewise exhausted his scholarship upon this chapter and disposed of the rest very briefly (the last four chapters of the Parīśuddhi together comprising only 62 folios out of a total of 165) after taking lessons, it now appears, from Śrīvatsa There are five quotations from Śrīvatsa in the Parīśuddhi The first one under II : 68 runs —(fol 58b of

Vācaspati exactly quoting his words which are defended by Udayana. So Śrīvatsa was definitely junior to Vācaspati Under from Śrīvatsa is as follows —(from a Ms in our possession under III : 27 cf Tātparyatīka Vizia Ed p 363)

The topic of consistent relation between the different Prakaranas forming a chapter dealt with here marks a distinct improvement upon Vācaspati's gloss where it is not touched upon Udayana reproduces the arguments of Śrīvatsa here with approval In the next quotation under III n 66 (Tātparyā- p 409) Śrīvatsa finds out a fallacy not detected by Vācaspati and here again Udayana seeks to defend Vācaspati by a simple addendum :—(fol. 18a of the rotograph) नित्यैर्मनःप्रभृतिभिरेवानैकान्तिक-तेषां पुरुषगुणप्रेरितभूतपूर्वकत्वाभावेऽपि पुरुषार्थक्रियासमयेत्वादिति श्रीवत्सः । सत्यं— कार्यत्वे सतीति तु विशेषणाददोषः ॥ In the last quotation under V. ii 1 Śrīvatsa finds fault, this time, with the Sūtrakāra for the absence of compound in the Sūtra and here again Udayana answers his objection : (fol. 16a of Baroda Ms. of chapter V the name of Śrīvatsa is omitted in the rotograph, fol. 7) प्रतिज्ञाहानिरित्याद्यसमासः निष्प्रयोजनः निग्रहस्थानानां परस्परानपेक्षत्वसूचनायेति चेत्—जातिष्वप्येतत्समानमि-

त्यसमासप्रसक्तिरिति श्रीवत्सः । अत्रोत्तरं—समराब्दाभ्यावृत्तौ सूत्रगौरवात् अनाद्वत्तौ संज्ञानुपपत्तेश्च समासः ॥ Whether Udayana has quoted these passages from any written work of Śrīvatsa or from his verbal lessons it is not possible to determine at present. As no quotation of Śrīvatsa is traceable anywhere else up till now it may be conjectured that Śrīvatsa, who presumably like his distinguished pupil belonged to Mithilā, did not write any book.

VĀCASPATI : Wrote the Bhāmātī, one of the classical works of the Śāṅkara school of the Vedānta, towards the end of his life. He mentioned therein all the previous works of his own in the following order :

यन्मयायकणिका-तत्त्वसमीक्षा-तत्त्वचिन्दुभिः ।

यन्मयाय-साख्य-योगानां वेदान्तानां निबन्धनैः ॥

Of these seven works the second Tattvasamīkṣā, a commentary on the pre-Śāṅkara Vedānta work of Maṇḍana named Brahma-siddhi, is lost. The rest raises Vācaspati to a position of supreme authority in all the five systems of Indian philosophy (omitting the Vaiśeṣika which was ignored by him)—a position quite unique in the whole history of Indian culture. We are concerned here only with his Nyāya work, the Tātparyāṭīkā, which earns for him in the field of Indian Logic the title of Ṭīkākāra or better Tātparyācārya,¹ both used by Udayana. His success in this single work was quite extraordinary, as he pushed out of existence all the previous works upon the Bhāṣya or the Vārtika. And it is a long list, as we can gather from recent discoveries.¹ Among those who controverted Buddhist views and wrote commentaries, like Udyotakara, on the Bhāṣya Prīticandra and Bhāviveka preceded Dharmakīrti and Aviddhakarṇa came after him (vide Vādanyāya with comm., 1936, pp. 88, 96, 140 & 142 • also 35, 40, 78, 92 & 109). Durveka mentions three later names Adhyayana, author of the Ruciṭikā (Dharmottarapradīpa, p. 175), Trilocana (pp 173-4) and Viśvarūpa (p. 175). All their works have perished due to Vācaspati's pre-eminence

Vācaspati undoubtedly belonged to Mithilā. We mention two local traditions. According to some he belonged to the village Makaranda in Mithilā.² According to a note left by Chandā Jhā, the famous poet of Mithilā, Vācaspati belonged to the village बडगाम within the Pargana निरशङ्कपुरा now situated in Saharsa district forming the eastern boundary of Darbhanga. There is a couplet of Chandā Jhā, where eight adjacent villages, including Baḍagām, are mentioned as the place of Vācaspati —

बरसम बरइठ बसनही बेलइठ ओ बडगाम ।

बलिया बडिवन बथनहा श्रीवाचस्पतिधाम ॥

The names of all the villages, it is curious to notice, begin with the same letter. Vacaspati's place of origin in Mithilā can be confirmed from internal evidence found in his works. For instance, in the Nyāyakaṇṭhikā (p. 301) as an illustration of an intricate argument occurs the following remarkable passage —
न खलु पाटलिपुत्रे उपलब्धस्य प्रासादस्य शिलाहरे स्मरज्ञभ्रान्तः ।
Silāhrada, which must have been a famous place in Vācaspati's times is difficult to identify now. It was the birth-place of Mādhavakara,

2. Sāhitya-Panṣat-Patrikā, Calcutta, Vol II (1904 A.D.), p. 75. The story of Vācaspati and his wife named Bhāmatī is related in this paper. We are not aware where the village is situated. The next tradition seems to be more reliable.

Dharmottara flourished under King Vanapāla in the middle of the 9th century A D, though Vanapāla is a mythical name coming after the first four or five names of the Pāla dynasty. (Vidyābhūṣana pp 329 & 518 Also Pag Sam, Index, p xxxiv read Vanapāla for Nayapāla) A more definite reference to Dharmottara is found in the Rājataranginī (IV. 498) under the reign of Jayāpīda (circa 800 A.D.) thus —

स स्वप्ने पश्चिमाशायं लक्ष्यन्नुदय रवे ।

देश धर्मोत्तराचार्ये प्रविष्टे साध्वमन्यत ॥

This clear date for both Dharmottara and Mandana cannot be lightly brushed aside. There is evidence that a long period of time, say about a century, intervened between Mandana and Kumārila. Mandana not only quoted exact passages of Kumārila and Prabhākara (and the latter came after Kumārila) but, according to Vācaspati views of an 'old school of Prabhākara' (जरत्प्राभाकरमत) are cited by him (Nyāyakanika pp 96 & 109). Tāranātha, the Tibetan historian, records in a true historical spirit the views of two ancient historians on the exact date of the foundation of the Pāla dynasty by Gopāla I. According to Indradatta Gopāla was elected one year after what must have been a famous event in those times viz the death of 'Āchārya Mīmāṃsaka' ('spyod pa') while according to Ksemendra-bhadra it was seven years after that event (Schiefner, 1869, p. 204) The reference is evidently to Kumārila who died thus in the first or second decade of the 8th century A D Mandana, therefore cannot be placed before 800 A D

There is again a long interval of time between Mandana and Vācaspati. For, in the Nyāyakanikā (p 109) Vacaspati distinguishes between an 'old' and a 'new' school of Prabhākara. The views ascribed in the passage under discussion to the new school are identical with those of Sālikanātha (vide Rjuvimalā, Madras ed. p 37 Chowkh. ed. pp 29-30) who therefore founded a new school of Prabhākara long after Prabhākara and Maṇḍana. He cannot thus be a direct disciple of Prabhākara and was only slightly senior to Vācaspati, who refers to him as 'navīnāḥ'. Sālikanātha's reference to himself as प्रभाकरगुरोः शिष्यः does not mean direct discipleship, as interpreted by most of the scholars, but only affiliation. Śrīdhara similarly refers to Kumārila in the Kandalī as 'Guru' (pp. 248 & 257) and 'Mīmāṃsā-guru' (p. 220). The earliest date that can be assigned to Vācaspati is 900 A. D. about a century after Maṇḍana.

(2) Maṇḍana was an earlier contemporary of Śaṅkarācārya, whose date cannot be placed before 800 A. D. As Vācaspati has refuted the views of Śaṅkara's opponent Bhāskara in the Bhāmati, we cannot place Vācaspati before 900 A. D.

(3) Śrīdhara, the Kandalīkāra was thoroughly acquainted with the works of Maṇḍana (vide Kandalī pp. 218, 256, 271 & 274). He has cited and refuted the views of Maṇḍana in the Vidhiviveka (p. 274 : अवाहितत्वात्तस्य शक्तिरिति vide Vidhiviveka p. 231), but he was quite unacquainted with Vācaspati, who gave here (pp. 231-32) two illuminating interpretations of the particular passage of Maṇḍana. Śrīdhara, moreover, in his famous dissertation on tamas (darkness) quotes two couplets of an unknown author :—(pp. 9-10)

उदुक्तम्—

न च भासामभावस्य समस्त्वं वृद्धसंमतम् ।

छायायाः काव्यव्यमित्वेवं पुराणे भूयुष्मद्वे ॥

दूरासन्नपदेरादिमहदल्पचलाचना ।

देहानुवर्तिनी छाया न वस्तुत्वाद्भिना भवेत् ॥

The same verses are cited by Vācaspati in the Nyāyakaṇḍikā as from अत्रमवान् वार्तिककारः (p. 76) with considerable variation of readings ; there are five lines in Vācaspati as against four lines of the Kandalī. This proves that they drew from independent sources unknown to each other. Śrīdhara refutes at some length the views of the Sāṅkhyas on Satkāryavāda and the ancient verse असत्त्वान्नास्ति संबन्धः is cited there. At a famous Vaidyaka author who is usually claimed as a Bengali and lived about 900-925 A. D.¹ Presumably Vācaspati lived somewhere between Pāṭaliputra in Magadha and Silāhrada in Bengal. There cannot be any doubt that Vācaspati was a native of Eastern India. In the Bhāmati under I, iii. 1 Vacaspati mentions an unusual word 'Hadi' in the following passage — पारावारमध्यपाती हि सेतु ताभ्यामवच्छिद्यमानो जलविधारको लोके दृष्ट न तु बन्धहेतुमात्रम्—हडिनिगहादिष्वपि प्रयोगप्रसङ्गात् । The word is explained in the Kalpataru as a wooden frame with holes to bind criminals by the leg (यत्र तु दाहणि छिद्रिते निग्राह्याणां पादप्रोक्तन तद्वडि) In this peculiar sense the word is still used in Mithilā. The only lexicon where the word occurs is the Sabdamālā of Rāmeśvara (हडि काष्ठस्य यन्त्रणे) from which it was borrowed in Wilson's dictionary and the Śabdakalpadruma. Vācaspati's peculiar verdict (Tatparyatīkā, p 346) on mustard oil, respected in Bengal and Mithilā may also be regarded as a corroboration of his Maithila origin.

VACASPATI'S PATRON At the end of the Bhāmati Vacaspati paid a glowing tribute to a monarch named N R G A, who was reigning when that work was finished. The panegyric in a couple of verses though oft quoted is reproduced below as it requires to be carefully analysed now under a new light.

नृपान्तराणां मनसाप्यगम्या भूतेष्वमात्रेण चकार कीर्तिम् ।

कार्तस्वरासारमुपूरितार्थसार्यं स्वयं शास्त्रविषयक्षेत्रम् ॥५॥

नरेन्द्रा यथरितानुकारमिच्छन्ति कर्तुं न च पारयन्ति ।

यस्मिन् महोपे महनीयसीतौ श्रीमन्-शृणुष्वकारि मया निबन्ध ॥६॥

It appears that this monarch of holy renown has then reached the peak of his glory, his exemplary life providing an unattainable ideal for contemporary kings. There is no direct reference here to his military success which must have ended long ago. The Bhāmati is the last work of Vācaspati. There is an important reference to a reigning monarch in the following passage of his very first work, the Nyāyakanikā (p 290)¹ —यत्र तर्हि क्रियाद्वयं प्रतीयते, यथा निजमुजवीर्यमास्थाय शरानादिशूरो जयति तत्र कथं वास्यार्थस्यैकत्वम् । जयार्थं च जिगीषोरादिशूरस्य निजमुजवीर्याश्रयक्रिया इत्यप्रधानत्वात् वाक्यार्थः —विजयक्रियैव तु प्राधान्यात्तथा ॥ It is tempting to identify this monarch with Ādisūra of Bengal who is credited in all genealogical works of Rādhīya and Vārendra Brahmanas with inviting and settling their first ancestors within his dominions. But all reliable evidence places this Ādisūra of Bengal about 700 A D before the rise of the Pāla dynasty. It is much more probable that Ādisūra like Ādimalla is a honorific title and not a proper name at all. It was apparently assumed by king N R G A when early in his career he was a 'conquering' (जिगीषु) monarch. We heard a tradition in Mithilā that Nrga belonged to the Gupta dynasty. If Ādisūra is taken as his surname he might have belonged to an extinct Sūra' dynasty of Mithilā, a scion of which migrated to East Bengal early in the 14th century.

This brings us to the great problem of his date. The following evidence, which seems to have escaped the notice of eminent scholars places him certainly in the 10th century A D and not before. (1) Vācaspati aligns himself definitely to the school of Mandana both in Mīmāṃsā and Vedānta. In the Nyāyakanikā a commentary on Mandana's Vidhiviveka there is an exact quotation from a Buddhist scholar —(p 187) यथोक्तं भदन्तेन, बुद्धया कल्पितया विविक्तमपरैर्यद्रूपमुल्लिख्यते, तदबुद्धिर्न बहिरिति ॥ The very same quotation is found also in the Tatparyatikā (p. 339) under II ॥ 63 under the caption यथाह भदन्तधर्मोत्तर । Stcherbatsky has shown (Buddhist Logic I p 476 fn & II, p 405 ff) that the quotation is from the Apoḥaprakaraṇa of Dharmottara preserved in Tibetan. According to Vacaspati Mandana was refuting the views of Dharmottara in the original passage of the Vidhiviveka. This makes Mandana a junior contemporary of Dharmottara. According to Tibetan works appear that Śrīdhara was refuting the views of Vācaspati's Tattvakaumudī (under Kārikā 9), where the same old verse is also cited. But a close examination of the passages proves that the exact words cited and refuted by Śrīdhara (e. g. यद्वोक्तम् असद्व्याख्यकरणं व्योमकुसुमवदिति p. 144) do not belong to Vācaspati at all and the ancient verse is already cited in the older work Yuktidīpikā (p. 61). The apologetic words uttered by Śrīdhara at the end of the discussion express his veneration to an unknown scholar certainly different from Vācaspati (अलं वृद्धेऽप्यति-तिरस्केन) Similarly the Kārikā 67 explained in the Kandālī (p. 284) is unaware of Vācaspati's better comment on the word अकारणप्राप्तौ. The three lines of Kumārila cited by Śrīdhara in the chapter on Sāmānya (p. 320) give again a reading somewhat different from that of Vācaspati in the Nyāyakaumudī (p. 188) Śrīdhara quotes (p. 30) a line thus —तथा च प्रायदुपपन्नाद —एकं च चित्रं चेत्तेतत्तच्च चित्रतरं तत् इति । Here again Vācaspati (Tātparyatīkā, p. 454) adopts a different reading. All these point to the inevitable conclusion that Śrīdhara and Vācaspati were close contemporaries and did not consult each other's works. They both belonged therefore, to the last half of the 10th century A. D.

(4) Trilocana preceded Bhāsarvajña as we have stated above. (p. 16) Trilocana's pupil Vācaspati was evidently junior to Bhāsarvajña. For, in the Tātparyatīkā (pp. 280-81 under II. i. 39) Vācaspati meets an argument ascribed in the Līlāvātī (p. 283) to Bhūṣana i. e. Bhāsarvajña, author of the Nyāya-bhūṣana. Similarly Vācaspati was slightly junior to Vyomaśiva (q. v.), who wrote the Vyomaśatī about 950 A. D. Here again Vācaspati's close contemporaneity with Śrīdhara, who knew Vyomaśiva (and Bhāsarvajña), is confirmed.

(5) The earliest Buddhist scholar to refer to Vācaspati is, at the present state of our knowledge, Jñānārī (q. v.), who is followed by his pupil Ratnakīrti and a much later author.

Mokṣākara gupta (vide the latter's Tarkabhāṣā, G. O. S., p. 24). Vācaspati is not mentioned even by so late an author as Durveka Miśra, who was a disciple of Jitāri and thus a co-pupil of Atiśa. Two of Durveka's works have been published, the Arcaṭāloka (G. O. S) and the Dharmottarapradīpa (Patna, 1955). The sneering remarks of Jñānaśrī towards Vācaspati, as reproduced by Ratnakīrti and Udayana, prove that they were not separated by a large length of time. It now appears that Ratnakīrti adopted a strictly chronological order when citing the views of Śāṅkara, Trilocana, Nyāyabhūṣaṇa and, last of all, Vācaspati in the Kṣaṇabhaṅgasiddhi (B I. ed pp. 57-58). Jñānaśrī was living still in 1041 A. D. and Vācaspati, the last and the greatest target of his attack, cannot certainly be placed before the 10th century A. D.

(6) Among Hindu scholars the earliest to quote from Vācaspati is Udayana's teacher Śrīvatsa (q. v.), who must have been strictly a contemporary of Jñānaśrī, the period of activity of both of them can now be confidently placed in the first half of the 11th century A.D. (1000-1050 A.D.).

(7) The cumulative effect of all the above evidences can no longer be doubted. It is simply impossible now to refer the date 898 found in Vācaspati's Nyāyasūcimbādhā to the Vikrama era corresponding to 841-42 A.D. This small tract of Vācaspati was evidently meant as a supplement to the Tātparyatīkā, as it is not mentioned separately among his works enumerated in the Bhāmati. It was thus composed along with his masterpiece the Tātparyatīkā in 898 Śaka i. e. 976-77 A. D. —a date which must have been very near the birth-dates of Jñānaśrī and Śrīvatsa, both of whom might have seen Vācaspati alive in their early youth. If the books were composed in 841-42 A. D. Vācaspati's literary activity must be taken to have commenced about 825 A. D., full two centuries before Jñānaśrī wielded his powerful pen for the first time among Buddhist scholars to meet his arguments. On the other hand we must huddle together all the host of brilliant scholars that preceded Vācaspati just within half a century—Maṇḍana, Śaṅkara, Bhāsarvajña, Trilocana, Śāhkanātha, Vyomaśiva &c. &c. On the face of it is an absurdity.

JINENDRA: Towards the end of the Ātmatattvavivēka Udayana mentions the names of several Buddhist scholars branding each of them with one or other of several stigmas. Some of the names are new and cannot be identified e. g. Sarabha, Kāṇācārya and Subhūti. The two scholars Jinendra and Jagadindu¹ though outside the Brahmanical Society, had written books which are universally respected; in other words their religion did not stand in the way of their proper appreciation. This Jinendra is identical with Jinendrabuddhi (as stated by the commentator Nārāyaṇācārya), the famous author of the Kāśikāvivāḥanapañjikā, commonly known as the Nyāsa, a classical work of the Pāṇini school of grammar. This huge work has been fully printed by the Rajshahi Museum and throws much new light on the problems connected with the composition of the Kāśikā. After a thorough examination of all available materials we had come to the conclusion that Jinendra lived in 800-850 A. D.² The facts are very briefly stated. Jayāditya wrote a complete Vṛtti about 650 A. D. Vāmana, a Brahmanic scholar, revised the last three chapters not earlier than 700 A. D. This combined work, known as the Kāśikā, was explained by Jinendra not earlier than 800 A. D. for, Jinendra had referred to previous commentaries even on the later portion of Vāmana.

This same Jinendrabuddhi had written a large commentary (the Tibetan version consisting of 349 leaves) named

1 DV Raghavan suggests that he may be identical with Joindu, Jain Antiquary

2 Introd to Paribhāṣavṛtti &c of Puruṣottama published by the Varendra Research Society, Rajshahi, 1946, pp 25

Viśālāmalavati on Dignāga's Pramāṇasamuccaya Vidyabhūṣana (l. c p 323) gives his date as about 725 A. D., when Vāmana's portion of the Kāśikā was not yet written or circulated. According to Durveka Miśra the following passage of Arcata (who was identical with Dharmākara-datta vide pp. 233, 261 & 410) refers to Jinendra's gloss upon Dignāga —(Baroda ed., 1949, p 218)

यदा ह्याचार्यस्याप्येतदभिमतमिति कैश्चिद् व्याख्यायते ।
कैश्चिद् ईश्वरसेनजिनेन्द्रबुद्धिभूतिभिः (ib p. 405)

This piece of evidence proves that Arcata (and Dharmottara) cannot be dated before 800 A. D.

DHARMOTTARA one of the greatest Buddhist authorities after Dharmakīrti. He is cited both by Vācaspati and Śrīdhara (q v). In the Ātmatattvavivēka, according to the interpretation of Śāṅkara Miśra, Udayana had refuted Dharmottara in one place (B I. ed p 296). The actual passage of Dharmottara has been quoted by Śāṅkara. Dharmottara flourished according to the Rajataranginī (IV. 498) in the reign of Jayāpīḍa of Kasmīra (c. 800 A. D.). This date is corroborated by the references in the Arcatāloka (Baroda, 1249). Arcata identical with Dharmākara-datta (ib., pp 232, 241 & 410) was the teacher of Dharmottara according to Tibetan evidence (Intro p xi). At any rate Dharmottara undoubtedly came after Archata (vide Durveka's comm. pp 240, 242-3, 377). According to Durveka (p 405) Archata has referred to Jinendrabuddhi in one place (p 218) and Jinendra (q v.) cannot be placed before 800 A. D. Dharmottara must, therefore, be placed in the first half of the 9th century A.D. as the Tibetan historians recorded.

PRAJÑĀKARA cited by Udayana in the Pañśuddhi (pp 667-8 & 730). The verse cited is evidently from Prajñākara's masterpiece the Pramāṇavārtikālaṅkāra. Udaya in the Ātmatattvavivēka (B. I ed , p 907) has recorded the important tradition about Prajñākara that like Dharmakīrti he was driven out from the orthodox Brahmanic society and had no other way but to accept Buddhism Tibetan historians place him in the 10th century A D (Vidyabhusana I, c. p 336)

MAHĀVRATA In the Kusumāñjali Udayana in his discussion on ksanikatva (Stavaka IV, p 17) has cited and refuted the views of the 'followers of Mahāvratā' (महाव्रतीया) In the first Stavaka also in the context of Kārikā 12 (p 57) the views of Mahāvratā have been criticised according to the interpretation of Varadarāja (p 31) who cites the following verse of Mahāvratā thereon

कुसुमे बीजपूरादेर्यज्ञाद्याद्यवसिच्यते ।

शक्तिराधीयते तेन काचित्ता किं न पर्यसि ॥

The Nyāyalilāṣṭaṭī of Śrīvallabhācārya quotes the same verse in a brilliant passage which is an elaboration of Udayana's words with an additional half verse from Mahāvratā in the section on Samskara (pp. 647 48)

मृदमपि विप कश्चिन्मन्त्र करोति नियोजित ।

सृजति तदसौ काचिच्छक्तिं मृदोऽतिविमोहिनीम् ॥

Mahāvratā is also cited in Bhavanātha's Nayavivēka (Madras ed , p 273) There is an important quotation from Mahāvratā in M M. Chandra's Amṛtabindu (Ms. No III F. 149 of Asiatic Society, fol 45a) which ends —अतएव ब्राह्म्यतापरिहारोऽध्ययनकृते प्रयोजनमिति महाव्रत । Kṛṣṇa Miśra in his allegorical drama Prabodha-chandrodaya paints Mr Pride (Ahamkāra') as well read in the advanced courses of studies then prevailing in Eastern India , of the six classical works mentioned (Act II, v. 3) 'Māhāvratī' is the last of all All the works belong to the Bhaṭṭa and Prabhākara schools of the Mīmāṃsā According to the well informed commentator of the drama Nāṇḍilla Gopa, Mahāvratā belonged to the Bhaṭṭa school and was a rival of the Prabhākara scholar Mahodadhī who was a class mate of Śāṅka nātha and the author of a treatise named Siddhāntarahasya (महान्तो भट्टमतानुवर्त्तो महोदधिप्रतिस्पर्द्धी) All the four scholars Śālika, Mahodadhī, Vācaspati and Mahāvratā thus belonged to about the same age. It is our conjecture, however, that the commentator has confused the affiliation of the two scholars Mahodadhī and Mahāvratā. Mahodadhī belonged to the Bhatta school as he had refuted the well-known 'Anvitābhīdhāna' theory of the Prabhākara school (vide Nayaviveka, p. 271) Mahāvratā, therefore, belonged to the Prabhākara school and as a consequence he was cited with approval by M.M. Chandra, who was an authority of the Prabhākara school and referred in his work to the classics of his own school alone.

ŚĀṆKARĀCĀRYA This logician should be carefully distinguished from the great founder of the Advaita Vedānta. He was the earliest among orthodox scholars of Nyāya whose views were refuted by the Buddhist scholars Jñānāsiri (q. v) and his pupil Ratnakīrti mention his name first of all, suggesting that he preceded both Trilocana and Bhāsarvajña who are named next to him. Ratnakīrti has preserved the name of one of his works the Sthirasiddhi from which a passage has been cited in the Sthirasiddhiduṣana (Patna ed. p. 108) Vācaspati in the Tātparyatikā has referred to him as stated by Udayana in the Parīsuddhi. The passages are cited below

अस्यौगपदाभ्यामतिरिक्तं तृतीयं प्रकारः प्रतीतश्चेत् प्रतीतत्वादेव न निषेध्यः न चेत् नतरामिति शङ्कराचार्यः । सगृह—तथा हीति । (under III. ii. 17 ; Tātparya, p. 387, line 14)

ननु नानयोरेव क्रमाक्रमयोमिश्रीभावः प्रकारान्तरमाशङ्कितं शङ्कराचार्येण क्वित्वन्यदेव निचिदनुनयात्मकं भविष्यति । यथा परैरस्मदभिहिते स्वाभाविके प्रतिबन्धे पिशाचायमानः कश्चिदुपाधिरिति । तदुत्थाप्य दूषयति—स्यादेतदिति । (ib , p. 387, last line : both from fol. 12b of the third chap. of the Parīsuddhi preserved in rotograph in the Mithilā Institute) Both the passages are evidently taken from the Sthirasiddhi of Śaṅkara.

It should be noticed that Vācaspati criticises Śaṅkara's argument in the last case ननु विकल्प्य शङ्कराचार्येण दूषितमेतत्—नोलादीनामप्रतिपत्तावाग्रयासिद्धतया प्रतिपत्तौ धर्मिप्राद्वक्प्रमाणबाधितयेत्यत आह नोलादयो हीति । (fol. 38b of a Ms in our possession under IV ii. 35, vide Tātparya, p. 465, line 11).

This passage also seems to have been taken from the *Sthiraśiddhi*¹

Sankarācārya is also cited in the Nyāyaparīkṣiṣṭa (p. 17) as the head of a band of scholars differing from the Bhāṣyavārtikaschool.

This Śaṅkara should also be distinguished from the earlier Śaṅkara Svāmīn referred to in Jayanta's Nyāyamajjari (p. 293) and other works.

ŚĀLIKANĀTHA According to Vardhamāna the following passage in the Kīranāvalī under the interesting topic of the ocular organ being made up of light or not, cited and refuted by Udayana, refers to Śālika.

केचित्तु सत्सर्गिद्रव्यतया नि सरदेव नायनं तेजो बाह्यालोकेनैकता गतं युगपदेव तावदर्थेन सत्सृष्टमिन्द्रियमुत्पादितवदिति शाखाचन्द्रमसोस्तुल्यकालमहणमुपपद्यत इति समाधानमाहुः । तदसत् । (Chowkh ed., p 75, B I ed., p 288) Vardhamāna notes in the Dravyaprakāśa शालिकमतं दूषयितुमुपन्यस्यति । (Vangīya Sāhitya Parisat Ms. No. 1649, fol. 42a)

The passage is very important, as pointing to the interesting fact, hitherto unknown, that Śālikanātha commented on the Prāśastapādabhāṣya This is clearly stated by Chennubhaṭṭa in the Tarkabhāṣāprakāśikā (Bombay ed., p 211) where another passage is cited —सृष्टिरहपापाणादिलक्षण. शरीरेन्द्रियव्यतिरिक्तो विषय इति शालिकनाथ प्रशस्तपादभाष्यव्याख्याने न्यरूपयत् । The Rasasāra

1 Some Lost Nyaya Works and Authors —Proceedings, AIOC, Ahmedabad

(pp. 100-1) also quotes him upon Praśastapāda. Moreover, as is now well-known, Udayana's twitting reference to a 'Gauḍa' Mīmāṃsaka, who confounds verses from the Manu-saṃhitā as Vedic texts (!), is according to Varadarāja's note (p. 123) a fling at the 'Pañcikākāra' (i.e. Śālikanātha). Under the same topic (Kusumāñjali, Chap. III) Udayana in his own brilliant manner answers Śālikanātha directly with the change of a single word (आप्तानाम् in place of पदानाम्) in the latter's verses. —

प्राथम्यादभिधायत्वात्तात्पर्योपगमादपि ।

आप्तानामेव सा शक्तिर्वैरमभ्युपगम्यताम् ॥

(vide Varadarāja's Kusumāñjalibodhanī, 1922, p. 127). Śāliknātha was the greatest authority of the Prabhākara school of the Mīmāṃsā. He wrote three Pañcikās, the Rjuvimalā (on the Bṛhatī of Prabhākara), the Dipāśikhā (on the Laghvī), and the standard work of the school, the Prakaranapañcikā, besides a Bhāṣyapariśiṣṭa. His works, though written in Bengal, circulated quickly throughout India. He preceded Vācaspati (q. v.). The following humorous verse is current about him in South India —

शालिकनाथवम्बूदो न जातो न जनिष्यते ।

प्रभाकरप्रकाशाय येन दीपशिखा कृता ॥

BRĀHMAKARA the famous exponent of the Dvaitādvaita theory of the Vedānta. He has been cited by Udayana in the Kusumāñjali (II, p. 67 : ब्रह्मपरिणतेरिति भास्करगोत्रे बुज्यते Vardhamāna notes भास्करस्त्रिदण्डिममतभाष्यकारः). It is well-known that in his Bhāṣya, published at Varanasi, he refuted Śaṅkarācārya and the views of the Buddhist scholar Dharmakīrti, whom he calls 'Vipra-Bhikṣu' (p. 123). His views have been cited and criticised by Vācaspati in the Bhāmātī

BRŪṢAṆA : i. e. Bhāsarvajña, author of the Nyāyabhūṣaṇa a commentary on his own Nyāyasāra. The book, which is almost indispensable for studies on the history of Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika literature, remains yet to be published, though it was discovered long ago in a Jaina library beyond the reach of scholars (Ganakāṅkā, Baroda ed, Introd p. 1). As long ago as 1859 A. D., Hall knew (Index, p 26) that the Bhūṣana was a work of Bhāsarvajña, though there was much confusion later on. Udayana cited and refuted the Bhūṣana several times in the Kīranāvalī. All the passages are interesting and are, therefore, reproduced below

(1) यत् पुनराह भूषणो—लघुणं चिह्नं लिङ्गमिति पर्याय इति, तदसत् ।
(Chowkh ed., p 43)

(2) तस्माद्भवं भूषण—कर्माणि गुणस्तद्वत्तत्त्वयोगादिति, न । (ib., p. 160).

(3) एतेन स्वरूपाभेद एवत्वं स्वरूपभेदस्तु नानात्वं द्वित्वमिति भूषणः प्रत्याख्यात । (ib., p 192).

(4) व्यधिकरणमपि कर्मैव विनाशकमस्तु । न चातिप्रसङ्गः, आश्रयाश्रित-परम्परासंयोगस्यैव विनाशकत्वात् । न इति भासर्वज्ञमतनिरासः । (ib., p. 232 . compare Līlāvati p. 856).

None of the above passages is traceable in the Nyāyasāra; so they were all taken from the Nyāyabhūṣana, a discursive work of great celebrity which earned for the author the epithet Bhūṣanakāra, by which he was almost universally known. The earliest writer, as far as can be ascertained from the present materials, who grappled with his views was the Buddhist scholar Jñānaśrī. The four great 'pillars' of Indian Logic (probably coming from four different quarters) were, according to Jñānaśrī, Śaṅkara 'Nyāyālaṅkāraṇa', Trilocana and Vācaspati. For exigency of metre, the Bhūṣana ■ mentioned by a synonym and before Trilocana. In the body of the books of Jñānaśrī and his disciple Ratnakīrti (q v) the name Nyāyabhūṣana ■ clearly given and correctly placed after Trilocana and before Vācaspati. Bhāsarvajña, who very probably belonged to Kāsmīra, was slightly junior to Trilocana and slightly senior to Vācaspati and lived about the middle of the 10th century A D¹. It is known that in the Bhūṣaṇa the views of the Buddhist scholar Prajñākara are controverted. (Introduction to Ganakārikā).

UDAYANA'S PRE-EMINENCE Udayana through his numerous works secured a position in the learned world which was quite enviable. From the 12th century onwards he was looked upon as the greatest exponent of the Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika doctrines and was the greatest target of all scholars of the opposing camps. Deva Sūri (1086-1169 A D.), a foremost Jaina logician drew up a sharp contrast between Udayana and the Kasmīran Jayanta, both of them being his targets of attack. He wrote —

यदत्र शक्तिसंसिद्धौ मञ्जत्युदयनद्विप ।

जयन्त इन्त का तत्र गणना त्वयि कौटके ॥

(Syādvadaratnākara, Chap II)

Udayana's discourse on the Nyāya theory of causation and explanation of the term 'Śakti' involved in it is found in the Kusumāñjali (I, pp. 63-64). There is a magnificent pen-picture of Udayana found at the end of the first chapter of the Parīśuddhi which is cited below in full. It was probably written by an admirer who actually saw him alive.

How Udayana's name was respected highly even in hostile camps would be clear from the following illustration. The great polymath Venkatanātha (1268-1369 A. D.) of the Rāmānuja school wrote the Nyāyaparisuddhi, the bulk of which is taken up by an elaborate treatment of the Anumāna part (Chowkh. ed., pp 92-359), more specially of the subject of debate. Unlike Gaṅgeśa Venkatanātha has dealt with all the different classes of debate (Vāda, Jalpa and Vitandā) and the intricate divisions of fallacies and quibbles. He has quoted profusely from the works of his predecessors of the Rāmānuja school, who it appears grappled with the problems thoroughly and in a highly developed system of their own. The influence of Gaṅgeśa can nowhere be traced, but Udayana's influence is clearly stamped in their views. The celebrated line of the Kusumāñjali, परस्परविरोधे न प्रकारान्तरस्थिति [III 8] is accepted as an universal maxim (p 133) Udayana, referred to as Nyāyācārya (p 220), gave the best definition of the term Jāti (लक्ष्युक्तमम् p. 221), according to Venkatanātha. A former scholar Varadavisnūmisra had dealt with the classes of Jāti just according to Udayana (यथोदयनं p. 235), who was thus formally regarded as the supreme authority on the subject. His well-known views on the term Tarka (sharply criticised by Śrīharṣa) are respectfully cited (p 327)

Among the manuscripts upon which the Varanasi edition of the Kiraṇāvālī is based the scribe of one (Ms No. 3 dated 1506 Śaka) eulogises Udayana in the following elegant verse, where he has been likened to an incarnation of Śiva, the god of learning

मेक गभीरनयवत्त्वविवेकसिन्धो ।

दोषाकरादपि विविच्य कला भजन्त-

UDAYANA AND GANGEŚA There is hardly any topic dealt with in the four grand divisions of Gangeśa's work which had not been already argued by Udayana in his main works and specially in the Kusumāñjali. It is only in the method and mode of expression that Gangeśa excelled over Udayana, whose prominent theistic background had to give place to subtleties of argument in course of time. The Īśvaravāda portion of Gangeśa failed completely to oust the Kusumāñjali, which held its own through almost a millenium. When Vyāsatīrtha the giant scholar of South India of the Mādhva community, grappled with the doctrines of Navyanyāya in the Tarkatāṇḍava, he preferred in many places Udayana against Gangeśa (vide Tarkatāṇḍava, Madras ed I pp. 148, 286 & 377) In fact his commentator Rāghavendratīrtha distinctly wrote in one place (p 148) that Vyāsatīrtha controverted in the Prāmanyavāda (Utpattiṭprakaraṇa) the 'older' argument of Udayana because Gangeśa only embellished that argument with subtleties but could not give any new or original one of his own. Similarly the Upamāna part of Gangeśa practically became extinct as no scholar of any renown in Mithilā and Bengal (with the single exception of Pragalbha) ever commented on it. In its place the corresponding portion of the Kusumāñjali (chap. III) commended itself for studies in the Nyāya seminaries Chinnabhaṭṭa

(p. 160) expressly recommended the Kusumāñjali on the question of Upamāna as a separate means of valid knowledge.

Vardhmāna in his several commentaries on Udayana has indicated the problems where his father Gaṅgeśa excelled in arguments. Here are a few references. In the Kusumāñjali, Chapter I, there is an elaborate discussion on the much debated term 'Śakti', here Vardhmāna reproduced three passages of Gaṅgeśa (pp 45, 48 & 51). In the second chapter Vardhmāna elucidated the text of Udayana on the favourite topic of Prāmānya, Śabdanityatā and Jātiśakti with long and illuminating passages of Gaṅgeśa (pp 8 11, 36-37 & 47 49). There are very many passages of Gaṅgeśa cited by Vardhmāna in the Nibandhprākāśa. Gaṅgeśa therefore cannot be separated from the moorings of Navyanyāya which were first laid down by Udayana in his major works specially the Nibandha and Kusumāñjali. As a matter of fact Gaṅgeśa himself displayed his utmost veneration for Udayana by quoting his words in almost every section of his large work. Among the predecessors of Gaṅgeśa by far the largest number of references belongs to Udayana. Some of these are pointed out below.

In the very first section (Mangalavāda) of the Pratyakṣa part there is an exact quotation from the Dravyakīranāvalī of Udayana (B I ed, p 72 vide Kīranāvalī, Chowkh ed p 3). In the next section (Prāmānyavāda) a well known Kārikā of the Kusumāñjali (IV. 1) on the definition of Pramā is cited (p 366) and it is interesting to note that Udayana is given the flattering epithet 'Tantrika' here. In the same section there is a quotation from the Bauddhādḥkara (p 424). There are three references to 'Ācāryāḥ' towards the end (pp 750 834 & 845). Gaṅgeśa's veneration for Udayana is best displayed in the section on Nirvikalpa (pp 834-38) where after citing and refuting the views of Sivāditya Gaṅgeśa formulated his final views on the topic under discussion on the basis of an exact quotation from the Guṇakīranāvalī (Chowkh ed , pp. 201-2), which he fully explained in the manner of a regular commentator.

In the Anumāna part, it is well-known that Udayana's definition of the term Vyāpti and its component Upādhi has been explained by Gangeśa in the Pūrvapakṣa section (pp 77-79 vide, Kusumāñjali III 2) Udayana's definition of Upādhi is also critically reviewed under Upādhivāda (pp 312-13) For other references to Ācārya in this part vide pp 593, 684, 888 (from the Nibandha) and 934 : Udayana could not be superseded by Gangeśa at all in the Īśvaravāda and Upamāna part In the Śabda part we need only refer to the long and illuminating passage of Udayana with which Gangeśa concludes the section on Vidhivāda (pp 284 ff) It need hardly be told that there are many other anonymous passages of Gangeśa which are taken from Udayana. Commentators, specially Sārvabhauma trace the source in many places (vide Sārvabhauma's Anumānamanipariṅśā, foll. 53b 110b 139a & 161a for the passages referred to vide B I ed., pp 166, 380 531 & 599 respectively)

UDAYANA AND ŚŪNHRSA Owing to decay of Buddhism in India and the consequent degeneration of Buddhist scholarship specially in the field of Nyāya studies Udayana's powerful onslaught against the Buddhist doctrines produced no effect in the Buddhist camp As far as we are aware no Buddhist scholar attempted to meet the arguments of Udayana whose triumph in the controversy was almost unparalleled It is a significant fact that the Buddhist logicians for almost a millenium quarelled with the orthodox logicians alone and their opposition to the other schools of Indian philosophy is quite negligible In the works of Jñānaśrī and Ratnakīrti, for instance, no Prābhākara and Vedānta author is ever mentioned or refuted. There is much truth in the assertion that in certain fundamental doctrines the Buddhist and the Vedāntin sail in the same boat Chinnabhaṭṭa explains a passage of the Tarkabhāṣā as referring to सौगतब्रह्मवादिनौ (p 250), whose views are summarised in two interesting Kārikās. It is nothing surprising, therefore, that within a century after Udayana, a most powerful and scathing criticism of the Nyāya doctrines emerged from the pen of a Vedānta scholar. In the Khandanakhandakhāḍya of Śrīharsa the logician's method of fixing and defining the categories with formidable precision was assailed in such a devastating manner that it was hailed throughout India as a novel contribution in the field of dialectics. Śrīharsa's method of argument earned a special name as 'Khandanayukti' and what is a most wonderful fact the Khandana, as Śrīharsa's work is commonly called, came to be regarded as one of the classical works of Navynyāya.

Śrīharsa was a 'Gauda' (i e a native of Bengal) as categorically stated by Vidyapati in the Purusaparīkṣā (under Medhavikatha बभूव गौडविषये श्रीहर्षो ना कविपरिहित) and Vācaspati at the end of the Khandanoddhāra. The exact relation between Udayana and Śrīharsa should be carefully determined, as they are the two towering figures that dominated dialectics in Eastern India for about three centuries before the work of Gaṅgeśa came to the forefront. Both the Khandana and the Naisadha were written at the court of Kanyakubja and it is sometimes argued that Śrīharsa also was a native of Kanyakubja. We have collected elsewhere (I H Q XXII pp 144 46) quite a volume of evidence both internal and external to prove that Vidyāpati's statement about the provenance of Śrīharsa is undoubtedly correct. Use of the word ulūlu' (Naisadha XIV 51) udayabhāskara' (XVIII 103) and the familiar name of a top still current in Bengal 'laladdimba' (XXII 53) mention of peculiar marriage customs prevalent in Bengal, indiscriminate use in alliteration of the three sibilants the two nasals etc. and above all Śrīharsa's writing a panegyric of the family of a Gauda king (गौडोर्वीरशकुलप्रशस्ति VII. 110) betray unmistakably his Bengal origin, which is attested by many of his commentators like Cāṇḍū Paṇḍita, Īśānadeva and Nārāyaṇa. Udayana was controverted, therefore, not by a 'Pāścātya' but by a 'Gauḍa' and this is quite in the fitness of things when we recollect that Bengal's rivalry with Mithilā was more pronounced from ancient times than with any other province.

The Khaṇḍana criticises Udayana directly and right through, though the name of Udayana is not actually mentioned anywhere in the book. The very first definition of valid knowledge attacked by Śrīharsa is तत्त्वानुमूति प्रमा and this again is the very first sentence of Udayana's Lakṣaṇamālā, as correctly stated by Śaṅkara Miśra (Varanasi ed. of the Śāṅkari, pp. 143-44). Śrīharsa's wonderful scrutiny of the two-worded phrase is a specimen of his profound scholarship (Chowkh. ed. with Vidyāsāgarī, pp. 239-397). The next two definitions—यथार्थानुभवः प्रमा (ib., pp. 397-411) and सम्यक्परिच्छेद प्रमा (pp. 411-27) attacked by Śrīharṣa are exactly taken from Udayana's Kusumāñjali (IV. 1 & 5).

A Jaina scholar Abhayatilakopādhyāya, as we have stated before (p. 2, fn.), wrote a book of moderate length named Nyāyāḷankāra, consisting of notes on the knotty passages of the five great classics of Nyāya including last of all, Udayana's Parīśudhī.¹ According to Ānandapūrṇa (p. 129) a passage of the Nyāyāḷankāra is cited and refuted by Śrīharṣa न्यायालङ्कार-मन्थेऽनिरचनोयदूपणं यदभाणि तदनुवदति। At the end of the passage a line of Udayana's Kusumāñjali is quoted in support (III. 8 : परस्परविरोधे हि न प्रकारान्तरमिति Śrīharṣa thus not only criticised Udayana alone but many of his followers also and this is very

1. Gunaratna in his Saddarśanasamuccayavṛtti enumerated the works of the Nyāyadarśana (B. I ed., p. 94). His description is slightly incorrect, the name Śrīkantha (whose Tippanaka on the वचस्पृशान has been discovered) should come last of all after Abhayatilaka, whose authorship of the Nyāyāḷankāra is proved by recent discoveries much in evidence throughout the Khandana. Unfortunately the scholiasts do not specify them, except in this single instance Udayana has been criticised in many other places (vide pp. 705, 747, 1327 etc). The most interesting passage is the one, so often reproduced by scholars, where Śrīharsa answers Udayana by hurling the latter's own words in the Kusumāñjali (III 7) against him in a slightly changed form —(Khandana, p 693)

तत्मादत्माभिरप्यस्मिन्नर्थे न सतु दुष्पठा ।

त्वद्गायैवायथाकारमक्षराणि कियन्त्यपि ॥

व्याघातो यदि शङ्कास्ति न चेच्छङ्का ततस्तराम् ।

व्यापातापधिराशङ्का तर्क शङ्कावधि कुत ॥

(Khandana, op cit p 693)

It has been one of the favorite topics of students of logic Gangeśa answered Śrīharsa in the section on Tarka (Anumāna, B I ed p 233) and all scholiasts up to Gadādhara have delightfully dealt with the age-old conflict of Udayana and Śrīharsa

We refer to two other typical passages of the Khandana where Udayana is subjected to detailed criticism. In the second chapter Udayana's arguments for rejection of erroneous theories (अपसिद्धान्त) are cited from the Pañsuddhi (pp 1018-19 Ānantapūrṇa notes तात्पर्यपरिशुद्धौ . उदयनोक्तं दूषयितुमुपन्यस्यति) Śrīharsa's counter arguments go to the end of the chapter Udayana is referred to here as कश्चित्. In the last chapter (pp 1170-76) a long passage is cited from the Ātmātattvaviveka (B. I ed pp 1170-1200) and refuted at length. All these place Udayana in the position of the greatest opponent whom Śrīharsa wanted to meet by arguments.

Śrīharsa's popularity Śrīharsa's great achievement was naturally hailed by the Vedāntists Vidyāranya triumphantly wrote in the Pañcadāśī

निरुक्तावभिमानं ये दधते तर्किकादयः ।

हर्षमिश्रादिभिस्ते तु खण्डनादौ सुशिक्षिताः ॥

Its reception in the land of Udayana is a great revelation. Many Navyanyāya scholars of Mithilā (and Bengal) came to scoff at it but remained to pray. Divākaropādhyāya, Vardhamāna, Śāṅkara Miśra and even so late an author as Gokulanātha had written commentaries on it. So did Pragalbha, Padmanābha Miśra and Raghunātha (Vidyālaṅkāra) of Bengal. Vardhamāna attempted a refutation of it also, but it is completely lost. Vācaspati II and Śāṅkara, it is true, wrote powerful refutations. They were followed by two late scholars, Mādhava Miśra of Mithilā and Viśvanātha Pañchānana of Bengal. But on the whole the refutation of Śrīharṣa's arguments at the hands of the Nyāya scholars of Mithilā and Bengal is somewhat half-hearted and considerably out-weighted by their agreeable studies of those arguments.

This raises the problem of Vedāntic influence upon Udayana and other advocates of the uncompromising dualism of the Nyāya. It is now well known that Udayana at the end of the Ātmatattvaviveka attempted a remarkable and powerful synthesis of all the orthodox systems of philosophy and, though orthodox Nyāya scholars emphasise upon the exact gradation of the systems as envisaged by Udayana the crowning glory remaining with the Nyāya, Udayana's predilection towards the Vedānta cannot be brushed aside lightly. Phrases like सा चावस्था न हेया मोक्षनगरगोपुरायमाख्यत्वात् from the pen of Udayana speak out his real mind. Maheśa Thakkura, one of the later glories of Mithilā, similarly expressed his veneration for the Vedāntic principles. The Navyanyāya, as a matter of fact, concerned itself more and more, as time went on, with the method of grappling with problems, not so much with the matter and Śrīharṣa's method of vanquishing opponents consequently appealed to its votaries. An agreeable approach to the opponent's views is in evidence even in the times of Vācaspati, when the conflict with the Buddhist scholars was at its height. His application of the epithet 'Tāyin' of undoubted Buddhist origin to Aksapāda in the second prayer verse of the Tātparyatikā is quite revealing.

Date of Śrīharsa is intimately related to that of Udayana and we shall discuss the problem at this place with up-to-date materials. Śrīharsa's date can be fixed within narrow limits from the following evidence. Towards the end of the Khandana (p 1327) he respectfully mentions the name of the (Kāśmīrian) rhetorician Mahimabhaṭṭa in the following verse

दोष व्यक्तिविवेकेऽमु कपिलोकविलोचने ।

काव्यमीमांसिषु प्राप्तमहिमा महिमाऽऽहृत ॥

Mahimabhaṭṭa who came after Abhinavagupta (1015 A.D.) and before Mammata (c 1100 A.D.) must have been living about 1050 A.D. and was probably a native of Kāśmīra. The earliest date that can therefore be assigned to Śrīharsa is 1075 A.D. This dismisses any attempt (cf IA 1913 p 83) to place Śrīharsa earlier. On the other hand the earliest author who quoted from Śrīharsa's Naisadhacanta is Mahendra Sūri a disciple of the famous Jaina polymath Hemacandra (1088-1172 A.D.). In his commentary on the Anekarthasangraha of Hemacandra he quoted many passages of the Naisadha as illustrations, e.g. under II 18 (p 8 of extracts from the commentary in Zachariae's edn 1893) II 56 (p 13) II 274 (p 43) II 299 (p 47) II 303 (ibid) II 527 (p 77) IV 155 (p 173) and IV 339 (p 184). This commentary which was published in the name of the author's teacher Hemacandra was written soon after the latter's death (ibid Preface p XIII). Śrīharsa, as a native of Bengal and a protégé of the king of Kanyakubja could not be supposed to have commanded the respects of foremost scholars of Western India unless he was at least an exact contemporary of Mahendra's guru Hemacandra or slightly senior to him. None of the authorities cited by Mahendra as far as can be ascertained belong to the latter half of the 12th century A. D. Śrīharsa must, therefore, have written his works in the second quarter (1225-50 A. D.) of the century during the reign of Govindacandra of Kannauj (1104-54 A. D.), whose patronage of the poet is definitely stated by a commentator named Gadādhara¹. Śrīharsa, probably, started his literary career with small tracts like Amarakhandanam (Madras Ms. No. R 1595) and Dvurupakosa (ibid. R 1607) with a view to enrich his vocabulary. Ksīrasvāmin, in his commentary on the *Amarkosa*², quotes a line from Śrīharsa sanghāta-mṛtyur-marako manirmāri ca devatā (II, 6 58). This is evidently from the Dvurupakosa or a similar work of the poet. Ksīrasvāmin was quoted by Vardhamāna in the Ganaratnamahodadhi (Eggeling's edn, pp 306 and 430), which was composed in 1140 A. D. These early tracts of Śrīharsa will have, therefore, to be assigned to the first decade of the century in the very beginning of reign of Govindacandra. It is possible that the poet in his very old age enjoyed the patronage of Vijayacandra (1169 A. D.) and Jayacandra, the son and grandson of Govindacandra. But the statement of Rājasekhara Sūri that the poet wrote in the reign of the latter prince need not be taken as literally true. Rājasekhara could not correctly record the name and relation of Jayacandra in the Prabandhakosa. Besides the Naisadha and the Khandana, Śrīharsa is known to have written many more works, mentioned by himself at the end of the several cantos of his poem. One of them is the Sthairyavicāra mentioned at the end of Canto IV of the Naisadha. It appears that the editor of a Vedānta work Brahmaṇḍabhaṭṭanam (published at Kumbakonam) had access to copies of this long lost work, from which he cited in the short introduction the following important (introductory) verse

1 S. N. Bhandarkar Rep. of a Second Tour in search of Sans. Mss., 1907, pp 43 & 87 88 इति ह ध्रुवते अयस्यस्यो योकिन्मन्त्रो नाम राजा बभूव तस्य सभाया बहव परिहता बभूव । तेषु च सर्वेषु आहर्ष पर्यन्मदहन य कृतवान् कथयन्म । ..

Śrīharsa herein glorifies the powers of one Cidvilāsa, who frustrated the black acts of a Tantrika named Gupta Cidvilāsa was by tradition the pontiff of the Kāmakoṭī shrine of Kāñcī and his encounter with, and the subsequent conversion at his hands of the great Khandanakāra is recorded in a work named पुण्यश्लोकमञ्जरी also cited in the same introduction (cf. खण्डखण्ड-मखण्ड खण्डनष्टदाद्यौहण्ड्यमुहण्डबाग्) The traditional date of Cidvilāsa, according to the records of the shrine, is 4268 4301 of the Kali era (1167 1200 A D), which is about half a century too late for Śrīharsa. Śrīharsa also wrote a work named Śiva-śaktisiddhi (see canto XVIII) This book also was accessible to the above editor, who quoted the following stanza from it -

तेनैवान्यत्रापि,

सोणीस्त्रीमणिरत्नकाञ्चिविकचत्काञ्चीपदोद्यत्स-

श्रीकामासनपासवासितमहासत्योऽप्यसत्त्वच्यव ।

प्रस्कृज्ज्वाब्धचिद्बालवदुमासोमार्घचूडालयो-

रैक्योकाविद् भारती मदयता श्रीचिद्विलासो मम ॥

Here again Cidvilāsa of the Kāmakoṭī shrine of Kāñcī is referred to in glowing terms and invoked for inspiration in the book which had for its subject the identity of Siva and Sakti The editor identifies this Cidvilāsa with Advaitānanda, the author of the Brahmavidyābharanam But the identity seems to be quite unwarranted Whether this Cidvilāsa is to be identified with Śrīharsa's 'Guravah' cited by him in Khandana (Chowkh ed , p 1316) cannot be determined at the present state of our knowledge

Among the three royal panegyrics written by Śrīharṣa, all of them unfortunately remaining undiscovered, the Vijayapraśasti (mentioned at the end of canto v) was upon Vijayacandra, the son of his patron Govindacandra of Kanauj. We quote in support the gloss of one of the oldest commentators on the Naisadha named Śrīvatsaśvara from a very old palmleaf copy (stopping at Canto XI) preserved in the V R. Museum, Rajshahi (Ms. No 809) —

विजयचन्द्रस्य या प्रशस्ति कविना कृता, तत्र राज्ञो जीवितत्वाद्वा गौरवाद्वा
श्रीशब्दः प्रयुज्यते ।

According to another commentator Gopinātha the Vijayapraśasti was a panegyric of the Gauda king Vijayasena (L 1639 विजयसेनान्नो गौडेश्वरस्य) But this seems hardly possible as Śrīharṣa wrote a separate Gaudorviśakulapraśasti (Canto VII), which was more likely in praise of the Sena kings Śrīharṣa's connection with the court of Vijayasena however, may be taken as a fact. His connection with another royal court is proved by another panegyric the Chindapraśasti (Canto XVII). But the Arnavavarnana (Canto IX) was not a royal panegyric ('praśasti'), as is sometimes interpreted by scholars , it must have been a small lyric poem describing the ocean (cf Śrīvatsa's note संहर्षं सन्दर्भकृतं ग्रन्थितमिति यावत् अर्णवस्य वर्णनं येन)

Now we are confronted with the question—what length of time intervened between Udayana and Śrīharṣa As early as 1884 A. D. M. M. Vindhyeśvarīprasāda discovered a definite answer to the question, which seems to have escaped the notice of scholars On the strength of a Naisadhatikā by one Bhagīratha he stated that Śrīharṣa's father Śrīhīra had academic contest with Udayana In other words Udayana was older than Śrīharṣa by only one generation (vide Introd to Vaiśeṣika-darśana, Śrāvana 1941 V. S , p. 26) Unfortunately the actual words of the commentator were not quoted. The commentary named Gūdhārthadīpikā is by far the most extensive ever written on the Naiṣadha ; a fragment of it dated 1629 Saka (probably revised by the commentator himself) is now preserved in the Sarasvatī-Bhavana (vide Introd. to the Tārkikarākṣā, pp. 30-31). The colophon proves that Bhagīratha wrote it at the court of Rājā Jñānachandra of Kūrmāchala, (1698-1708 A.D.) under whom and under whose son Jagaccandra (1708-20 A. D.) he wrote several other works. At the end of Canto I of this 'Bhāgīrathī' commentary there is a rushing flow of most fanciful etymologies of the names of Śrīharṣa and his parents (fol. 83). One such etymology of the name Śrīhīra, who was the father of Śrīharṣa, runs :—यद्वा हि निम्नयेन ईर्ष्ये उदयनाचार्यात्स्वयं कपते हीरः । सुपुसुपेति समासः । श्रिया युक्तो हीरः श्रीहीरः । शाकपाथिवादिः । ईर् गतौ कम्पने । Another etymology, equally fanciful, of the name Śrīharṣa runs : यद्वा हर्षते स्निहति पित्रोराज्ञया उदयनाचार्यस्य परामवकरणे प्रीतिमान् भवति हर्षः । हर्ष स्नेहने । पचाद्यच् ।...Bhagīratha incidentally records here two bits of an important tradition that Udayana defeated Śrīhīra in the debate and Śrīharṣa avenged the defeat at the request of his parents. Bhagīratha is a very recent author ; he evidently derived his information from some of the many earlier commentaries consulted by him.

One of the earliest and most learned scholiasts of the Naiṣadha was Cāṇḍū Paṇḍita, whose commentary was composed in 1353 V. S. (i. e. 1296-97 A. D.). At the very commencement Cāṇḍū Paṇḍita categorically stated that Udayana in ■ conquering campaign challenged Śrīharṣa's father in ■ debate and defeated him and Śrīharṣa, as a faithful son, avenged the defeat by meeting Udayana's arguments in the Khaṇḍana. The exact words of Cāṇḍū Paṇḍita are :—

अग्रमं तावत् कविर्विजिगीषुकथायां स्वपितुः परिभावकम् उदयनम् अत्यमर्षणतया
 कटाक्षयन् तद्ग्रन्थग्रन्थीन् उ(द्)ग्रन्थयितुं खण्डनं प्रारिप्सु...मानसम् एकतानताम् आनिनाय ॥

(Des. Cat. of Mss, B. O. R. I., Poona, Vol. XIII, Pt. I, p. 481) It should be carefully noticed that both Cāṇḍū Paṇ-ḍita and Bhagīratha (who might have based his etymological speculation on the words of the former) mention the fact of Udayana's personal conflict with Śrīharṣa's father directly without the least suspicion about its veracity. But unlike Bhagīratha Cāṇḍū Paṇḍita is more definite about the manner of Śrīharṣa's revenge, which took the form of a literary retort instead of a personal contest. It is interesting to note farther that, according to Cāṇḍū Paṇḍita, Śrīharṣa's greatest ambition in life was to write this great Refutation and he acquired all his talents (through devotions of the mystic Cintāmaṇi-mantra) with that end in view. It is substantially proved in our opinion by the fact that in his 'very angry' mood Śrīharṣa nowhere refers to Udayana by name in the Khaṇḍana.

Śrīharṣa's conflict with Udayana was a common tradition current in the Indian seminaries. The editor of the Khaṇḍana with Śāṅkari has recorded a tradition that Śrīharṣa debated directly with Udayana, who lived to answer Śrīharṣa's arguments in the Ātmatattvaviveka " (Introd., pp. 6-7). These floating traditions have little historical value, but the definite incident of Śrīharṣa's father Śrīhira's defeat at the hands of Udayana recorded in a commentary of the Naiṣadha within a century and a half from Śrīharṣa and exactly corroborated in later commentaries forms the kernel of truth behind them all. It is possible to fix roughly the time of this historic debate between Udayana and Śrīhira. It could never have taken place before 1050 A.D. and probably took place in the decade 1075-85 A.D., when Śrīharṣa was a mere boy.

DATE OF UDAYANA: Under the above computation Udayana's date of birth would fall about 1025 A.D. and his period of activity would cover the last half of the century (1050-1100 A.D.). This is confirmed by a large volume of evidence which is summarised below.

(1) Udayana's feeling of great diffidence expressed at the commencement of the Parisuddhi, which was one of his last works, proves that he was removed by some length of time from Vācaspati, who, as we have shown before, had been quoted and sometimes criticised by Udayana's teacher Śrīvatsa. This feeling of great and almost awful reverence for Vācaspati persists throughout the Parīśuddhi and we quote below two magnificent verses from the unpublished portion of the book. At the end of the Pramāṇa section Udayana writes : (fol. 71b of the Rotograph preserved in the Institute)

स्वच्छाः स्वभावशुचयोऽतिशयेन शुभ्यो दुर्बन्धदुर्धरदुरामहदुःखमाख्याः ।

दीकागिरो विषदपारदविप्रपो वा येषां यरो ननु यशे जगदेव तेषाम् ॥

At the end of I, ii we find (fol. 103b) :—

अनभ्यासज्ञेयात् श्रुतिविधरगर्भेषु लघुतः

मुखग्राह्यान्मन्दैः सुसुप्तसुसुप्तात् प्रथमतः ।

मन श्रीमद्वाचस्पतिवचनविन्यासविसरात्

असत्यघाप्येतन्मुहुरिव मुहुर्निर्वृतमपि ॥

(The reading in the Tanjore copy is somewhat corrupt : Cat., p. 4482.)

It may be surmised, therefore, that Udayana was about three generations later than Vācaspati, whose date has been fixed by us as the latter half of the 10th century A.D. At the present state of our knowledge it is impossible to refer the date 898 of Vācaspati's Nyāyasūtrabandha to the Vikrama era and that Śaka date (corresponding to 976-77 A.D.) falls about a century before the flourishing period of Udayana under the above scheme.

(2) Udayana's date is most intimately related to that of Jñānaśrī, who was directly controverted by him in his very first work, Ātmatattvaviveka. And the date of Jñānaśrī is fixed beyond any dispute in the Tibetan works. He was an exact contemporary of Dīpaṅkara Śrījñāna, surnamed Atīśa. The latter's life, based on contemporary sources, was discovered by S. C. Das in Tibet ; it was 'printed' 'in Tibet in the year called dog about the year 1250 A.D.' (Journ. Buddhist Text Society, I. i., 1893, p. 7 fn.). According to the Southern System of Bṛhaspati Cycle introduced in Tibet about the year 1026 A.D. the year Sādhāraṇa (No. 44) is named Iron-dog in Tibetan (S. C. Das : Tibetan Grammar, 1915, App. V, pp. 9-10) and it fell exactly in the year 1250 A. D. Atīśa (who was born not in 980 A. D. but in 982-3 A. D.) left for Tibetan at the age of 59 in March 1041 A. D. (I H. Q., VI, p. 159). Just three years before (i. e. in 1038 A. D.) the king of Tibet sent Nag-tsho (Vinayadhara) to Magadha for bringing Atīśa ; the elaborate account of his mission, which has been published, bears on the face of it a stamp of veracity so rare in ordinary works of the type. The Tibetan learnt on arrival that among the eminent Pandits under Atīśa one of the foremost was Ratnakīrti. In a grand assembly at Vikramaśīlā occurring soon after the Tibetan saw among others two teachers of Atīśa viz. Vidyākoka and Naropānta (l. c. p. 18). Atīśa consulted oracles in various places and at Vajrāsana and acted according to the instructions of 'Ācārya Jñānaśrī' (p. 20). Sometime after (i. e. in 1039 A. D.) Naropānta came on his last visit to Vikramaśīlā ; 'he leaned on the right arm of Atīśa while Jñānaśrīmitra helped him with his left arm'. (p. 21) Naropānta died soon after in the South. This definitely proves that Atīśa and Jñānaśrī were the two towering figures of Vikramaśīlā at that time, though both of them were younger in age to Naropānta. Jñānaśrī was then evidently retired, succeeded by his distinguished pupil Ratnakīrti. Like Atīśa he was presumably living still in 1050 A. D. and, as we have stated before, Udayana probably wrote the Ātmatattvaviveka about this time (say within 1050-60 A. D.) when Jñānaśrī was still alive.¹

1. The date of Atīśa's starting for Tibet, which exactly coincided with the king Nayapāla's accession to the throne, is generally taken as 1038 A. D., that is three years earlier than the date we have given (Vidyābhūṣana, l. c., p. 520) This date has been practically accepted in the

(3) Udayana on the one hand was one full generation (i. e. about 40 years) later than Jñānaśrī and on the other senior to Śrīharsa by the same period of time and both these pieces of evidence happily combine to settle his date within the last three quarters of the 11th century (1025-1100) A. D. ■ we have stated above

Hist. of Bengal (Vol I, p 177—where Nayapāla's reign starts from 1038 A D) Before Atiśa started for Tibet there was a fight between Nayapāla and Karna ('king of the Western countries'), this could not have taken place in 1038 A D when Karna was not yet on the throne. The confusion is due to the fact that the Brhaspati cycle is current in two different systems—the Prabhavādi (called the Southern system) and the Vijayādi (called the Northern system) The former and not the latter was introduced in Tibet (S C Das Tibetan Grammar, p xv & Bk I, p 48) and the year Vikrama, when Atiśa left for Tibet according to the Tibetan accounts, fell in 1038 A D according to the latter system, while it fell in 1040-41 A. D under the former system, which is still current in Tibet. A similar confusion arose in computing the birth-date of Atiśa, which was in the Tibetan year Tsu rta (Water-horse) corresponding to the Chitrabhānu of the Brhaspati cycle, under the Southern system that year fell in 982-83 A D. and not in 980 A. ■ "Jñānaśrī Mītra of Gauda" was a gatekeeper at Vikramaśīla under Canaka (Vidyabhusana, p 520) but the Tibetan historians Tāranātha and Sumpo mention five mythical Pāla kings (including Canaka) between Mahipala and Nayapāla. Unlike them the biographer of Atiśa correctly stated that Atiśa became High priest under Mahipāla (p. 11), the patron evidently of Jñānaśrī also.

CHAPTER II

PRE-GANGEŚA WRITERS

ŚRĪVALLABHĀCĀRYA is the author of the Nyāyasilāvatī, one of the few original classics of the Navyanyāya, which has been happily published with three commentaries (Chowkh. ed., 1934, pp. 864). At the very outset we should mention that the name of the author was Śrīvallabha and not Vallabha. Vādindra calls him by that name (Rasasāra, p. 92), while in the Chitsukhṛīkā he is invariably cited under the name of Śrīvallabha (Bombay ed., 1915 pp. 196, 198, 230, 298-99 &c, more than a dozen times) and not even once as Vallabha. Rājasekhara in his commentary on the Kandālī confused the name (Peterson's Report, 1887, p. 273 चतुर्थी तु लीलावतीति ज्ञात्वा श्रीनत्ताचार्यो दबन्ध) and mistook the book as a commentary on the Bhāṣya, but he knew that the name of the author began with a 'Śrī'. Gunaratna (1409 A.D.) also followed Rājasekhara, but he described the book correctly (Ic p. 282 लीलावतीर्क श्रीनत्ताचार्यीय) The Līlavatī, as the book is commonly known, covers the same grounds as the Prāśastapādabhāṣya, which be it known, was invariably called at the end of the six chapters of the book by the commentator Sridhara by the correct and significant name 'Padārthapraveśa' (Kandālī, pp. 94, 289, 311, 321, 324 & 330). In other words the (elaboration of the six categories of the Vaiśeṣika system which became the prime function of the Vaiśeṣika scholars ever since Prāśastapāda to the detriment of the original Kanādasūtras, formed the main thesis of Śrīvallabha, the first chapter of his book named (Padārtha-) Vibhāgapariccheda forming its great bulk (up to p. 731 of the Chowkh. ed.). Śrīvallabha, however, displayed his originality by adding three small chapters at the end respectively elaborating Difference of properties (Vaidharmya), Community of properties (Sādharmya) and Operation (Prakṛyā). The whole book is divided besides into 75 separate sections falling under the four chapters. Some of these sections including the whole chapter on Operation mark a departure from the doctrines of the original Sūtrakāra and a distinct tendency towards fusion with the Nyāya. As a matter of fact, in the second introductory verse Śrīvallabha, with an excellent pun, describes Lady Līlāvati (the actual name of his own wife according to Vardhamāna and other scholiasts) as a skilful mistress in the premises of the Science of Reasoning (सान्नीधानयदेरमकर्मकुशला धीन्यायलीलावती) This proves that according to Śrīvallabha the Vaiśeṣika system as well as the Nyāya system both come under the term 'Ānvīkṣikī'. There have been borrowings from each other. For instance, Abhāva (negation) has been accepted as a separate category into the Vaiśeṣika from the Nyāya, just as the mental organ is introduced into the latter from the former. This, says Śrīvallabha (pp. 35-6, read with Vardhamāna), does not conflict with the individuality of the two systems. The section on Abhāva (pp. 544-79) is immediately followed in the Līlāvati by the section on Apavarga (Emancipation, pp. 580-98), both coming under the category of Guṇa.

The Līlāvati was by far the best Vaiśeṣika treatise in the medieval period, and the most intricate one. It outshone the more or less elementary treatises of Sarvadeva (whose Pramāṇa-mañjarī, though popular, is only a booklet of 16 pages), Vādivāgīśvara (author of the Mānamanohara, not yet published) and Śivāditya Miśra. Like the works of Udayana on the one hand and that of Gaṅgeśa on the other the intricacy of the Līlāvati attracted the best intellects of Mithilā even before the times of Gaṅgeśa and it enjoyed the privilege of being the only post-Udayana work before Gaṅgeśa to rank among the immortal classics of Neo-Logic.

The authorities cited in it are listed below alphabetically :
Indra, a pre-Pāṇinian grammarian (p 625)

Udayana in Tātparyasuddhi (p 445) the passage cited is interesting, it accords Udayana's fling at the scholars of Bengal for their incorrect pronunciation of the three sibilants still persisting in Bengal (शुक्लादिन्यावृत्तिनिबन्धनस्तु नीलादिन्यवहार शपथोरिव सव्यवहारो गौडानाम्इत्यादि तात्पर्यशुद्धावुदयन ।

Kīranāvalīkāra (pp 399-400, 533 34 & 823). In the first two cases Udayana is criticised and rather violently (प्रलपितमेतद्विचारासहस्रत्वात्) in the second place, where Udayana's novel arguments against the admissibility of Upamāna as a means of valid knowledge are cited at length

Carakācārya (p 816)

Tikā (1 e Kīranavali, pp 38 & 39) The term is invariably applied to the Tātparyatīka of Vācaspati, but Śrīvallabha as a protagonist of the Vaiśeṣika in a manner paid his respects to Udayana by using the term for the Kīranavali instead

Tutātita (1 e, Kumārila) mentioned along with Kīrti, the Buddhist authority (p 480)

Tattvakaumudī of Vācaspati (p. 533) cited with approval on the refutation of Upamāna.

Bhāsarvajña (p. 405) the passage is cited as very important यच्च भासर्वज्ञीय मतं पूर्वोत्पन्नत्वं परत्वं पश्चादुत्पन्नत्वमपरत्वमिति तत् कणमक्ष-पक्षाक्षमात्रविजृम्भितम् । पूर्वपश्चाद्भावस्य परत्वापरत्वातिरिक्तस्य निर्वक्तुमशक्यत्वात् ।

Bhūsana (1 ■ Nyāyabhūsana of Bhāsarvajña, pp 283, 357, 452, & 856) All the passages are important and should be carefully discussed We need only refer to one line of Śrīvallabha, which has been noticed by many scholars. तदियमना-न्नातदा भासर्वज्ञस्य यदियमाचार्यमप्यवमन्यते । तथा च तदनुयायिनस्तात्पर्याचार्यस्य सिद्धान्त —सविदेव भगवतीत्यादि (p 358). Padmanābha in his Anumaya commentary (Adyar Ms, p 143 of a transcript with the present writer) explains आचार्य द्वित्वस्वीकर्तारं कणादम् । तदनुयायिनः

कणादमताभिज्ञस्य । We should better take Praśastapāda as the Ācārya in this passage.¹ It should be stated that Padmanābha here mistook Bhāsarvajña and Bhūṣaṇa as different persons. The passage clearly indicates that according to Śrīvallabha Vācaspati (Tātparyāṭīkā, p. 277) came after Bhāsarvajña.

Paramakośakāra (p. 675 . असौ निग्रयज्ञो निरस्ताह इति परम-कोषकारवचनात् ।)

Mahāvra (p. 647), an ancient Ācārya.

Vyomācārya (p. 834 . vide Vyomavati, p. 450).

It should, moreover, be noticed that Śrīvallabha never refers to Udayana by the honorific title Ācārya almost universally attributed to him. To him Vācaspati was the 'Ācārya' (p. 533), the Tātparyācārya (p. 353) and the 'Paramanyāyācārya' (p. 762)

Like Udayana Śrīvallabha was a powerful writer. His intricate argumentative style is interspersed with elegant passages here and there. We may refer to the splendid passages on pp. 140, 144 and 648 as instances

Śrīvallabha undoubtedly belonged to Mithilā. In the first place from the earliest times it was commented upon by Maithila scholars of the front rank like Prabhākara, Vardhamāna and Vateśvara and when Vardhamāna categorically states that in the first prayer verse and the second introductory verse the author had respectively referred through double entendre to his father Purusottama and his beloved wife Līlāvatī, there is not the remotest chance that the pedigree of a 'foreign' author could come within his knowledge so directly. Only a Maithila scholar's family details could be recorded by Vardhamāna in that manner. In the second place, Śrīvallabha incidentally refers to a reigning monarch in the following elegant passage —

1 For another suggestion vide Tātparyācārya—JAS, Vol XVII, No 3 p 243

'यदि च गगनमात्मा वान्यधर्मेणान्यमवच्छिन्द्यात् काश्मोरवर्तिना बुद्धमराणेण कार्णाटचक्रवर्ति(ललना-)करकमलवच्छिन्द्यात् । (p. 290 ; repeated by Vardhamāna in his commentary on the passage p 291) The passage is cited in the Nyāyamuktāvalī, a commentary on Udayana's Lakṣanāvalī by Śeṣa Śāraṅgadhara (Varanasi ed , p 41), who made it more elegant by adding the word ललना. It is also reproduced in the Citsukhī (p 322) and in the Upaśkāra of Śaṅkara Miśra (under II 11 10) in a modified form. It was evidently inspired by a passage of the Kīranāvalī in the same section of Kāla (Varanasi ed , p. 116 अन्यथा वाराणसास्थितेन भीलेन पाटलिपुत्रस्थितस्य स्फटिकमणेरुपरजनप्रसङ्गात् । cf Upaśkāra on II. 11. 6). Cinnabhatta localised it by mentioning Vijayanagarī and Virūpākṣa instead (p. 228) We need hardly state here that Mithilā was under the rule of a 'Kārṇāta' dynasty for two centuries and a half (from about 1100 to 1350 A. D.), which was the most glorious period in the cultural and social history of Mithilā. The most illustrious among the kings of the dynasty was its founder Nānyadeva (1094 1147 A. D.) If the Bhūparīkramana (fol 18b) and the Purusaparīkṣā of Vidyāpati are to be believed this monarch 'of the Kārṇāta family' (कार्णाटकुलसंभव) was living still in the reign of Jayacandra of Kanauj (vide बुद्धचरकथा). There is hardly any doubt that Śrīvallabha was referring to this monarch of Mithilā in the above passage. It should be carefully noticed that the reference is to a 'Kārṇāta' family and not to a 'Karnāta' country.

In the following interesting example of intuition' (आर्षज्ञान) Śrīvallabha refers again to a local monarch, who was not, however, a 'Cakravartin' (overlord) but only a 'Nṛpati' —(p 629) यथा वा स्वेच्छास्मृतपदार्थसार्थे भवति—शालिग्रहो नृपतिरिदानीं शृङ्गारसरसीतीरे देव्या लीलायत्या सह ललितमधुरं सङ्गीतक्रममुपनीति ज्ञानम् । न चैव निपर्ययः संवादात् । [वर्द्धमानप्रकार-आर्षज्ञानोदाहरणान्तरमाह, यथावेति] That this is a reference to a living monarch is proved by the author's assertion that the incident known through intuition tallied with facts. Śaṅkara Miśra explains that it is an example of knowledge at a distance in position, not in time. (ib, p. 629 देशविप्रकर्षेण उदाहरति).

Śrīvallabha frequently mentions Vārānaśī (pp. 140, 399-400) with which he was apparently quite familiar. In the first mention (p. 140) he seems to have recorded his personal experience that a pupil's brain improves sweetly from sips of Gangā water at Vārānaśī after tasting myrobalan. He must then have studied at Vārānaśī and from early times Maithilā students had kept up communication with that great centre of Indian culture and religion.

DATE OF ŚRĪVALLABHA As we have stated above Śrīvallabha has not given the well known epithet 'Ācārya' to Udayana, from whom he was not much removed in time. On pp. 37-40 he has cited the views of a scholar, partly of the same school, with whom however, he disagrees, who quoted the Tikā (i. e. the Kiraṇāvalī vide Guna part, p. 184, Rasasāra, p. 22 and Gunaprakāśa p. 48) in his support. We should, therefore, place him about two generations after Udayana in the second quarter of the 12th century A. D. late in the reign of Nanyadeva. His definition of Vyāpti, as is well known, is cited and refuted by Gaṅgeśa in the section on Pūrvapakṣa (B I ed, p. 83 and Līlāvati, pp. 496) But he was not cited anywhere by Śrīharsa, who was his exact contemporary. On the other hand, a pre-Gaṅgeśa scholar of Mithilā named Prabhākara-pādhyāya commented on his work perhaps for the first time. Many authors of the 13th century A. D. like Vādīndra and Citsukha, not belonging to Mithilā, have quoted him respectfully by name. It is impossible, therefore, to place him after 1175 A. D. It should be mentioned here that Pratyagrūpa, commentator of Citsukha in one place (Citsukhī, Nirm ed., p. 326) refers to the Līlāvati as a 'recent' book. Pratyagrūpa's date is about 1350 A. D.

From the following quotation which we traced in Vardhamāna's Anvikṣānayatatuvabodha it is gathered that besides the Līlāvati Śrīvallabha wrote a commentary on the 5th chapter of the Nyāyasūtra, the most intricate part of the system. Many other scholars including Udayana tackled the chapter separately.

ŚIVĀDITYA MIŚRA The name of this great author of various works on the Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika now lives through his elementary treatise Saptapadārthī, which has long been published with various commentaries. Though all his polemical works have perished, his prayer at the end of the Saptapadārthī has been luckily fulfilled

सप्तद्वीपा घरा यावद् यावत् सप्त धराधराः ।

तावत् सप्तपदार्थयामस्तु वस्तुप्रकाशिनी ॥

Gaṅgeśa, who very rarely names his predecessors, made an exception in the case of Śivāditya, who is cited by name in the section on Nirvikalpa (Prataksa part, B. L. ed., p 830) : the following verse in the passage has been wrongly printed as prose :

व्यावर्त्तनीयमधितिष्ठति यद्वि साक्षा-

देतद्विशेषणमतौ विपरोतमन्यत् ।

दण्डी पुमानिति विरोपणमत्र दण्डः

पुंसो न जातिरनुदण्डमसौ च तस्य ॥

इति (ib., p. 829)

It may be taken as a typical illustration of the style and consummate scholarship of Śivāditya exhibited in his lost works which seem to have been both in prose and verse. In the present case Śivāditya was cited by Gangeśa only to be refuted. Gangeśa's own views on the intricate point, the definition and function of Viśeṣana and Upalakṣaṇa, were based on a passage of Udayana (from the Kīranāvalī, pp 201-2) respectfully quoted and explained by him (pp 834 5)

Among the lost works of Śivāditya the Lakṣanamālā, based on Mahāvīdyā syllogism (vide Citsukhīkā, pp. 180-81), was probably his masterpiece. We have stated before that the recently published work of that name, wrongly ascribed to him is really a long lost work of Udayana. Not one single sentence of Śivāditya, cited by different authorities can be traced in it. Śivāditya's array of intricate definitions, which earned for him the epithet of a 'follower of the new crooked path' was assailed by Vāṇindra (Mahāvīdyāvidambana, pp 74, 79, 109 & 117) and more frequently by Citsukha (vide Citsukhīkā pp 180, 183, 192-3, 195, 200, 237, 295 6, 309, 323 & 327 8) in the second chapter of the Tattva-pradīpikā. Among these dozen quotations one (p 237) is particularly important. Citsukha refers to it as a 'crooked course' of the 'modern', which is really an elaboration of Udayana's words and anonymously quoted by Gangeśa in the very beginning of the Upādhivāda. It should be noticed that this very passage of Śivāditya is ascribed by Ānandapūrṇa to Nārāyaṇa Sarvajña (q. v.). None of these definitions are traceable in the Saptapadārtha.

A very small tract of Śivāditya named Hetukhandana has been discovered (Introḍ to Mahāvīdyāvidambana, p XIX),

In it there are references to two lost works of Śivāditya, 'Upādhivārtika' and 'Arthāpattivārtika' and to an unknown author of a certain 'Mayānandanī' (fol. 8). Probably Śivāditya had written a comprehensive work with the appellation 'Vārtika', the above-mentioned works forming two of its parts. Besides the long quotation by Gaṅgeśa (Pratyakṣa, pp. 829-30), many other passages of Śivāditya, all of them intricate and learned, are found in various works. We quote some of them below. Vardhamāna in his Tattvabodha under V 1. 37 writes — शिवादित्यमिश्रास्तु प्रयत्नकार्यत्वात्नेकत्वादिनानेन दृष्टान्तानेकत्वमुक्तम् । तथा च साध्यत्वेनैष हेतुना दृष्टान्त[ान्त]रेणानिष्टापादनं कार्यसमः इत्याहुः । (fol. 62b) this seems to imply that like Udayana and many other scholars, Śivāditya had written a separate commentary on the fifth chapter of Gautama. Jānakīnātha in his Nyāya-siddhāntamañjarī refers to an advanced view of Śivāditya thus (Chowkh ed. with Yādava's commentary, p. 9) — शिवादित्यमिश्रास्तु करणाद्याकारानुगतमते करणत्वादिकमखण्डोपाधिरूपसामान्यमङ्गीचक्रुः । Jānakīnātha has quoted this same view of Śivāditya at the end of the Ānavikṣikitattvavivaraṇa (fol. 166b). This classification of Upādhi into two classes, Sakhaṇḍa and Akhaṇḍa, already referred to by Gaṅgeśa (Pratyakṣa, p. 842), has been variously ascribed to different scholars. Among Nyāya scholars Śivāditya seems to be the earliest. In the Saptapadārthī he divides Sāmānya (Universals) into two classes Jāti and Upādhi perhaps for the first time.

Among other original views of Śivāditya we should mention his definition of Darkness (Saptapadārthī, p. 84 अरोपित-नीलरूपोऽभावोऽन्धकारः) which is an adaptation of the famous views of the Kandalī. Like Bhāsarvajña he accepts अनव्यवसित as a separate class of Hetvābhāsa, which according to him is six-fold. Against all Vaiśeṣika views he enumerates an eleventh 'quarter' (Dik) named 'Raudrī'. He enumerates a third variety of Sāmānya 'Parāpara'. His predilection for the Kandalī is again manifested in his admitting 'Citrarasa' (p. 26). Balabhadra, the commentator, remarks चिन्त्यमेतत् (p. 149).

Śivāditya's date can be easily fixed as the middle of the 12th century A. D. As he was controverted by the eminent scholar of South India, Vādindra, who flourished in the reign of the famous Yādava king Singhana (1210 47 A. D.) he cannot be brought down further than 1175 A. D. He certainly came after Udayana and was one of the bright stars in the galaxy of great scholars who flourished about 1150 A. D.—Śrīvallabha, Śrīharsa, Vādivāgiśvara and others.

KEŚAVA MIŚRA author of the Tarkabhāṣā, an elementary treatise of Nyāya Vaiśeṣika doctrines, which is more or less popular throughout India. It is divided into two broad divisions—Pramāṇa and Prameya. It is not certain if he belonged to Mithilā. As a matter of fact among its numerous commentators (in Dr. Bhandarkar's ed., pp. xix-xx the list contains 28 names), there is only one Gopinātha who belonged to Mithilā but his commentary circulated not in Mithilā at all but in South India. In the most flourishing period of advanced studies on Navyanyāya in Mithilā and Bengal the smaller and elementary works never attracted scholars and they became extinct or what is more surprising some of them created excellent fields elsewhere. There is a notable instance in the Nyāya-siddhantamañjarī of Jānakīnātha which was composed at Navadvīpa and completely forgotten there though it was studied at Varāṇasī and elsewhere for a long time. We believe the Tarkabhāṣā similarly was driven out of Mithilā and became popular in Varāṇasī from where it circulated in other parts of India.

Our reasons for regarding Keśava as a Maithilī are the following. (1) The title Miśra is found in the colophon of the Tarkabhāṣā in all manuscripts and that, prima facie points to Mithilā as the author's birth place. (2) Keśava was well-read in the works of Udayana. At the beginning of his work he started with Udayana's definition of Pramā (यथार्थानुभव प्रमा taken from the Kusumāñjali IV 1) and towards the end cited his definition of the fallacy 'Asiddhi' (also taken exactly from the Kusumāñjali III. p 39) mentioning his name. Moreover, in the latter case Keśava attempts to meet in his own way the objection that Udayana's definition is open to the charge of overlapping. Keśava's predilection for Udayana might be taken as a good pointer to his place of origin. (3) According to Peterson (Cat. of Ulwar Mss , 1892, p 28) the splendid Mss Library of the Maharaja of Alwar preserves a copy (Ms No. 653) of a commentary on the Tarkabhāṣā by Vardhamana named Tarkaprakāśa and a sub-commentary on the same by Rucidatta. We failed to get any further information on these two unique manuscripts. If they have been correctly described by Peterson it would be a convincing proof that Keśava belonged to Mithilā. For, a superior Maithilā scholar of the position of Vardhamāna could not be supposed to have wielded his masterly pen upon an elementary work of foreign' origin.

Date of Keśava Miśra We are of opinion that Keśava belonged to the middle of the 12th century A. D. His direct mention of Udayana and the marked predilection for his views point to the same conclusion. He must have preceded Gangeśa by a length of time. For, Cinnabhatta (late in the 14th century A. D.) commented on it at Vijayanagarī the great cultural centre of South India where Keśava's work must have circulated long ago. Cinnabhatta it should be noted himself belonged to a very distinguished family and was quite unaware of Gangeśa. Vardhamāna again regarded the Līlāvati and the Khandana, both written in the middle of the 12th century A. D., as the latest classics for him to adorn with masterly commentaries. As Keśava also seems to have attracted his pen, he cannot be later in date. Keśava is unaware of the great Khandanakāra, who was probably his contemporary. His early date is corroborated by the fact that his work bristles with a large number of various readings. According to Cinnabhaṭṭa, (p. 137) and following him Viśvakarmā (p. 42), Keśava has controverted the views of the Kandalīkāra (vide Kandali, p. 206) in his treatment of Anumāna. He has similarly rejected the Kandalī's views on the nature of gold (which in Nyāya falls under the substance 'light') preferring Udayana's opinion on the point (vide Cinnabhaṭṭa, p. 214). Keśava, therefore, belongs to an early period, when Udayana's controversy with Śrīdhara was still a current topic.

Dr. Bhandarkar (in his Introd., p. xxiii) suspected that Keśava Bhaṭṭa, author of the Tarkadīpikā upon the Tarkabhāṣā 'may be the same' as Keśava Miśra. Keśava Bhaṭṭa, however, of the Laugākṣi family was a much later scholar of Vārāṇasī. He commented also on Udayana's Lakṣaṇavali (transcript at Mithilā Institute from Baroda) and on the Saptapadārthīpadārthacandrikā (Tanjore Cat., pp. 4458-59). This latter Ṭippanī was composed in 1521 Śaka (1599 A. D. : इन्दुनेत्रशरभूमिते शके corresponding correctly to the year Vikārin, according to the Southern system of the Bṛhaspati cycle).

MAHĀMAHOPĀDHYĀYA CĀNDRA : One of the authors who is referred to anonymously by Gaṅgeśa. In the Śabdamaṇi-parīkṣā (of Vāsudeva Sārvabhauma) of which a unique manuscript is now preserved in the Sarasvatī-Bhavaṇa, Vārāṇasī, (foll. 23-143 dated 1503 Śaka, the copy belonged to the famous M. M. Vidyānivāsa) we discovered the following passage : (fol. 118) अयं च सिद्धान्तविरोधः प्रभाकरं प्रति, न ॥ मिश्रं तेनाद्यानामेवात्र देवतात्वास्वीकारात् । तन्मतं तु बह्व्यमाण-चन्द्र-रादान्तदूपणेनैव दूषितमित्युपेक्षितम् । (compare Rucidatta's Śabdamaṇiprakāśa, the Pandit, VIII, p. 132). There is another quotation from Candra in the same work (fol. 70a) : अतएव व्यक्ती सदपि शक्तिज्ञानं न कारणं जातिविषयत्वेन शक्तिज्ञानादेव व्यक्तिीसंभवात्तयोरेकधीवेतत्वनियमादिति चन्द्रेनापास्तम् । Candēśvara (in Kṛtyaratnākara, p. 82) calls him a गुरुमताचार्य. Two works of this scholar have been discovered, which at one time exercised a great influence among dialecticians of Eastern India. One of it, the Amṛtabindu exists in a very incorrect copy in the Asiatic Society (fol. 49), the colophon running : इति श्रीमहामहोपाध्याय-श्रीचन्द्रकृतौ अमृतबिन्दुर्नाम प्रकरणं समाप्तम् । It deals with 'Vidhi' and 'Apūrva' exclusively and proves its affiliation by quoting only from the Nibandhana (fol. 36b & 48a-b), Vivaraṇa (23a, 36b & 48b, both of Prabhākara himself), Prakaraṇapañjikā (of Śālikanātha, 34a) and Mahāvraata (45a). This book also has been cited in Sārvabhauma's Śabdamaṇiparīkṣā (under Apūrvavāda, fol. 28b : अतएव स्वर्गकामपोद्भूतं यागविषयकं कार्यमिति प्रथमतोऽन्ययानुमतेऽन्ययप्रयोजकपोद्भूत्वोपस्थितावनन्तरं यागविषयकं स्वर्गकामिकार्यमित्यमृतबिन्दु-दर्शितः पन्था निरस्तः । Both Candra and his work, the Amṛtabindu were cited also in the Śabdālokkoddyota of (Sārvabhauma's son), Vāhinīpati Bhaṭṭācārya (fol. 23a-b of Ms. of the Bhau Daji collection at Poona).

Another work of Candra named Nayaratnākara exists in the Darbara Library at Nepal (H. P. Śāstri : Nepal Cat., 1905, p. 113). At the end of this book Candra mentioned that he belonged to the 'Pośālī' family :—

असौ चन्द्रः श्रीमानकृत नयरात्नकरमिमं

निबन्धं पोशाली-कुलकमलकेदारमिहिरः ।

There is no family in Mithilā, as far as we have learnt, which has Pośālī as its Mūlagrāma, though he has been claimed for Mithilā by M. M. Dr. Umesha Mishra (Jha Commemoration Vol., p. 243). Pośālī happens to be a well-known Śrottriya family of Rāḍhīya Brāhmaṇas of Bengal. It still survives in Bengal by the name 'I uśilāla' belonging to the Kāśyapa gotra. In earlier genealogical works the name is mentioned regularly as 'Pośali' or 'Pośali' (vide the texts cited by us in I. H. Q., III, p. 139). It was situated somewhere in Rāḍha or West Bengal. In this book Candra refers to the Vivaraṇa, the Viveka, the Pañcikā (of Śālikanātha) and Śrīkara (Jha Comm. Vol., p. 245).

Candra held independent views about the categories, which according to him were eleven in number. Śāṅkara Miśra in the Vādivinoda (p. 53) and Padmanābha in his Setutikā (p. 105) describe him as 'Prābhākaraikadeśin' for that reason. According to Candra 'Ownership' (स्वत्व) is the eighth category. His views on the point are given and refuted by Vācaspati Miśra II in the Tattvāloka under II. 1 33 (fol. 108b इत्यगत्याष्टमं पदार्थं स्वत्वमिति चन्द्रः) and anonymously by Vardhamāna in the Lilāvati-prakāśa (pp. 82-83). He was undoubtedly one of the Prābhākara scholars, whose works Gangeśa specially studied under professors as stated by him at the commencement of his book (गुरुभिर्ज्ञात्वा गुरुणा सतम्). For, the Amṛtabindu exhibits to a large extent the Navyanyāya style of almost interminable streams of arguments and counter-arguments so prominent in Gangeśa. Candra was one of the original sources of Gangeśa in the Vidhivāda and Apūrvavāda portions of the Śabdakhaṇḍa and as such we cannot but refer to him here though we hold that he was Bengali by origin.

According to M. M. Dr. Mishra Candra's date is 'before 1100 A. D.' (Jha Comm. Vol., p. 246). This is no longer tenable. The Viveka mentioned by Candra in the Nazaratnākara is the Nayaviveka of Bhavanātha, who cites Śrīkara by name (p. 271). Bhavanātha was most probably a rival and contemporary of Bhavadeva, as indicated by Nāṇḍilla Gopa in the commentary of the Prabodhacandrodaya (II. 3). Bhavadeva's period of activity has been fixed by us within 1060-1110 A. D. (I. H. Q., XXII, pp. 133-35). Candra cannot, therefore, be placed before the 12th century A. D. and he is cited by Murāri he cannot be later either.

DIVĀKAROPADHYĀYĀ a supreme authority in the Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika literature of Mithilā, better known as the Uddyotakāra. Divākara's name is familiar among scholars from a rare quotation found in Jagadīśa's Śabdakṛti-prakāśikā (Varanasi

-ed., p. 171 in the section on Kāraka : दिवाकरस्तु संस्कारावच्छिन्नमेव ज्ञानं जानात्यर्थ इत्युक्तस्थले मुख्यमेव कर्मत्वं घटादेरित्याह, तन्मन्दं.....). Jagadīśa, ■ comparatively late author, borrowed this from the Ānvikṣikītatuvavaraṇa, a separate commentary on Nyāyasūtra (Chap. V only) by Jānakīnātha, father of Jagadīśa's teacher Rāmabhadra Sārvabhauma (Sarasvatī-Bhavana Ms. of Rāmabhadra's Nyāyarahasya, fol. 156a). From Pragalbha's Maṇḍikā we first came to know that Divākara preceded Gaṅgeśa. In the Īśvaravāda, commenting on the passage अथारणिमण्यभाववति...इति चेत्—न (B. I. ed., p. 131), Pragalbha explains दिवाकरनतमाराकृते—अथेति (Anumāna-Pragalbhī, S. B Ms. fol. 190a and Bombay R. A. S. copy fol. 160a). There is a passage in the Dravya-prakāśa of Vardhamāna where two former explanations of a statement of Udayana are cited (Kiraṇāvalī, Varanasi ed., p. 50 fn. : the reading in the B. I ed., pp. 217-18 is corrupt :—

अथयवानवस्थेति । यद्यपि अनवस्थामार्गं बीजाङ्कुरसाधारण्येन न दूषणं तथापि सर्वकार्यत्रव्यनाशान् प्रलयानन्तरं सृष्टिरिति व्यवस्थाविरह एवानवस्थेत्येके । द्वधणुकावयवस्थानेकद्रव्यावयवत्वे महत्त्वं स्यादित्यर्थ इत्यन्ये ॥ Pragalbha gives here a very informative note in the Dravya-Pragalbhī (Navadvīpa Ms. fol. 113a) : इत्येके=प्रभाकराः । इत्यन्ये=दिवाकरोपाध्यायः । Divākara, therefore, commented on the Kiraṇāvalī before Vardhamāna as did another rival scholar of Mithilā named Prabhākara. In the Dravya section Pragalbha has adorned his sub-commentary with very frequent quotations from Divākara ; we counted as many as 50 (from fol. 30 to 140), which is by far the largest number from a single author. Pragalbha evidently regarded him as a very great authority upon Udayana. Phrases like तच्चित्तत्वं दिवाकरविरोधात् (fol. 83a), इति दिवाकरस्वरतः (51b), तथैव दिवाकरः (79a, 109b, 121b & 130a) display his regard for him. Some of these passages of Divākara also prove that Vardhamāna is indebted to a large extent to Divākara for the formidable precision of his style in defining various terms. Medieval scholarship for ■ long time consisted in bringing out the full significance of every part of these definitions. The definition of Dravyatva in Dravyaprakāśa (B. I. ed., p. 164) was formulated by Vardhamāna after rejecting that of Divākara (p. 163) For, Pragalbha here again gives us the information (fol 86b : दिवाकरमतं दूषयति—न चेति)

Another well-informed scholar of Bengal Puṇḍarikākṣa Vidyāsāgara refers to Divākara in the following revealing passage of the Kātantrapradīpa in the section on Kāraka (printed in Gurunātha's ed. of the Kalāpa, p. 715) —

यद्यपि स्वयङ्मदीकाया दिवाकरादिभिः संस्कारावच्छिन्ना बुद्धिर्ज्ञानात्मादेरर्थ इत्युक्तं संस्कारफलावच्छिन्नस्य धात्वर्थत्वादिति इति न्यायनिबन्धोदयोतेऽपि दृश्यते—

Here two works of Divākara have been mentioned by name, Khaṇḍanāṭikā and Nibandhodyota The Uddyota has been mentioned by Vācaspati II in the Tattāloka (fol. 53a) under I. 1. 10. The illuminating passage is cited below यद्यपि प्रकरण-पर्यालोचनया क्षेत्रज्ञानामेष प्रमेयत्वं तन्मिथ्याज्ञानस्यैव संसारबीजत्वात् अन्ततः तत्तत्तदज्ञानस्यैव मोक्षहेतुत्वात् । तथा च द्वे ब्रह्मणी वेदितव्ये इत्यादिश्रुतेर्मोक्षधीगोचर-त्वात् भगवतोऽपि धीविषयत्वमवगम्यते भास्करादिस्वरसाच्च । न च भगवदप्रमेयत्वपर-प्रमेयप्रकाशविरोधः तस्य नव्यमतपरत्वात् । अतएवैतदुद्धोततृतीयप्रकाशादेवमेवेति । Śaṅkara Miśra also mentioned the Uddyota as one of the three illuminating commentaries on the Nibandha. Vāsudeva Śārva-bhauma in Anumānamanipariṣṭā (S. B. Ms. fol. 6a) cited a doctrine of the Pramāṇodyota.

Fortunately a fragment of the book is preserved in the Asiatic Society (No 4770 of the Govt collection), though its great importance was missed by H. P Sastri and other scholars. This unique copy written in the Maithilā script is dated 164 L. S., but the copy in palm leaves is very much injured, several leaves are missing and several torn. It begins —

In the above extract the name of Divākara's commentary on the Kīranāvalī has been preserved viz. Vilāsaka Mallinātha in his commentary on the Tārakakaraksā once (p 129) referred to Divākara as the Vilāsakāra and cited his definition of Mokṣa (तथा चैकात्मनिष्ठनिःशिल्पदुःखव्यससाकल्य मोक्षं मुमुक्षूणां च प्रत्येकमेकत्वान्नाख्यामिच्छेति विलासकारोक्तलक्षणमुक्तमित्यनुसन्धेयम्) Pragalbha also referred to him once as the Vilasakāra (Dravya Pragalbhī, fol 73a).

The Vilāsa is cited twice in Pakṣadhara's Dravyaviveka (fol 90a & 96a). In the above fragment of the Uddyota Divākara frequently cited from previous commentaries without of course naming them and in most places refuted their arguments e. g. यत्तु केचित् (fol 21a) अत्र केचित् (23b), ib (32a), कश्चित् (33b), इति केचित् । अन्ये तु (55b) and एके तु (62a) All these prove that a long line of scholiasts upon Udayana's Nibandha existed before the times of Divākara. The following passages are extracted from the fragment as somewhat interesting

अत्र राजतूत्रकमेण (?) प्रकरणार्थञ्चतुर्द्वैतमेव प्रतीयते चक्षुरद्वैतन्तु सिद्धान्तो व्याख्यात (fol. 16a)

कश्चित् हरोत्पत्त्यन्यत्वेन हेतुर्विशेषणीय इत्याह—तत्र, कषायस्य खदिरादेरपि जलमाधुर्यव्यञ्जकत्वात् । (33b)

पञ्चधर्मतादिज्ञानं ह्यनुमितिजनकं न तु तर्कं । (41a)

Buddhist doctrines are refuted in this chapter and in that connection Divākara records the important fact that he commented also on Udayana's Bauddhādhikāra अधिकं त्वालोकनामि बौद्धाधिकार-विवरणोऽस्माभिः प्रपचितम् । (51b) It is interesting to note that this long lost commentary of Divākara bore the name the Āloka the title of the famous commentary of Jayadeva (Pakṣadhara) on the Tattvacintamani.

Divākara also commented on Udayana's Kusumāñjali and the name of this commentary was PARIMALA. It was mentioned by Śāṅkara Miśra in the following line मकरन्दे प्रवेशो याव्यन्त्या परिमलेऽथवा This portion of Śāṅkara's commentary has been mysteriously tagged on to the beginning of Rāmabhadra Sārvabhauma's Kusumāñjalīkārikāṇyākhyā, we have discussed the point under Tvantopādhyāya below. Śāṅkara evidently mentioned the three names of previous commentaries in the ascending order of chronology, proving that Divākara preceded both Vardhamāna and the Makarandakāra (i. e. Tvantopādhyāya). This Parimala of Divākara has been approvingly cited once by Sārvabhauma in his extensive commentary on a single phrase of Gangesa (तद्वोधानुमित्यनुत्पत्ते Vyāptivāda Pūrvapakṣa p 87) thus —युक्तमेव परिमलललितं फल्गु, सामानाधिकरण्यामात्रविषयकतया ज्ञानस्य हेतुत्वे लाघवात् । (Anumanamaniparīkṣa fol 26a). The Parimāla has also been cited by Rucidatta five times in the Makaranda upon Vardhamāna's Kusumāñjali prakāśa (vide Chowkh ed Stavaka I pp 22 23 III p 21 IV p 1 and V p 10) The Parimāla is not a sub commentary on Vardhamāna's Prakāśa as is sometimes wrongly taken. A fragment of it was discovered long ago in a Jaina Bhandara, quite beyond the reach of scholars (Descriptive Catalogue of Manuscripts in the Jain Bhandars at Pattan Vol I, Introd p 44) Divākara became famous by his great commentaries on all the major works of Udayana though there is no evidence available yet that he had commented on the Parīkṣita also. We shall refer to an interesting doctrine which seems to have been first promulgated by Divākara. The prepositions (Upasargas) according to a view ascribed commonly to the Kandalikāra, (compare प्रकर्षवाचिना प्रराब्देन Kandalī p 2) directly denote meanings by the primary function of words in other words they are वाचक. Udayana denies them any such function they only can elucidate meanings which primarily belong to the verbs to which they are attached. That is to say they are only द्योतक. Divākara adopted a middle course—they are द्योतक in cases where the primary meanings of verbs are contradicted by the prepositions in the rest they are वाचक. This view has been cited and rejected by Gangesa (Śabda part Upasargavāda p 856) That the view was advocated by Divākara is stated by Pundarikakṣa Vidyasagara in the Kātantra-pradīpa thus —तस्मात्

धात्वर्थस्य विरुद्धार्थं प्रादिभ्यो यत्र लभ्यते ।

तत्रामी द्योतका ज्ञेया दुर्धैरन्यत्र वाचका ॥

इति सत्तेषां दिवाकरादेरपि मतमेतत् (Gurunātha's ed of Katantra, p 651)

Divākara's date can now be definitely fixed within 1200-50 A. D. He cannot be placed before 1200 A. D. as he had commented, perhaps for the first time, on the Khandana and referred to more than one previous commentaries on Udayana. On the other hand the date of the transcript of his Udyota (falling within 1272-83 A. D.) marks the lower limit of his date. The transcript might have been made within his very life-time.

PRABHĀKAROPĀDHYĀYA One of the greatest pre Gaṅgeśa scholars of the Nyāya Vaiśeṣika, whose name had been lost for a long time. He was not a Mīmāṃsaka and it goes without saying that he is not identical with Prabhākara Miśra the founder of a Mīmāṃsā school who preceded him by at least 500 years. He probably wrote commentaries on all the four major works of Udayana. In the Dravya-Pragalbha (an unique manuscript preserved in the Public Library at Navadvipa dated 386 L. S., examined by us thoroughly 15 years ago) the following references to Prabhākara were traced तथा प्रमाणप्रभाकर इत्याह (fol. 83a). This proves that Prabhākara wrote a commentary on Udayana's Parīśuddhi. तथा प्रभाकरे इन्द्रियलक्षणे दर्शनात् (fol. 98b this is also from the Nibandhatikā). The next passage is cited in full (fol. 116b vide Kīranāvalī, B I ed, p. 221) अतएव त्रसरेणी परमाणुत्वमेव स्वीक्रियते न महत्त्वम् । यत्तु वर्धमानेनोक्तं तदभ्युपगमवादेनेति ध्येयम् । न च सुधापानरचितम् । न च इदं तौतातिताना—तस्य परमाणुत्वे न तत्समवेत इति साध्यव्यापकत्वादिति प्रभाकर दिवाकराम्या स्वहस्ति-तत्वादिति ॥ In this illuminating passage Pragalbha refers to three distinguished scholiasts on the Kīranāvalī which include Prabhākara. In प्रभाकरोपाध्याया आहु (fol. 133a vide B I. ed, p. 261), the full name with the title Upādhyāya attached should be noted. भानुपायामिति (B. I. ed, p. 268)—पन्नगाना पवनपानप्रवृत्ति-रेवासिद्धिरिति प्रभाकर (fol. 132b) प्रभाकर-दिवाकरो (136b)

In the Upamānasamgraha of Pragalbha (A S Ms. No. 1752 dated 1643 V S) it is clearly stated that Gaṅgeśa quoted Prabhākara's definition (fol. 4a प्रभाकरोपाध्यायकृतलक्षणमाह-असाधारणेति vide Upamānakhandā, B I ed, p 18) It is probable that Gaṅgeśa here quoted from Prabhākara's commentary on the Kusumāñjali. There is another quotation from Prabhākara in the same part of Gaṅgeśa's work (p 90 प्रभाकरस्तथापयति —अत्रेति fol. 16a)

It is now possible to state that a famous passage of Gaṅgeśa in the Vyāptivāda which has now developed into a separate section called असत्य चतुष्टयम्, is a quotation from this Prabhākara. For, what Mathurānatha (following Jayadeva's note प्रभाकरा अपि वदन्ति) vaguely explained as प्रभाकरसमिति (p. 165) is really a quotation from Prabhākaraopādhyāya as Pragalbha definitely stated (fol 19a of Ms No. 298 of the Sarasvatī-Bhavana अत्रैव प्रभाकरोपाध्यायमतमुपष्टम्भकमाहातप्येति) The mention of the title Upādhyāya conclusively proves that a particular scholar is meant here belonging evidently to the same school of neo logic and not certainly a follower of the Prabhākara school of Mīmāṃsā. Here also the passage is probably taken from Prabhākara's commentary on the Kusumāñjali.

This Prabhākara also commented on the Līlāvati of Śrīvallabha. Bhagīratha in his sub-commentary on Vardhamāna's Līlāvati prakāśa pointed out two cases where Vardhamāna cited from Prabhākaraopādhyāya (Chowkh ed., pp 142 and 355 प्रभाकरोपाध्यायमतमाह—) But in Paksadhara's Līlāvativiveka there are eleven such references (Colebrooke's copy now in London I O foll. 2a 5a, 15a, 18a, 39b, 49b 58a, 61a, 78a and 93b). Some of these references are important. The following passages cited by Vardhamāna in his Līlāvati prakāśa are, according to Paksadhara, from Prabhākaraopādhyāya —

- (1) p 16 अन्ये=प्रभाकरोपाध्याया (fol 5a)
- (2) p. 280 अत्र.. संप्रदायविद् । प्रभाकरोपाध्यायमतमाह-अत्रेति (61a).
- (3) p 283 पूर्व. इत्यन्ये । प्रभाकरोपाध्यायमतमाह-पूर्वमिति । (1b.)
- (4) p 499 तर्हीति । अनौपाधिक सबन्धो व्याप्तिरिति मतवादी यथास्माक-

मुपाधुद्वावनापत्तिर्दोषस्तथा तवापि कृत्स्नसाध्यसम्बन्धाभावोद्भावनापत्तिरिति तुल्यमित्युपाध्याययोजनाया सप्रदाययोजनाया च दोषमाशङ्कते—तर्हीति । (99b). It should be noticed that in the second passage Vardhamāna styles Prabhākara as 'Sampradāyavit' and in the last case Pakṣadhara refers to him simply as Upādhyāya. The Name of Prabhākara's commentary was 'Prakāśa' as indicated by Pakṣadhara in one place (fol 58a अत्राकाशपरिमाणं दृष्टान्तं अन्यतरपटितश्च हेतुः प्रभाकरे प्रकाशोऽस्ति । vide Lilavati p 264) In another passage (39b) Prabhākara is stated to have accepted Kandalikara's view about the existence of 'Chitrarasa' (vide Kandalī p 30 last line) We need hardly state that Prabhākara regarded as an authority by Vardhamāna was a Maithila and flourished about a century after Srivallabha in the middle of the 13th century A D

TARANI MISRA One of the greatest pre Gangeśa authorities of Mithila. The name of his treatise is Ratnakosa, which has been respectfully cited by Manikantha and Gangeśa. A famous tract of Harirāma Tarkavagīsa of Navadvīpa (professor of Gadādhara goes by the name of Ratnakosavicāra and its copies are available in almost every manuscript library in India. It begins —परोक्षज्ञानं निश्चयात्मकमेवेति सिद्धान्तं रत्नकोषकारस्तु सत्प्रतिपक्षस्यलनदशायाम् सशयात्मकानुमितिं स्वीकरोति । (from an old copy in our possession) The whole passage has been cited and refuted by Gangeśa (Anumana pp 885 88) as well as by Manikantha (p 178) Describing a copy of Harirāma (or Gadadhara) elaborating this remarkable thesis of the Ratnakosa Hall wrote in 1859 (Index p 81) that its 'author has not been ascertained. Unfortunately he added the following note later on (p 202) 'I know of another work called Ratnakosa a collection of aphorisms of definition by one Pṛthivīdhara Ācārya'. This has misled scholars for the best part of a century to believe that Pṛthivīdhara was the author of the Ratnakosa cited by Gangeśa. An unintelligible aphorism of Pṛthivīdhara's Ratnakosa has been cited by Hall (चतुर्विधं साध्यं तत्त्वप्रमाणप्रकारसर्वात्मा Sāṅkhyasāra, Preface p 6, fn.). As numerous passages of the Ratnakoṣa cited by Gaṅgeśa are now available, it is beyond doubt that this latter work was a discursive treatise and did not consist of aphorisms at all. Rucidatta distinctly states in the following passage that the name of its author was Taraṇi Miśra —तथा च रत्नकोषे तरणिमिश्रैरुक्तम् एवमभावत्वध्वंसत्वादिकं बोध्यम् (Anumānaprakāśa, Īśvaravāda, printed in the appendix to Chowkh. ed. of Gādādhari, p 2015 two A. S. Mss fol 121b & 288a) While explaining the passage of the Ratnakoṣa cited in the Nyāyaratna of Maṇi-kaṇṭha (p 178) Vācaspati Miśra II notes तरणिमिश्रमतमाह (fol. 37b). It should, therefore, be taken as finally settled that the name of the long-lost Ratnakoṣa's author was Taraṇi Miśra.

There are six important passages of Ratnakoṣa cited by Vardhamāna in the Parīkṣāprakāśa (pp. 91, 105, 109, 110, 115 & 125). All of them belong to the section on Nigraha-sthāna Except in the last case Vardhamāna cited the passages with approval. There are four important passages of the Ratnakoṣa cited in the printed portion of the Nyāyabandhaprakāśa of Vardhamāna. In the first passage (p. 163 तत्तदन्ते ' अखण्डोपाधी' इति रत्नकोषइति; compare also Līlāvātiprakāśa p. 626) the peculiar view ascribed to the Ratnakoṣa and refuted by Vardhamāna is already cited under the heading अत्र केचिदाहुः by Gaṅgeśa himself (Pratyakṣa part, p 842) and also refuted by the latter. The second passage is much more important elucidating the basic doctrine underlying the first passage. It runs.—रत्नकोषकृतस्तु द्विविधं हि सामान्यं जातिरुपाधिश्च, समवेता जातिः असमवेतं चोपाधिसामान्यम् । अतएव भट्टपादे. जातेरन्यदेव अस्तत्वादिसामान्यं वनादिसामान्यवदभ्युपेतम् । यदाहुः—

योगिकानां यथा जातेरन्यत्सामान्यमिष्यते ।

तथा समूहसामान्यं जातं जातिविलक्षणम् ॥

(तन्त्रवार्तिके ३।३।२)

इति तथा च करणत्वमध्युपाधिसामान्यमित्याहुः । तत्र (pp. 194-5). It appears, however, that this Bhāṭṭa view was already accepted by Sivāditya Miśra (q v) and though Vardhamāna has not accepted it in the present passage he is distinctly cited by Pragalbha as advocating the selfsame view (Anumāna-Pragalbha fol. 182a) — न चापसिद्धान्तं जातिभिन्नस्याखण्डरूपसामान्यस्योपाये । वदमानचरणासिसूत्रातत्त्वबोधेऽभिहितत्वात् । The next passage (p 341) cites a denition of the term Vāda from the Ratnakosa तस्मान्नाभेपूजाद्यातोऽनुदिश्य प्रवर्तितत्त्व चावलक्षणमिति रत्नकोषकार । तत्र । The last passage (p 468) is also a remarkable one, Vardhamāna refers to it at the end of a quotation from his father Gangeśa and rejects it thus — एतेन सयोगो विशेषणता च द्वयी प्रत्यासत्तिर्न च समवायादिचतुष्टयमिति रत्नकोषकृन्मतमयुक्तम् । Gangeśa cited this anonymously (Pratyaksa p. 653 under Samavāya) Gangeśa's indebtedness to the Ratnakosa is clearly stated by Vācaspati Miśra II : the refutation (ib. p 846) of Gangeśa according to him follows the view point of the Ratnakosa रत्नकोषदिशा दूयति—तन्नेति (Pratyaksamamprākāśa, fol 59a)

Vardhamāna has also referred to the Ratnakosa in the Līlavatīprakāśa. The passage on the section on Fallacy is reproduced below as a typical instance of the intricate style of the author.

अर्थान्तरोपनायकस्मृत्यादिसहकारिता सामान्यत एव प्रत्यभिज्ञादौ क्लृप्ता, तदिह सद्ब्याप्तिपक्षधर्मताकलिङ्गपरामर्शस्यासदर्थकाञ्चनमयत्वादिसमृतिसहकारिवशाद् यत्राभासयोःकारणत्वं तत्राभास प्रयक् । मैवम् । (Chowk ed, pp. 608-9 . Bhāgīratha notes, रत्नकोषकृन्मतमाराद्धते)

There are three passages in the Tattvāloka of Vācaspati Miśra II referring to Taruṃ Miśra. Under I. u. 7 we find सचर्षं तु तुल्यफलबोधितसाध्यविपर्ययत्वमिति तरुणिमित्रा । तत्र । There is an illuminating passage under II. 1. 38, which is also cited below fully as a typical instance of the style and scholarship of the great author

There is another long passage of Tarāṇi Mīśra under II. i. 63 (fol. 130a), where Vācaspati II made an elaborate treatment of Vidhivāda (foll. 123-33).

Saṅkara Mīśra recorded an original view of the Ratnaśoṣa admitting a fourth kind of Kathā (Vādivinoda, p. 2) and cited its definition of the fallacy प्रकरणसम (ib, p. 17). It should be mentioned here that Gaṅgeśa has finally accepted the definition of the term Upādhi given by the Ratnaśoṣa (p. 336 : लक्षणं तु सर्ववसित्त्वं). That Gaṅgeśa refers to the Ratnaśoṣakāra in the very last definition cited by him in the Pūrvapakṣa (pp. 331-33) is clearly stated by both Sārvabhauma (fol. 94) and Jayadeva (Āloka, fol. 34b), though Maṇikanṭha (p. 86) is not quite clear on the point. It is likely that Gaṅgeśa adopted a chronological order in citing and criticising the eight definitions in the Pūrvapakṣa. If so, it may be also surmised that Tarāṇi Mīśra came slightly after Maṇikanṭha and all of them were more or less contemporaries. Tarāṇi Mīśra should, therefore, be living about 1300 A. D.

SONDAḌOPĀDHYĀYA (also spelt SONDALA)¹: This superior scholar of Mithilā has been immortalised by Gaṅgeśa or more correctly by the scholiasts of Gaṅgeśa as the proponent of an exceptional kind of Negation 'whose counterpositiveness is determined by an essence pertaining to a different substratum' (न्याधिकरणधर्मावच्छिन्नप्रतियोगिताकः) and which is, therefore, universally existent. Sondaḍa consequently rejects in a manner the doctrine of Anyathākhyāti (erroneous conception) advocated by orthodox Nyāya scholars. Gaṅgeśa refers to this amazing kind of Negation in the Vyāptivāda and rejects it concisely. Sārvabhauma notes at the beginning of the particular section. तत्र केवलान्वयिनि सौदंडीया केवलान्वयिसाध्यामावप्रतिद्विसाराङ्कते—अथेति । (Anumānāmāṇuparīkṣā, fol. 13a). The arguments against Sondaḍa were elaborated by Yajñapati and Jayadeva, but Śiromaṇi raised issues on the problem, concluding practically with an admission of that kind of negation, which marked one of the advanced courses of Navyanyāya studies and contributed to the fame and popularity of Sondaḍa, who started the debate.

According to the scholiasts, Gaṅgeśa had referred to Sondaḍa in many other places. We shall soon see under Maṇikanṭha that in the Upādhivāda (p. 317-22) the views cited and refuted under the heading अन्ये were ascribed to 'Saundaḍa' by Gadādhara (p. 916). In the section on Ākāṅkṣā (pp. 202-4) Sondaḍa's definition of that term has been cited and refuted by Gaṅgeśa.

In the Vidhivāda again a passage of Sondaḍa has been cited twice (Śabdakhanda, Pt. II, pp. 24 & 276), the last time under the heading नव्यास्तु. This proves that Sondaḍa, like Maṇikanṭha, was only slightly senior to Gaṅgeśa. A line in the pramāṇyavāda (p. 221 ?) is a refutation of Sondaḍa according to Vidyānivāsa (49b).

1 Vide, Sondala Upādhyāya Kaviraja, Ś B, Studies, Vol II, p 199f.

Mathurānātha in his commentary on Gāṅgeśa has cited two passages of Sondadopādhyāya, not found elsewhere. The first is a definition of Kevalānvayi (B. I ed., p 575), which has been ascribed, wrongly as far as we have ascertained, in some copies to Upādhyāya i.e. Yājñapati, in whose work it is not traceable. There is another passage of Sondada cited by Mathurānātha under Vidhivada (p. 217).

An intricate passage in the Siddhānta-portion of the section on Parāmarsa (pp. 508-9., beginning with अथ यो यत्र) is cited from Sondada, for Sārvabhauma clearly notes here सोन्दडीय समाधिमाशङ्कते—अथेति (Anumānamaniparīkṣā, fol. 131a), Sārvabhauma also quotes a long passage towards the end of the section on Bādha as from Sondada and others (fol. 205a इति वदन्ति सोन्दडप्रभृतयः). The following interesting passage is found in the Tattvāloka of Vācaspati Miśra II under I : 22, where various views about salvation (Apavarga) have been cited and discussed सोन्दडोपाध्यायास्तु—य एव परदुःखस्यात्यन्ताभावः । स एव सुखदुःखप्रागभावोऽपि । तस्माच्च यदा ते सहकारिसम्पन्ना भवन्ति तदा दुःखं जनयन्ति नो चेत् पण्डा एवेति युक्ता प्रग्रज्या । न च परदुःखस्यात्यन्ताभावेऽपि स्वदुःखप्रागभावतादत्तमे तस्य च प्रतियोग्युत्पत्तौ नष्टत्वे परदुःखस्यात्यन्ताभावोऽपि नश्येत् अन्यथा विरुद्धधर्माध्यासे तन्नो भिद्यतेति वाच्यम्, परदेहावच्छेदेन नष्टस्यापि तदभाववच्छेदेनानष्टत्वान् । नैवम् । (London I. O. copy, fol 63a). A Smārta scholar of Bengal named Kṛpārāma Tarkavāgīśa composed a large treatise named Navyadharma-pradīpa in 1686 Śaka (i.e. 1764-5 A.D.) In the explanation of the well-known Mīmāṃsā argument called हेतुवन्निगद occurs the following passage —न चार्थवादप्राप्तस्य कथं विधिविषयत्वमिति वाच्यम्, अभिधेयवृत्तस्यास्तावत्त्वे अर्थवादस्य प्रसङ्गोत्पत्तेः । ननु तस्य विधेयत्वं लभ्यते एव यत्तु यत्ते तद्विधेयमिति न्यायादिति सोन्दडोपाध्यायकृत्तिका । (Ms No. 1602 of Vāṅgīya Sāhitya Paṇḍit, Calcutta, fol 84a cf. Śabdakhaṇḍa, n, pp 509-12) Sondada was regarded in his times as the supreme leader of the social hierarchy in Mithilā.

This important fact is stated in a remarkable passage in the Tattvanirnaya of Paksadharopādhyāya (fl 1400 A.D.), a very rare Smṛti work. It runs—अत्र च महाज(न)ना सोन्दलीपाध्याया(न)-मन्येपा च व्यवहार उपष्टम्भक इत्याहु (fol 26a of a fragment preserved in the Mithilā Institute, under the topic of Sapindīkarana to be performed on the 12th day)

Sondada's date can be safely placed about 1300 A.D., as he was regarded as a 'recent' scholar by both Manikantha and Gangeśa. The memory of his social supremacy was still alive in 1400 A.D. and the intricate nature of his style and arguments betray a comparatively late age. We are not inclined, therefore, to place him before 1275 A.D.

MANIKANTHA MIŚRA One of the greatest and latest authorities of Navyanyāya consulted by Gangeśa, who appears to have been profoundly influenced by him. The only existing treatise by him named Nyāyaratna has been fortunately published recently in the Madras Govt. Oriental series with ■ commentary by Nṛsiṃhayajvan (1953 pp 249 with Introd etc.) It roughly covers the same ground as the Anu-māna part of Gangeśa with which it bears a very fruitful comparison. It ■ divided into 13 sections and the latter half of the book is taken up by an elaborate treatment of all the varieties of debates and fallacies including at the very end a small section on the Mahāvidyā syllogisms. It has been stated in the English Introduction (p xxxi) that 'priority between Gangeśa and Manikantha cannot be proved, though it has been surmised on good grounds in the Sanskrit introduction (p 109) that Manikantha slightly preceded Gangeśa. The following evidences on the point, some of which we had published about a decade ago (G Jha R I Journ., Vol IV, ■ 300) prove conclusively that Manikantha preceded Gangeśa and the fact was known to earlier Navyanyāya scholars

(1) In the Siddhānta portion of the Upādhivāda Gaṅgeśa cited a passage under the caption अन्ये तु (B. I. ed., pp. 365-69). Vāsudeva Sārvabhauma distinctly notes here that the reference is to Maṇikanṭha—मणिकण्ठीयं मतमाह—अन्ये त्विति (Sarasvatī-Bhavana Ms. of Sārvabhauma's Anumānamanipariṣā, fol. 106b). As a matter of fact the first portion of the passage is found in the Nyāyaratna (p 92) Gaṅgeśa did not actually controvert the views expressed in the passage, but according to a well-known convention among philosophical authors all passages ascribed to others are not their own and scholiasts invariably try to bring out the unexpressed defects . In the present case also Sārvabhauma has criticised Maṇikanṭha on behalf of Gaṅgeśa (fol. 107-8 इदं मणिकण्ठमतमन्ये त्विति कृत्वा स्वासंमतमावेदयतां मणिकृतामयमभिसन्धिः :—).

(2) Under the heading यत्तु Gaṅgeśa cited and criticised a definition in the very next passage (pp. 369-74), which immediately followed by a passage of केचित्तु (p. 375) without any criticism. This latter is also taken from Maṇikanṭha (Nyāyaratna, p. 94) and Sārvabhauma remarks to clear the somewhat anomalous reference (fol. 108b) —यत्त्विति मतं स्वमतेन दूषयित्वा अन्येत्यिति प्रव्रान्त-मणिकण्ठमतेन दूषयति केचित्त्विति ।...अयमेव सन्दर्भः । अन्यथा अन्येत्यिति कृत्वा मणिकण्ठमतमभिधाय पुनः केचिदिति वन्मताभिधानं पृथक् न युज्येत ।

(3) In the section on Parāmarśa the passage पृथक् च द्विमन्त्रस्मरणं तत्र नास्ति किं तु व्याप्त्यवच्छेदकतयेति चेत्—न । (p 507) is a refutation by Gaṅgeśa of Maṇikanṭha's views (Nyāyaratna, p. 120, lines 9-10), as stated by Sārvabhauma (fol. 130b : मणिकण्ठसमाधिमाह— पृथगिति).

(4) A definition of Savyabhicāra, one of the fallacies, has been cited and criticised by Gaṅgeśa (pp. 812-13 : नापि पञ्चातिरिक्त- इत्यादि). It exactly occurs in the Nyāyaratna (p. 166) and we are again indebted to Sārvabhauma for the information (fol. 189b : मणिकण्ठीयं लक्षणं दूषयति—नापि पञ्चातिरिक्तेति).

We should mention here that the first two passages referred to above are quoted more exactly by Vardhamāna and in a combined form in the Kusumāñjaliprakāśa (III, p 36) and what is much more important the first passage is also quoted in Vardhamāna's Pramānaprakāśa (p 691) under the heading सप्रदायविदस्तु Vardhamāna it should be noted wrote all his works after taking lessons directly from his father and Manikantha was to them ■ recognised authority of the school of Navya-nyāya This is amply borne out by Gangeśa's borrowings from Manikantha in every section common in their works We shall cite some instances It was Manikantha who first controverted the well known retort of Śrīharsa against Udayana (in the section on Tarka, p. 19) Gangeśa reproduced the argument of Manikantha and added to it (p 233) There cannot be any doubt that Gangeśa formulated his famous definition of the term Vyāpti (known as Siddhāntalakṣaṇa p 100) on the basis of Manikantha's own definition (p 55) Gangeśa's section on Upādhyabhāsa (pp 398-405) is wholly borrowed from Manikantha (pp 105-108) many of whose passages (including an important one of the Mānamanohara as noted in the commentary, pp 106-7) have been omitted by him. Similar borrowings can be detected in the sections on Avayava and Hetvābhāsa It should be noticed that Gangeśa has entirely omitted the sections on Kathā, Chala, Jāti, Nigrahasthāna and Mahāvīdyā found in the Nyāyaratna.

We should refer to one more passage, which has an important bearing on Manikantha's probable age In the section on Upādhyavāda (pp 82-3) Manikantha cited and refuted the views of a scholar under the heading नवीनास्तु Gangeśa cited the same views under the heading अन्ये तु and almost exactly reproduced the arguments of Manikantha in their refutation (pp 317-22) with an additional argument of his own at the end According to Gadādhara (Chowkh ed , p. 916) the views refuted by Gangeśa in the passage under discussion were of Sondaḍopādhyāya. Though no other scholiast has mentioned this fact so categorically it is supported indirectly by Yajñapati whose words have been reproduced by Pragalbha : व्यधिकरणधर्मावच्छिन्नप्रतियोगिकाभाववादिनामेवेदं मतम्..... इत्यपि वदन्ति (Anumāna Pragalbhī, fol. 33a). So also Sārvabhauma upon the same passage साधनाव्यापकतया अभावस्तु व्यधिकरणधर्मावच्छिन्नप्रतियोगिक इति यज्ञपतिमतम् (fol. 91a), as well as Jayadeva in the Āloka (fol. 33a). As Sondaḍa has been cited by Gaṅgeśa also under the epithet नय्यास्तु (Vidhivāda p. 276), both Maṇikanṭha and Gaṅgeśa were slightly removed from the times of Sondaḍa and all the three great scholars thus become more or less contemporaries, a fact of supreme importance for the purposes of chronology.

There cannot be any question that a scholar referred to by Vardhamāna as 'Sampradāyavid' belonged to Mithilā. In fact, a copy of the Nyāyaratna in the Telugu characters preserved at Tanjore (Cat., p. 4735-7) mentions in the colophon, unfortunately corrupt in reading, that Maṇikanṭha was a 'Tīrabhukṭiya' Miśra and was the Judicial chief of a certain king. The exact reading of the colophon runs तिरगुन्तियगिभोक्तु—राजधर्माधिकारिमणिकण्ठकृतन्यायरत्नं नाम प्रकरणं समाप्तम् । There was a conjunct consonant (ञ्क ?) in the gap bored through by insects. The other copy in Grantha character was evidently only a transcript, more corrupt in reading, of the Telugu copy. It may be surmised that the book was written at the court of a foreign kingdom (Uttaramuṣka ?) outside Mithilā, a Maithilī author would not describe himself as Tīrabhukṭiya in his own country. Maṇikanṭha may thus be among the band of scholars who carried the banners of Mithilā in other provinces.

In Mithilā also Maṇikanṭha's name was respectfully mentioned by eminent scholars. Vācaspati Miśra II wrote a commentary on the Nyāyaratna; we have given an account of this interesting work in a subsequent chapter. Śaṅkara Miśra quoted Manikanṭha's definitions of three Nigrahasthānas (अप्रतिभा, मतानुज्ञा, पर्यनुयोज्योपेक्षणम्) in the Vādivinoda (pp. 35 6). Yajña-pati's son Narahari Uādhyāya in the section on Pakṣatā attempted to answer an adverse criticism of his father by his teacher Jayadeva and quoted Manikantha in his own support —न च तत्र पक्षताविरहव्यवहार एव नास्तीति बान्धुं मणिकण्ठेन पक्षताविरहप्रदर्शनात् . साधकमानेति वदतो गणेशस्यापि स्वरसाञ्च । (Tanjore Ms No. 10944 of Anu-mānadūsanoddhāra, fol 70a). Jayadeva's nephew Vāsudeva in his turn attacked Narahari and concluded his argument with the humorous line चिन्तामणिमनालोच्य मणिकण्ठप्रदर्शनमिति (London, I O. copy of Vāsudeva's Chintāmanitika, fol 44b). All these references prove that inspite of Gangeśa's epochmaking treatise Manikantha's work continued to be studied in Mithilā for a long time and it enjoyed a pan Indian popularity, as its copies are preserved in almost all Mss libraries of India. It is rather surprising that an 18th century scholar of South India commented on it, the published commentary was written under a monarch Cāmarāja (of Mysore) who ruled late in the 18th century (Nyāyaratna, p 7, Introd, p. xxxiv).

"Manikanṭha had written another book named NYĀYACINTĀMANI twice quoted by him in the Nyāyaratna (pp 108 and 220). The name of this lost work has been printed as Nayacintāman, but the variant (printed in p. 220 f. n) is in our opinion the correct one. For, Vācaspati Miśra II in his commentary on the first passage quotes from this lost work and concludes .—अथ च विवक्षितविवेको भया न्यायचिन्तामणौ कृत इति उत एवाप्यवसेयमित्यर्थः । (B.O R.I. Ms No. 775 of 1884 87, fol 25a). The two references prove that it was a more elaborate work, covering partly at least the same ground as the Nyāyaratna. It was apparently superseded by Gangeśa's work bearing almost the same name. We believe a careful search among the large number of manuscripts of Gangeśa's work may lead to the discovery of the long lost Cintāman of Manikanṭha.

Like all Navyanyāya authors of the period Manikantha quotes Udayana more frequently than any other authority, the Nyāyapañiṣṭa of Udayana has been cited a dozen times towards the end in the sections on Jāti and Nigrahasthāna (from p. 202) and what is somewhat surprising, mostly criticised. The Kusumāñjali is also cited and refuted once (p. 81). Next to Udayana the Khandanakāra was reckoned with by Manikantha and refuted four times (pp. 19, 39, 155 and 173). But the most important reference found in Manikantha is to the Ratnakośakāra (pp. 86 & 178). As far as our present knowledge goes, the Ratnakośa is cited by Manikantha alone among pre Gangeśa authorities.

Among original views of Manikantha we need only refer to two remarkable ones. Like Śiromaṇi he has rejected Samānyalaksanā (pp. 63-67), thus aligning himself for once with the Prabhākara school. Gangeśa's separate section upon that term finally establishes it as a fundamental doctrine of the Nyāya philosophy. Manikantha's commentator Vācaspati Miśra II, therefore attempts a compromise (fol. 14b अत्र प्रामाणिका तस्मान्नाय ग्रन्थ सामान्यलक्षणाखण्डनपर, किंतु पूर्वोक्तयुक्तिमात्रखण्डनपर इत्याहुः ।) According to Manikantha again Anupasamhāra is not a third variety of the fallacy named Savyabhicāra as established by Gangeśa but is included in the Vyāpyatvāsiddha (pp. 165, 171-2).

ŚAŚADHARĀCĀRYA One of the authorities consulted by Gangeśa. For it is definitely stated by Vidyānīvāsa Bhaṭṭācārya in the Pratyākṣasamanīkā (Sarasvatī Bhavana Ms., fol. 22a) that Gangeśa refuted the views of Śaśadhara in a well known passage of the Mangalavāda (B. I. ed., p. 110): विष्णुपुराणानुसारि शृङ्गधरीयत्नचक्षुमाह-यत्तु रागेति । It should be noticed that Gangeśa in the passage under discussion has put in a nutshell of two lines the substance of a whole paragraph of Śaśadhara (pp. 18-20). The Nyāyasiddhāntadīpa, of Saśdhara has been published with a commentary (Varanasi, 1924 pp 652), though the edition is full of lacunas and incomplete towards the end. It is possible now to assess the value of Saśdhara's work as contrasted with Gangeśa's classic. It is a collection of 26 separate tracts on important topics of the Nyāya, arranged rather loosely. Benediction (pp 1-37) is followed by Darkness (pp ~37-78) and Luminous Gold (pp 299-319) by Partial Etymology of words (pp 320-49) without any relevancy. The commentary attempted to answer Gangeśa's criticism (vide Gangeśa's Isvaravāda, B I ed, p 96-8) of Saśadhar's views in some places (e.g. p 140 इत्यादि चिन्तामणिरुक्तो दूषणमलप्रकम् & p 141 इति गङ्गेशदूषणमलप्रक वेदितव्यम्). But the commentator is quite wrong when he supposes in one place (p 198) that Saśadhar anticipated Gangeśa. There cannot be any question that Saśadhar preceded Gangeśa as can be easily proved by a comparison of their respective views on common topics. The Vyaptivāda of Saśadhar (pp 379-410) examines about a score of definitions of the term Vyapti, of which the fifth one, among many others, exactly corresponds with a definition found in Gangeśa's Pūrvapakṣa (B I ed, p 84). Similarly another intricate definition is examined by both (Saśadhar p 395 & Gangeśa p 72). But Gangeśa's treatment of the topic is far more advanced, methodical and extensive. Saśadhar cited towards the end of his tract (p. 406-7) a view ascribed in the commentary to a certain 'Jaraṇarāyāyika', which is found almost exactly in the Vyāptipañcaka.

It should be mentioned in this connection that Gangeśa cited two similar definitions ascribed universally to two scholars, who were celebrated for their invincible career as dialecticians by the nicknames 'Lion' and 'Tiger' and Gangeśa's passage on the point, which subsequently developed into a large section, came to be known as Simha-Vyāghrī. What were the actual names of the two scholars has not been stated by any scholiast. But in the seminaries of Mithilā and Bengal their names are given out as Śaśadhara (sometimes Śaśidhara) and Maṇidhara. The present work of Śaśadhara does not exactly contain that definition. But the fact remains that Professor Lion's definition was based on 'anonyābhāva' (vide Jayadeva's Āloka on the passage अन्योन्यत्यन्ताभावभेदेन लक्षणद्वयमाशङ्क्य निषेधति—जापोति fol. 6b of a Ms. in our possession). And Śaśadhara's own view was also on that same basis (p. 405). At any rate it is beyond any doubt that Gaṅgeśa's reference was to two scholars of his own region. Vidyabhūṣana (I c pp. 207-8) made a very curious suggestion that the reference was to two Jaina scholars of Western India named Ānanda Sūri and Amarcandra Sūri. This is on the face of it improbable. The above-named Jaina scholars could never command circulation of their unknown works in Eastern India and they were not certainly so famous as to influence a superior scholar like Gaṅgeśa who, as a matter of fact, has nowhere referred to any Jaina authority in his work. Moreover, the two Jaina scholars were given the titles 'Tiger cub' and 'Lion-cub' respectively in their boyhood by the famous Siddharāja (1093 A.D.) and not exactly 'Lion' and 'Tiger'.

वाल्मेयि निदलितवादिगजो जगद्
यौ व्याघ्रसिंहशिशुकाविति सिद्धराज ।

(From Udayaprabha's Dharmābhyudaya Peterson's 3rd Rep., App. I, pp. 16-19)

In the Īśvarānumāna Gaṅgeśa covers the same ground as does Śaśadhara in the six tracts viz. Īśvaravāda proper (Gaṅgeśa pp. 1-87), Bahajāśaktivāda (pp. 87-134) Ādheyaśaktivāda (pp. 134-148) Kāranatāvāda (pp. 148-155) Muktivāda (pp. 156-148) and Jñānakarmasamuccayavāda (pp. 184-95) and many passages of Gaṅgeśa can be traced in Śaśadhara. For instance, कामिनीचरण. of Gaṅgeśa (p. 145) is a clear improvement upon Śaśadhara (pp. 158-9) and the next passage (p. 145 : नापि ताग्रकास्यादौ) is also borrowed from Śaśadhara (p. 160).

Gangesa has similarly borrowed phrases from Śaśadhara in many other topics

Sasadhara's date can be fairly fixed from the following evidence. Śaśadhara has approvingly quoted a Kārikā (V 7) of the Kusumāñjali under Vidhivāda (p 438) and has criticised Srivallabha's definition of Vyāpti (p 385) Moreover, Sivāditya's peculiar views on Darkness are cited by him (p 76 नीलरूपारोपविशिष्टस्तेजःसत्तर्गभावस्तम् इति केचित्) The commentary correctly notes शिवादित्यमतमाह-नीलरूपेति It should be noticed that Sasadhara has amplified the aphoristic words of Śivāditya as found in the Saptapadārthi (आरोपितनीलरूपोऽभावोऽन्धकारः p 84 Cal Sans Series) There is one more important reference in the section on the Luminosity of Gold Sasadhara cited and refuted an argument of Vadivāgisvara (author of the Māna-manohara as the commentary correctly notes p 305) All the above references prove that Sasadhara cannot be placed before the 13th century A D and probably lived about 1300 A D He is not mentioned by Citsukha nor even by the latter's very well informed commentator, Pratyakṣvarūpa His elaborate and intricate style of reasoning, which verges sometimes on that of Gangeśa himself points him out as an elderly contemporary of the latter The fact that his work survived even after the epoch making book of Gangeśa seems to show that his fame as an invincible dialectician lingered long in Mithilā and even Jayadeva wrote notes on his work as proved by a Ms (not however examined by us) preserved at Varanasi (S B Studies III, p 136)

It is stated in the Introduction of the printed edition of Śaśadhara's work 'from hearsay' (श्रुते), that Śaśadhara belonged to the Maunasa (1) gotra and was the son of Dhananīdāra and grandson of Mahēśvara Pandita, he had a brother Prithvī-dharācārya by name The whole of it seems to be a canard Hearsay in the present century cannot record so many exact details about a scholar of the 13th century

NĀRĀYAṆA SARVAJÑA. In the Vidyāsāgarī commentary of the Khaṇḍana by the great Vedāntic scholar Ānandapūrṇa occurs the following passage (Chowkh ed, p. 714) — अत इति । व्याप्यनिरुक्तौ व्यापकत्वानिरुक्तेरेषेत्यर्थः । साध्यवन्निष्ठात्यन्ताभावाप्रतियोगित्वं साध्यव्यापकत्व साधनवन्निष्ठात्यन्ताभावप्रतियोगित्वं साधनाव्यापकत्वमिति नारायणसर्वज्ञमतमपि निरस्तम्, व्याप्यसिद्धौ साध्यसाधनभावसिद्धेरिति द्रष्टव्यम् । ननु च साधनाव्यापकत्वमपि सर्वत्र निश्चेतुं शक्यमित्यस्मात्प्रागिदं वक्तव्यम् । सत्यम् । अन्यार्थ उपदेशतोऽवगन्तव्य इति अभिप्रेत्य व्यवहितसंबन्धितया कस्यादोष इति ॥ Here Ānandapūrṇa has cited Udayana's definition of Upādhi as improved by a scholar named Nārāyaṇa Sarvajña. This improved version was unknown to the Khaṇḍana-kāra, whose argument however is hurled against the improvement by Ānandapūrṇa with some hesitation. It should be noticed that Gaṅgeśa at the very beginning of his Upādhivāda cited this version and refuted it (B. I ed, p. 296), though none of his scholasts mentioned the name of Nārāyaṇa as its author. Ānandapūrṇa (c 1350 A. D.) was thus quite unaware of the far more advanced views on the subject found in Gaṅgeśa's work.

This Nārāyaṇa Sarvajña may be identical with Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa a famous commentator on the Manusamhitā, who has been cited about a hundred times in the Dandaviveka of Navya-Vardhamāna. He was later than Govindarāja and preceded Kullūkabhaṭṭa, according to Rāghavānanda Sarasvatī, another commentator (Buhler's Introd, S. B E, pp cxxviii ix) He was more probably a contemporary of Kullūka and belonged to the 13th century A. D.

Śaṅkara Miśra in the Upaskāra (p 329 under VII, n. 10) cited and refuted the views of one Sarvajña (इति सर्वज्ञेन यदुक्तं) on the term 'Vibhāga'. It is probable that this unknown Vaiśeṣika scholar is also identical with Nārāyaṇa Sarvajña. Navya-Vardhamāna calls him Nārāyaṇa, Śaṅkara calls him Sarvajña, Anandapūrṇa calls him Nārāyaṇa Sarvajña and in the Manu-ṭīkā he is Sarvajña Nārāyaṇa. Evidently one person is meant by all these variants of a name. The lexicographer of the same name cited by Rāyamukṣa and the author of the Bhāratapra-kāśa (on the Mahābhārata) should also be mentioned in this connection.

MURĀRI MIŚRA As is well known Gangeśa in the Prāmānyavāda refuted the views successively of Prabhākara, Bhatta and Miśra and Vardhamāna in the Kusumāñjaliprakāśa (II, p 9) mentioned the full name as Murāri Miśra. In the Īśvaravāda also (B. I. ed pp 114 15) Gangeśa referred to his views summarised by Vardhamāna (Kusumāñjaliprakāśa, I, p 49) In both these cases Murāri held views opposed to both Bhatta and Prabhākara though he was himself a Mīmāṃsā scholar and this has earned for him the celebrated adage 'Murāri s is the third way' (गुरारेस्तृतीय पन्था) His views on the problem of the apprehension of valid knowledge has been traced in Murāri's commentary named Tripadīnītināyanam on Mīm Sūtra I. ii iv (Poona Ms dated 1644 V S, fol. 18 vide Dr Miśra's monograph on Murāri, p 10) Another tract of Murāri named Angatītanirukṭi is also available in print In the commentary Murāri has referred to the Vivaraṇa (of Prabhākara) the Viveka (i.e. Nayaviveka of Bhavanātha) the Pañjikā (of Śalikanātha) and the Paribhāṣā Among authors the notable names are Candra Nandana and Śrīkara The mention of Śrīkara and Candra proves that his date falls after the 12th century A.D. As he is not mentioned by any author before Gangeśa there is hardly any doubt that he flourished in the 13th century. This is confirmed by the fact that Gangeśa quoted him in the Īśvaravāda under the caption 'Navyāstu' (p 114) He was undoubtedly one of the authors who greatly influenced Gangeśa, as he admitted in the line गुरुभिर्ज्ञात्वा गुरुणा मतम् । He evidently belonged to Mithilā, where in the pre-Gangeśa period he was universally known as 'Miśra'. The editor of the Līlāvātī (Chowkh. ed.) confused him in the index with a much later 'Miśra', who commented upon Vardhamāna.

JAGADGURU a hitherto unknown scholar who came after Udayana and before Gaṅgeśa. A passage in the Īśvara-vāda (II I ed. p. 29) begins अन्ये तु अनुसूतकृतिसमवायित्वं कर्तव्यम् The Īśvaravāda section of Gaṅgeśa is unfortunately neglected by Navyanyāya scholars due to the extreme popularity of Udayana's Kusumāñjali. Jayadeva and his pupil Rucidatta commented on this section only concisely. The only scholar who subjected the section to a detailed examination is, as far as we have ascertained, Pragalbhācārya, whose commentary on this section (foll. 147 208) covers more than a quarter of of the whole Anumāna part. Pragalbha informs us that the above passage refers to a scholar named Jagadguru जगद्गुरुमत-मुपन्यस्यति-अन्ये इति (fol. 157b of Sarasvatī-Bhavana copy of Anumāna-Pragalbhi) Apparently Jagadguru had written a commentary on the Kusumāñjali, from which the above passage was cited by Gaṅgeśa.

There is evidence that this Jagadguru had also commented on the Kīrṇāvalī. We have traced the following quotation in the Dravyaviveka of Pakṣadhara, which is an extremely rare sub commentary on the Dravyakīrṇāvalī-prakāśa of Vardhamāna. Commenting on the line निरस्तैवद्वीपवर्तिरविरिमज्जालस्य कालविशेषस्य रात्रित्वात् (Kīrṇāvalīprakāśa, B I ed., p. 2) Pakṣadhara writes विशेषेति—कार्यद्रव्याधारत्वं विशेषः । नन्येतद्द्वीपपदेन जन्वूद्वीपमुच्यते । तत्र च न रविरिमज्जालनिरासः मेरुत्तरदिशि तत्सत्त्वात् । किं च, महान्धकारे रात्रावपि पाकादिदर्शनादादित्यरिमसत्त्वावधारणादिसिद्धिरपीति चेत्—न, एतद्द्वीपपदेन भारतसरण्डस्यैव विवक्षणात् । अतएव “रात्रिज्ञानं” चेत्पादितमोवादस्थले स्वफल्गि(का) व्यापुर्नता जगद्गुरुणा प्रकाशयता च द्वीपो भारतं वर्षमित्यभिहितम् । (Fol. 3a-b of the unique London L. O. copy of the book). The passage of the Kirnāvalī in the section on Darkness occurs on p 19 of the Chowkh ed vide p 104 of B. I. ed for Vardhamāna's note). It is now apparent that Vardhamāna was indebted to Jagadguru for his explanation of the word द्वेष in the above passage of Udayana. We have cited the above passage from Paksadhara in full as a typical instance of valuable historical materials relating to Sanskrit literature still lying hidden in obscure books in manuscript.

Brief reference should be made of some other predecessors of Gangeśa about whom much is not known. In the Mangalavāda of the Tattvacintāmaṇi (B I ed, p 72) Gangeśa attributes a view to 'others' (अपरे तु) Pragalbha alone identifies these 'others' with Raviśvara. cf रवीश्वरमत दूषयितुमुपन्यस्यति—अपरे इति (Pratyaksa Pragalbhi, ASB Ms, 15b). The same has been ascribed to Raviśvara by Śeṣānanta in his commentary on Saśadhara's Nyāyasiddhāntadīpa. One Nyāya-bhāskarakāra also preceded Gangeśa according to Kanāda Tarkavāgiśa. Gangeśa, is said to refer to this little known author in the Savyabhicāra section (अथ साध्यसशयजनकोटिद्वयोपस्थापकचर्मताज्ञानविषयत्वे सति हेत्वभिमत स . Tattvacintāmaṇi, Anumāna part p 789-90) cf. मास्तरहस्यस्य दूषयितुमुत्थापयति—अयेति (A S B. Ms, 166b). Again यत्त्वय पृथिवीत्यनुभव in the Pratyaksakhanda, Jñaptivāda (p 268) has a complex syllogistic argument attached to it. Vācaspati II attributes this to Bhāskarakāra (cf Cintāmaniprakāśa, Baranasi Ms 23a) Gangeśa quoted the opinions of Vatsesvara, the Mīmāṃsaka of the Prābhākara school, to whom the Mīmāṃsāmaharṇava is attributed. (Pratyakṣa-Pragalbhi, ASB Ms, 88b).

We want to conclude this chapter with Harinātha Upādhyāya. He seems to be the youngest of the Naiyāyikas alluded to by Gangeśa. The definition of 'himsā' has been criticised in the Śabdakhanda, Vidhivāda section of the Tattvacintāmaṇi. There a passage begins with अपरे तु अनभिसहितनरान्तरध्यापार-मद्वारोक्त्य मरणसाधनं हिंसा...तत्र 1...(pp. 222-4). Māthurānātha clearly attributes this to Harinātha. We have examined the older commentary, the Śabdamañiprakāśa of Haridāsa Nyāyā-lamkāra on this passage. There also occurs the following introductory remark, हरिनाथमवमाह (Navadvīpa Ms, 76b). In fact, there is a Smṛti digest of Harinātha, which contains almost the same passage as quoted by Gaṅgeśa. cf. तत्र नरान्तराव्यापाराव्यवहित-प्राणवियोगफलकव्यापारकर्ता साक्षाद् वधी...। अतो व्यापारहेतुभूताभिसन्धाना-विषयनरान्तराव्यापारानपेक्षमरणजनकव्यापारो वधः। इत्कर्ता वधीत्यर्थः (A S B Ms, f. 110). Gaṅgeśa here used 'vadhah' for 'himsā'. It may be added that Bhavadeva (c. 1100 A. D.) also discussed the definition of 'hanana' in his Prāyaścittaprakaraṇa (pp. 1-8). But the discussion of Harinātha and Gaṅgeśa is more advanced and intricate.

CHAPTER III

GAṄGEŚA UPĀDHYĀYA & HIS SON VARDHAMĀNA

Gaṅgeśa's achievement is quite unique in the history of philosophical literature in India. There is not another scholar, in the whole medieval period who had such a spectacular success through one single book. The Tattvacintāmaṇi, a treatise of about 12000 granthas in extent, appeared like a flash to dispel the gloom of centuries succeeding Udayana and laid the solid foundation of Indian dialectics. When a devotee of the belles-lettres encountered him on an occasion Gaṅgeśa is said to have uttered the following magnificent bravado . . .

अनारवाद्य गौडीमनाराध्य गौरीं बिना तन्त्रमन्त्रैर्यिना शब्दधौर्मात् ।

प्रसिद्धप्रबुद्धप्रबन्धप्रवक्ता विरिञ्चिप्रपञ्चे मदन्यः कविः कः ॥

This accords well with his confident assertion at the commencement of his work that he was the 'presiding professor of philosophical conclusions' (सिद्धान्तदीक्षागुरुः). The book divided into four grand parts after the four means of valid knowledge propounded by Gotama has a total of 46 broad sections (12+17+1+16) exclusively dealing with the single topic of Pramāṇa (प्रमाणतत्त्वमत्र विविच्यते). This well-knit marshalling of all relevant dissertations (vādas) into a single comprehensive treatise took the learned world by storm and in course of time single sentences of Gaṅgeśa, such as the Vyāptipañcaka, developed into separate works of considerable length. The number of sub-sections, therefore, will now count well over two hundred. The book has been ably summarised by Vidyābhūṣaṇa (l. c., pp. 407-453).

Relevancy (सङ्गति) is one of the favorite topics of modern scholars and every section of Gaṅgeśa's book has been subjected in the first instance to a scrutiny on that point. Before him

Manikantha and Saśadhara, whose works are now available in print had made collections of dissertations on similar lines but they failed miserably on that fundamental point though they paved the way for Gangeśa. The latter's style also improved considerably in precision and uniformity. Methodology now became the key note of Indian logic and its repercussion on the historical and evolutionary treatment of topics was unfortunate. Gangeśa and his followers became concerned with what precisely is the argument for and against a problem and cared very little for who argued. Gangeśa's studies as he himself stated were confined to the Nyaya and works of the Prabhākara school which must have dominated higher studies in Mithilā at that time. Unlike Udayana whose talents developed through his conflict with the powerful Buddhist scholars, Gangeśa's conflict was with the Prābhakaras whose arguments are refuted by him in most places. This fact has been stated as the special feature of his work by Rucidatta. (But the wonder is that in his whole book there are barely half a dozen specific names and among them only one probably was a Prabhakara viz Śrīkara. (Īśvaranumana, B I ed, p 186). Among the rest we need only mention Jayanta who is given the epithet जगन्नेत्यायिक (Upamana Pt. p 61). It should be noticed that this is probably the earliest mention of the Kashmirian author by an Eastern scholar. Gangesa might have been a poet also in his times, as his son Vardhamāna testified to his poetic talents in the epithet सुकविकैरवकाननेन्दु

Gangeśa's family Gangesa's name has been fortunately discovered by Prof R Jha in the Pañjis of Mithilā and this has an important bearing on his date. We shall quote the exact words of the genealogists and discuss them carefully. There are two manuscript copies of what is called a 'Śakhāpañji' preserved in the Raj Library, Darbhanga. One of them (Ms No 553) is very clearly written by one Purusottama at the village Mangalvanī in 1642 Saka (लोचन वेद-कलामि शाके).

and the other of about the same date is in a dilapidated condition both being in palm leaves. Prof Jha is the only scholar who has studied them critically. About Ratnākara son of Sāthū, of the वसुनिष्ठाम family (of Vatsya gotra) it is written by Purusottama छादनस तत्त्वचिन्तामणिकारक म० म० परमगुरु गङ्गेश्वर दौ. In the other copy (fol 39a) the same Ratnākara son of Sādhukara is described as छादनस चिन्तामणिकारक २ गङ्गेशदौ. The figure 2 curiously stands for two M's i e Mahāmahopādhyāya दौ is an abbreviation for दौहित्र स stands for समूह. Gangeśa thus belonged to a family of which the Mula grāma was Chādana ■ village which remains yet to be identified in Mithila. The family which was inferior in social status is now extinct in Mithila. According to the Gotrapañjī it belonged to the Kāśyapa gotra. It appears therefore that Vardhamāna was referring to his own family when he wrote in the Ausumāñjyahprakaśa (p 7) गोत्र काश्यपादि. The daughter's son Ratnākara on the other hand belonged to one of the best families of Mithilā. The Pañjīs give elaborate accounts of the latter family, recording Ratnākara's alliances in great details. Gangeśa's family is completely ignored and we are not expected to know even his father's name.

There is one more reference to Gangeśa in the Pañjī. About Bhavēśvara of the respectable Jajubala family (of Sandilya gotra) Purusottama wrote छादनस तत्त्वचिन्तामणिकारक जगद्गुरु म० म० गङ्गेशसुत सूपनदौ भण्डारिसमस हगदित्यदु(हित दौहित्र)—सूपनचाट-हरिसर्मदायिति वचिञ्जनिचाले। This is exactly found also in the other copy (fol. 339a) This proves that Gangeśa had at least three sons, Vardhamāna Sūpana and Hariśarmā. It is interesting to find that the Pañjīs record evidently from contemporary sources two of the highest titles with which Gangeśa was endowed viz 'Paramguru' and 'Jagadguru'—an evidence of the meteoric career that he enjoyed in his own land. Only Vācaspati Miśra II enjoyed the former title according to the Pañjīs. As there is no other reference to Gaṅgeśa we can assume that the family dwindled into insignificance again and became extinct soon after his sons' death. His native place is unknown, unless it be identical with his ancestral village Chādana. Absured stories about his illiteracy, his overnight acquisition of knowledge through divine grace without studies and his quarrels with an uncle are still told in Nāyāya seminaries specially in Bengal. They are completely falsified by his own words at the commencement of his work. The well-known verse किं गवि गोत्वमुवागवि गोत्वम् which he is said to have addressed to his uncle is ascribed it should be noted, by Vācaspati Miśra II in his Khandanoddhāra (p 149) to Dharmakīrti. Such stories existed from ancient times and travel from land to land to be localised wherever there are extra-ordinary talents.

Date of Gaṅgeśa We shall discuss the problem of Gaṅgeśa's date in some details as there is much confusion among scholars about it. Weber first suggested that Gaṅgeśa lived in the 12th century A. D. (Hist of Indian Lit., p 246 fn.) the authority cited (Z D M G, XXVII 168) is really based on an opinion expressed by an Indian scholar of no note without any evidence that Gaṅgeśa lived '700' years ago (Mookerjee's Magazine, 1872, p. 123). The silent acceptance of such an unwarranted opinion by a scholar of Weber's repute produced perhaps a tendency among many scholars to place Gaṅgeśa too early. Keith also argued (Indian Logic and Atomism, 1921, p. 33) that he lived within 1150-1200 A. D. He was evidently influenced by Suali (I. c. p 66 note cf. I. O, II, p 547). The evidence he put up, specially on the connected dates of Jayadeva and Rucidatta, is absolutely wrong as we shall prove at the proper place. Vidyābhūṣana (J A S.B., 1918, p 282, also Indian Logic, pp 406-7) placed him 'about 1376 A. D.' on the basis of a succession of generations of pupils which is not correct and which is fundamentally useless for chronological investigation.

According to Dr H. P Śāstrī a Ms. of Vardhamāna's Kusumāñjali prakāśa, now preserved in the Asiatic Society (No 794), provides a positive clue to his date. The copy is divided into two parts written by two different hands with about a century intervening between them. At the end of the part which was later in date there was a date '1342 Śaka' (i. e. 1420 A. D.) The page mark 3 in the other part exhibits a peculiar form which was current, according to Bendall, within 1300-1360 A. D. It is, therefore, impossible to place Vardhamāna after the 13th century A. D. (Hist. of Tirhut, 1922, p. 179 Des. Cat., A. S., XI, pp. 96-7). The evidence is wholly wrong at every single step. We have carefully examined the copy, the date of the so-called later part is now completely effaced and it is impossible to surmise that the date was legible a few years back. As a matter of fact, Dr. Śāstrī gave the date as '1334 to a Pandit who published it in his book 'Kusumāñjalisaurabha' (1330 B. S., Introd., p. 13). He was not evidently sure of his reading of the date. The Ms. is on palm leaves and cannot be more than 400 years old by any consideration. Dr. Śāstrī, moreover, completely failed to notice that the form of the figure 3 on pages 30-39 of the so called earlier part is quite modern in appearance and the same scribe used both the forms. It is impossible therefore to hold, as Bendall did that a particular form was current just within 60 years of the 14th century A. D. We have found the same form in many manuscripts of the 16th and 17th centuries.

Gangeśa's date can be fixed within narrow limits from a thorough investigation of literary evidence, internal and external, as well as facts from family history now available in abundance.

(1) Among his predecessors, whose accounts have been collected in the last chapter, there are several who belonged to the 13th century A. D. We should repeat the names of Narā-yana Sarvajña, Divākara, Manikantha and Harinātha. The last two scholars might be living still in the first quarter of the 14th century A. D. and the terminus a quo of Gangeśa's period of activity should be taken as 1325 A. D.

(2) The earliest writer to refer to Gangeśa as far as we can gather at present, is the great Maithila scholar Vateśvara Upādhyāya, who must have criticised Gangeśa sometime between 1350-75 A. D. Thus Gangeśa's period of activity terminated, at the present state of our knowledge, in 1350 A. D.

(3) This is confirmed by the notable fact which seems to have escaped the notice of scholars, that no foreign scholar has ever referred to Gangeśa before 1400 A. D. We shall cite some instances. The Nayanaprasādinī commentary on the Citsukhī is truly a cheering storehouse of quotations from all philosophical works written in India till the time of the author. The Citsukhī was written in the middle of the 13th century and the commentary about 1400 A. D. We have failed to discover any reference in it to the Maithila scholars Taranī Miśra, Manikantha or Gangeśa. The views of 'new' dialecticians in Vāṇindra's Rasasāra (p. 62) or the reference to the followers of the 'equivocate' in the Citsukhī (Bombay ed., 1915, pp. 176 and 353) are sometimes loosely ascribed (Introd. to the Rasasāra p. 5) to Gangeśa in whose work they are not certainly traceable. Gunaratna, who wrote one of his works in 1409 A. D., does not mention Manikantha or Gangeśa in his Śaddarśana-samuccaya.

Cinnabhaṭṭa commented on the Tarkabhāṣā under Śrī-Harihara-Mahārāja' (so in the colophon, Dr. Bhandarkar's ed., p. 262), who was identical with Harihara II of Vijayanagara (1377-1404 A. D.). In the commentary itself there is incidental mention of 'Vijayanagari' (p. 228), the great centre of culture in South India. But Cinnabhaṭṭa proves himself absolutely oblivious of the great upheaval of studies on the Tarkaśāstra in Mithilā under Saśadhara, Manikantha and Gangeśa and was still looking upon Varadarāja (p 133 & 145) and Vādindra (p 214) as the latest authorities on the Śāstra. It should be mentioned in this connection that about a century after Cinnabhatta Balabhadra of Varanasi a profound scholar of Navya-nyāya of the Gangeśa brand, referred in his commentary on the Tarkabhāṣā to the classical works of the school like Draṇyopāya and Tattvabodha of Vardhamāna (fol 4 of Poona Ms No 200 of 1884 6) and all the subsequent scholiasts of the book Viśvakarmā Govardhana Gopinātha and Gaurikānta to name only a few were followers of Gangeśa.

Similarly the great polymath of South India Ānandapūrṇa Vidyāsāgara : whose date has been fixed by Dr Raghavan as 'about 1350 A. D.' (Annals of Oriental Research, IV : p 2), in his standard commentary on the Khandana of Śrīhara quoted an advanced refinement of Udayana's definition of Upādhi ascribed by him to one Nārāyaṇa Sarvajña (Chowkh ed, p 714). This particular refinement however, was cited and refuted by Gangeśa at the very beginning of his Upādhivāda (Anumāna, B I ed, pp 296-9), where the subject was treated in a far more advanced and intricate manner, of which Vidyāsāgara was quite oblivious.

In South India the Mādhva scholars specialised in studies on the Navyanyāya to an extent not found anywhere else (except Bengal). They refuted the arguments of Gangeśa and his followers, meeting them in their own method. But the earliest writer to launch this attack was the great Vyāsatīrtha (1460-1539 A. D.), whose Tarkatāṇḍava is, as far as we are aware, a pioneer work in the field. No Mādhva scholar before Vyāsatīrtha had any acquaintance with the Maithilā upheaval under Gangeśa.

(4) Among Māthila scholars the date of Candēśvara, the author of the several *Ratnākara*s is now fixed beyond any dispute. He performed a Tulāpūrsa in 1236 Śaka (1314 A. D.), evidently in his early youth, and wrote his last work the Rājataniratnākara about 1370 A. D. under king Bhavēśa. Long before the discovery of the last named work it was known traditionally that he survived in the reign of king Bhavasīmha (Hist. of Tirhut, 1922, p. 170 fn.). His date of birth, therefore, cannot be placed before 1275 A. D. and the period of his literary activity must now be placed between 1320-70 A. D. The following synchronistic table makes Gaṅgeśa a contemporary of Candēśvara

Ratnākara had many wives and this was his last wife Gaṅgeśa, therefore, was very much senior to Sūpanā just like Candēśvara, who was the eldest man of the family in that generation. This wife of Ratnākara, it should be noticed, was a cousin of the famous Vidyāpati. Guṇīśvara, father-in-law of Ratnākara, was ninth in descent from the first ancestor of the Jajibāla family named Daṇḍapāṇi. All these point to the conclusion that Gaṅgeśa can by no means be placed before 1300 A. D.

(5) Candēśvara's younger cousin Rāmadatta engaged M. M. Bhavaśarma of the Khauāla family to write for him the Mahādānapaddhati. Bhavaśarma, therefore, was an exact contemporary of Candēśvara and wrote that book in the second quarter of the century within 1325 50 A. D. Now Bhavaśarman's mother's mother was the eldest daughter of M. M. Kāhnu of the Sankarādhi family, who was thus about two generations earlier than Bhavaśarman. Kāhnu's second daughter was given in marriage to Laksmīśvara of the Jajubāla family, sixth in descent from the first ancestor Dandapāni. Laksmīśvara's (elder) cousin Subhadatta was the great-grandfather (प्रपितामह) of Harāditya (alias Jīva), the husband of Gangeśa's granddaughter (पौत्री). Gangeśa therefore like Bhavaśarman was two generations later than Kāhnu. It confirms our contention that Gangeśa cannot be placed before 1300 A. D. by any means. Kāhnu's youngest daughter's daughter was the younger stepmother of M. M. Jagannātha of the Mandara family, father of the famous Vateśvara Upādhyāya mentioned above. Jagannātha was thus a contemporary of both Bhavaśarman and Gangeśa, while Vateśvara becomes a contemporary of Gangeśa's son Vardhamāna¹.

The Tattvacintamani

A rapid survey of the contents of the book is however necessary for our purpose. Gangeśa produced this 'jewel', as he states in the third introductory verse for the decoration of scholars and for dispelling the terrible darkness of heretics. Moreover, opponents (so ably exposed herein) will no longer press their views cleverly in debates and the doctrines of his own school are stated fully without mincing matters.

विपक्षपक्षे न विचारचातुरी

न च स्वसिद्धान्तवचोद्विष्टता ।

The ideal has been maintained by the author throughout with conspicuous success.

1 For other informations about Gangeśa vide our 'Vange Navyanyāyā-carcā' pp 15-19

In the first part dealing with Perception the preliminary section on Benediction (pp 5 114) thoroughly examines the topic in all its aspects and it has been elaborated by many later scholars, though Śiromaṇi did not touch it Gangeśa deals with only the first and foremost of the 16 topics of Gautama, viz Pramāṇa and the next section on Prāmāṇya divided into three sub-sections Jñapti (pp 114 286) Utpatti (pp 287 371) and Pramāṇalaksana (372 429) really forms the introduction to the whole book and consequently this section and curiously enough this section alone of the Pratyakṣa part ■ assiduously studied by all students of Navyanyaya The next section on Anyathākhyāti or Error (pp 430-537) also belongs to the general introduction being a corollary to the previous section , the views of the opposing Prabhakara school who advocate in their Akhyātivāda that no knowledge is an Error have been elaborately examined in this section It is interesting to find that Gangeśa has quoted five rare Kārikās of the Prabhākaras (pp 465 468 470 474 & 475 6) in this section

The four fold division of Pramāṇa and the definition of Pratyakṣa is taken up in the next section which particularly deals with one of the terms used in the definition viz Sannikarsa or Intercourse and its six varieties in the ordinary plane. The whole of this main portion including this section which really gave the name to this first part is now obsolete and its place has been taken by elementary works notably the corresponding portion of the Muktavali Śiromaṇi did not touch this portion at all, proving that it was already getting out of date about 1500 A D

Four of the varieties of Sannikarsa are based on Samavaya or Inherence, one of the Vaiśeṣika categories which is not accepted by some schools of thought Gangeśa devotes a small section for its establishment (pp 640 72) In the next section Anupalabdhi (Non Perception) which is regarded as a separate means of valid knowledge by the Vedānta and Bhāṭṭa schools, specially for the knowledge of that much debated category Abhāva (Negation), is rejected (pp. 673-92) from the Nyāya stand-point, under which Negation is perceptible through the senses. One rare Kārikā is cited in this section (p. 688), which is followed by an important section on Abhāva (pp. 693-719), which unfortunately is not studied in the seminaries at present. It should be noted that in the Śabda part Gangeśa refers to an Abhāvavāda, which seems to be a separate and earlier tract on the subject — वदुक्तमभाववादे—अन्यद्भूतलक्षणमन्यच्च घटवद्भूतलक्षणम् । (Śabda, Pt II, p. 475 under Śaktivāda). In this section Gangeśa cites the following brilliant verse of the opponents, who do not accept Abhāva as a separate category —

एतेन—“दृष्टत्वाद्य घटोऽत्र च पतन् दृष्टत्वा मुद्गर
दृष्टा स्वर्परसहति परमितोऽभायो न दृष्टोऽपर ।
तेनाभाव इति श्रुति क निहिता किं चात्र वत्कारण
स्वाधीना वलशस्य केवलमिय दृष्टा कपालावली ॥”

इति निरस्तम् । मुद्गरपाताद् विनष्टो घट इति प्रतीत्यतिरिक्तविनाराणुभवात् (p. 717) This very verse is traceable in Ratnakīrti's Sthira-siddhidasana (Patna ed. of Ratnakīrti's works p. 111), ascribed to his teacher (यदाहुर्गुरुव) : i.e. the great Jñānaśrī (Ratnakīrti reads पलिषस्य for वलशस्य). Jñānaśrī was still a force to be reckoned with in Gangeśa's times. The verse actually occurs in his Kṣanabhañgādhyāya.

In the next section on Pratyaksakāraṇa (pp. 720-62) the most elaborately treated subject is the peculiar Nyāya thesis that Gold is not a substance, but only a sort of light. One of the sources of Gangeśa on the problem was Udayana (p. 750). In the next section (pp. 763-83) the well-known Nyāya theory that Mind is an organ and it is minute (‘anu’) is established. Anuvyavasāya (apperception), one of the vital things connected with Perception, is next dealt with (pp. 784-898), followed by Nirvikalpa and Savikalpa, the two kinds of Perception, with which the first part ends.

The second part on Anumāna (Inference) is by far the most popular, though the most intricate portion of the whole book. It is now broadly divided into two halves, commonly known as the Vyāptikāṇḍa and Jñānakāṇḍa and scholars used to specialise in either of them or rarely in both. The first section on the definition of Anumiti or Inferential knowledge and establishing the validity of Inference against the views of Cārvāka (pp. 1-26) is immediately followed by a grand section, Vyāptivāda dilating on the first term of the definition viz. Vyāpti (Invariable concomitance of the middle term with the major term) There are seven sub-sections under it, viz. Vyāptipañcaka (five provisional definitions), Simha Vyāghrī (two similar definitions of Professors Lion and Tiger), Vyadhikaranadharmāvacchinnabhāva, Pūrvapakṣa (collection of various other definitions), Siddhāntalaksana (final definition of Gaṅgeśa), Sāmānyābhāva (a separate class of Negation formulated for clearing a definition) and Viśeṣavyāpti (other specialised definitions) The next section on Vyāptigrahopāya (pp. 174-252) consists of two sub sections, Tarka (confutation) and Vyāptyanugama. The first half ends with Sāmānyalaksanā, a much debated kind of preter-natural sense contact, established by Gaṅgeśa.

The second half opens with Upādhi (vicious condition), its definition : classification ground of vitiation and fallacious aspects. But the section is long out of date and is now almost a lost portion of the book. The remaining sections are the delight of all serious students of Navyanyāya—Pakṣatā (on the minor term), Parāmarśa (Deduction), Kevalānvayī & Kevalavyatirekī (kinds of Anumāna), Arthāpatti (Presumption, not a separate Pramāṇa as advocated by the Mīmāṃsā) Avayava (five limbs of a syllogism) and the last section on Hetvābhāsa (Fallacy) consisting of ten sub sections viz Sāmānyanirukṭi (General definition), Savyabhicāra &c (five kinds of fallacy with three sub classes treated in 8 different sub-sections) closing with a statement on the efficacy of fallacies in demonstrating inefficacy of arguments.

The latest phase of Navyanyāya studies in India for about two centuries flowed through a large number of channels cut by single sentences or phrases of this part of Gaṅgeśa's work and by far the widest channel emerged from the general definition of Fallacy. It has now assumed proportions through the efforts of all the best Indian brains in Navyanyāya, which is a world's wonder in the field of intellectual feats, though to the uninitiated it is only 'a vast mass of perverted ingenuity' (Keith Indian Logic and Atomism p. 35) The Īśvaravāda of Gaṅgeśa, which is the concluding section of this Anumāna part, is, as we have stated before, now obsolete, being lost in the unfading glory of the original Kusumāñjali of Udayana, on which it was based

Likewise the Upamāna part of Gaṅgeśa has been quite out of date for a very long time. Only one scholar of Mithilā as far as we are aware, commented on it viz Rucidatta. Pragalbha of Bengal distinctly stated that while there are ways devised by the learned on the three major parts, not even a 'sigh' was made in the hard Upamāna part, where he was 'without a prop'.—

उपायाः प्रत्यक्षे चरममनुमाने च कृतिभिः कृता शब्दे चित्रं न विलिखनमस्त्येषु किमपि ।
न चोच्छ्वासोऽप्यत्रोपमितिकरणेऽकारि गह्वरे
निरालम्बे किंचिल्लिखति भुवि यः सोऽत्र विरलः ॥

(Pragalbha's Upamānasāṅgraha, A. S. Ms., Introd. v 2).

The fourth part of the Tattvacintāmaṇi deals with verbal testimony and is called the Śabdakhaṇḍa. It opens with the definition of verbal testimony—Śabdānirūpaṇa. A discussion on Śābdabodha (verbal judgement) follows. Śābdaprāmāṇyavāda then proves the validity of verbal testimony as an independent organ of cognition. Then follow the dissertations on ākāṅksā (expectancy), yogyatā (competency) āsatti (contiguity) and tātparya (word import) which are indispensable conditions to produce verbal judgement. The Śabdānityatāvāda deals with non eternity of sound. The ucchannapracchannavāda deals with the theory that sound is destroyed and not-concealed. The vidhi, apūrva and śaktivādas deal with Vedic Injunctions merit and demerit and potentiality respectively. Next comes the dissertation on Laksanā-secondary meaning. The following sections deal with the logical implication of the grammatical problems like compound words (samāsa), verbal suffixes (ākhyāta), the roots (dhātu) and prefixes (upasarga). The concluding section establishes the validity of the four types of cognitive instruments after refuting the validity of aitiḥya (tradition), janaśruti (rumour) arthāpatti (implication) and anupalabdhi (non apprehension).

Like the Anumanakhaṇḍa the Śabdakhaṇḍa also became highly popular and numerous commentaries were written on both of them. In the Nyāya seminaries of Mithilā and Bengal almost equal importance was attached to both.

The work of Gangeśa became highly popular very soon and was studied and commented upon in various centers of culture of India. It not only cast the works of the old school of logic into oblivion but the neo logical works of his predecessors also faded into insignificance and gradually were forgotten due to its overwhelming popularity and all embracing character. We, however, find scholars like Vardhamāna Vācaspati Miśra II, Sankara Miśra and others devoting much time and energy to revive the old school of Akṣapāda. But their efforts met with no conspicuous success.

The influence of Gangeśa's school was felt even outside the boundaries of India and we hear of Burmese Mss of neo-logical works in Mss. Libraries (vide I O Cat. Vol II. p 576).

VARDHAMĀNA UPADHYĀYA The Tattvacintāmaṇi soon established a school through the works of Gaṅgeśa's son and disciple Vardhamāna. The contributions of this great logician bear the titles 'prakāśa' and 'upāya'. Later authors refer to him as 'Upāyakāraka'. It appears that Vardhamāna had no sons but his grand children through a daughter were many and we get their accounts in the Pañjis. We give below a list of Vardhamāna's Nyāya Vaiśeṣika works

(1) Anvīkṣāṇayatattvabodha—commentary on chapter V of the sūtras of Gotama. Pt. Surendralal Tarkatīrtha utilized a Ms. of this work in his edition of the Nyāyasūtravivaraṇa. M. M. Ganganatha Jha is said to have discovered two Mss. of it. One more is preserved in the Sarasvatī Bhavana, Baranasi and a fourth in the Viśvabhāratī, Śāntiniketan. We have mentioned (p. 78 above) the Trisūtrītattvabodha of Vardhamāna. But no other information regarding the rest of the work is available.

(2) Nyāyanibandhaprakāśa. It has partly been published in the Bibliotheca Indica series along with Udayana's Nyāyavārtikatātparyaparisuddhi. Vardhamāna must have completed the work and chapters I & III of it are available in a manuscript (No. III c 123) of the Asiatic Society, Bengal. A very old palm leaf Ms. of the Prameyambandhaprakāśa is preserved in the Government Sanskrit College Library, Calcutta.

(3) The Nyāyaparīkṣitaprakāśa has been published in the Calcutta Sanskrit Series along with the Nyāyaparīkṣita of Udayanācārya.

(4) The Kusumāñjaliprakāśa has also been published long ago.

(5) The Kīranāvalīprakāśa—The Dravya and Guna sections have been published in the Bibliotheca Indica series and the Sarasvatī Bhavana text series respectively.

(6) The Līlāvāṭīprākāśa has been published from Chawkhamba, Baranasi.

(7) A Ms. of the Khaṇḍanaprākāśa is preserved in the Asiatic Society, Bengal.

(8) Vācaspati Miśra II in his Khaṇḍanoddhāra (p. 77) mentions Vardhamāna's work bearing the same title.

(9) Padmanābha refers to the sub-commentary on the Bauddhādhikāraprakāśa of Vardhamāna by Balabhadra in the Setu (p. 378).

(10) The Tarkaprākāśa on Keśava Miśra's Tarkabhāṣā is said to have been preserved at Ulwar (Ulwar Cat., p. 28, No. 653 with a sub-commentary on the same Ibid, No. 654).

It is said that an incomplete Ms. of the Maṇiprakāśa of Vardhamāna came to the Sarasvatī Bhavana, (Venis · Benares Cat. p. 193). But we could not trace it. For various reasons we cannot accept that Vardhamāna commented on the Tattvacintāmaṇi. Vardhamāna refers to his earlier works in subsequent ones. The Kusumāñjalīprākāśa mentions the Tattva-bodha, the Nibandhiaprākāśa and the Parīkṣāprākāśa. The Līlāvāṭīprākāśa mentions the Kusumāñjalīprākāśa. Vardhamāna quotes his father's views in numerous cases. But we find no reference to the Maṇiprakāśa either in his own works or in those of his successors. On the other hand the remarks added to a big quotation from the Cintāmaṇi in the Nyāyanibandha-prākāśa (pp. 677-92)—“इति पितृचरणोन्नीतमार्गानुगमनोन्मुखैस्सामि-रुक्तो विस्तरो नानवधेयः” seem to suggest that Vardhamāna wrote no commentary on his father's magnum opus. In case of the existence of such a commentary the clarification of his father's views in a different context would have been irrelevant. As Vardhamāna was held in high esteem both in Mithilā and Bengal, non-mention of such an important commentary of Vardhamāna if ever written, in later exegetical works on the Tattvacintāmaṇi is impossible to conceive.

Vardhamāna tried to bridge the gulf between the two schools of orthodox Logic—the old and the new. As we have just seen, he commented on the old classics current in his days. But the views of his illustrious father were always uppermost in his mind and he made the best use of them in his works.

As a smṛti writer also, Vardhamāna commands great respects in Mithilā. He wrote the Smṛtiparibhāṣā, the Śrāddha-pradīpa, the Ācārapradīpa and other smṛti digests.

CHAPTER IV

THE AGE OF EXPANSION

JIVANĀTHA MIŚRA The eldest brother of Śankara. Miśra's father Bhavanātha Śankara Miśra stated clearly in almost all his works that he had only reproduced the lessons he had received on each of the classics commented by him from his own father, who again took lessons from his own brother Jivanātha, who might be regarded as the great genius behind all the eminence achieved by Sankara. In the Vādivinnoda (p 61) Śankara cited an important passage of Jivanātha on the section of fallacy —साध्यात्यन्ताभावसामानाधिकरण्ये सव्यभिचार इत्येके । साध्याभावसामानाधिकरण्यमात्रं व्यभिचारः । किं च गन्धप्रागभावावच्छिन्नपटुधिव्यागन्धात्यन्ताभाव एव इति नायं पन्था इति जीवनायमिशा । This is a refutation of Gangeśa (vide Anumāna part, B. I ed, pp 970-71 towards the end of the section on Bādha) There is another quotation from Jivanātha in the Upaskāra (under IX 11 1, B I. ed, p 392), it is an extremely intricate definition of the term 'pakṣa' Next to it, Śankara cited the well-known definition of Gangeśa in a rather slighting mode (इति चेच्चिद्) and found fault with it (एतन्मते बाधस्थलेऽपि पक्षता) referring to his own Manimayukha for further (adverse ?) discussion Jivanātha's antagonism to Gangeśa was evidently derived from Vateśvara Upādhyāya, who was his maternal grandfather according to reliable genealogical records. Vateśvara's descendant Narahari in his critique on Smṛti named Dvaitanirṇaya refers to Jivanātha's legal decisions several times (Darbhanga ed, pp 18, 20 & 58) and once as aligning with Vateśvara (ib, p 32 एवमेवास्मद्वृद्धप्रपितामहवदेषरोपाध्याया, जीवनायमिशादयोऽप्येवम्) It appears that Jivanātha had written a critical treatise on Smṛti named Dvaitanirṇaya. We traced the following rare quotation in Gokulanātha's commentary (Pradīpa) on Vācaspati's Dvaita- nirṇaya (A. S. Ms No. I. D 5, p 11) अतएव जीवनाथ-द्वैत-निरणये इतिपदसमभिन्वयाहारात्मपदाभ्यां बाधितत्वादित्युक्तम् । Jīvanātha's date is about 1400 A. D. , he was evidently not alive when Śaṅkara Miśra took lessons from his younger brother and pupil Bhavanātha (about 1425 A. D.) Śaṅkara was not a direct pupil of his uncle Jīvanātha.

GAṆGĀDĪTYA One of the earlier authorities upon the text of Gaṅgeśa . His name was almost completely lost till we discovered the following reference in the Pratyakṣa part of the Cintāmanivivecana of Vidyānivāsa Bhaṭṭācārya. The unique manuscript of this work of Vidyānivāsa now preserved in the Sarasvatī Bhavana, Varanasi, has been thoroughly examined and fully described by us in our account of Vidyānivāsa (Vaṅge Navyanyāyacarṇā, pp. 63-78). In the section on Prāmāṇyavāda Vidyānivāsa explains —(fol. 53a) भट्ट-मुरारि-न्यायमतेषु स्वप्राज्ञप्रामाण्या-प्रसिद्धापार्थक्यमिति च हेयमिति नव्यगर्भपाठो वर्तमान-गङ्गादित्यानुमतः । (vide B. I. ed., p 239 fn. & Mathurī p, 240). The reading अप्राज्ञ-प्रामाण्यापेक्षया is actually found in the Gunapraṇāśa of Vardhamāna (S. B. Text, p. 193) The mention of Gaṅgāditya's name along with that of Vardhamāna proves that Gaṅgāditya was an author of fairly early date say, about 1400 A. D. and probably commented on Gaṅgeśa's work. Vidyānivāsa wrote the commentary about 1490 A. D.

GAṆĀṬOPĀDHYĀYA Another name hitherto entirely lost mentioned by the above-mentioned Vidyānivāsa in the same book (fol. 47a) —अतएव घटेशोपाध्यायो नियममेतं तुच्छीकृत्य दोषोक्त्यात् पीतादिभ्रम इति स्वीचके । तद्वदत्र दोषोक्त्यात् संशयः स्यादिति चेत्—(vide B. I. ed , pp. 207-8). It is not unlikely that this unknown scholar, evidently belonging to Mithilā, might have preceded Gaṅgeśa himself

NYĀYALOGANAKĀRA The name of this author remains yet to be discovered. He was one of the earliest scholars who criticised Gaṅgeśa and evidently belonged to Mithilā. Śaṅkara Miśra in the Vādivinoda cited his definition of 'Vyāpti' : (p. 57) साध्यामात्रवदवृत्तित्वमव्यभिचारः । अव्यभिचारित्वमेव च व्याप्तिः । अवृत्तिगगनादेर्व्याप्तिसत्त्वेऽपि पक्षधर्मताया असत्त्वात् न तल्लिगतेति न्याय-लोचनकृतः । The language proves that the passage is meant as an answer to the Vyāptipañcaka of Gaṅgeśa. In Sārvaabhauma's Śabdamaniparīkṣa there are two references to the Nyāyalocana (Varanasi Ms, fol 28b & 85a), of which the first passage runs घमिण उपस्थितावपि द्वारत्वस्य तज्जन्यजनकत्वरूपस्य प्रमाणान्तरेणानुप-स्थितेरिति न्यायलोचनदूषणमपास्तम् । Here Sārvaabhauma clearly indi- cates that the unknown author attempted to find fault with Gaṅgeśa. Yet another passage of the Nyāyalocana was traced by us in the Śabdamaniprakāśa of the famous Bengali scholar Haridāsa Nyāyālankāra (fol. 91b of a Ms. preserved in the Anglo-Sanskrit Public Library at Navadvīpa) It runs —एवं कौर्तनर्मनाशादिनाऽदृष्टान्तरं जायते तत् पुण्यविनाश । पर रोगादिस्थले दुःख-विशेष एव सस्कारनाशकः । एवं नमस्कारादिनापि पापनाशायादृष्टान्तरं जन्यत इति न्यायलोचनमतम् । तत्तुच्छं तादृशानियमस्याप्रयोजकत्वेन दूरं निरस्तत्वात् । This also seems to be an attempt to find fault with Gaṅgeśa. As the book is not mentioned by any recent writer of Mithilā and Bengal the author must have flourished before 1400 A. D., the approximate birth date of Śaṅkara Miśra as ascertained by us.

There is an illuminating passage of the Nyāyalocana in the Tattvāloka of Vācaspati Miśra II under II ii. 58 (fol 153a) न्यायलोचनकृतस्तु न शक्तत्वं पदत्वं तदबुद्धिजनकतावच्छेदकरूपवत्त्वं तच्च रूपे यद्यस्ति तदा तदेव लक्षणं नोचेदिदमप्यकिञ्चित्करं तथा च येन रूपेण यत्रान्वयस्य शब्दस्य ईश्वरेणासाधारणी व्युत्पत्तिः कृता तादृशसाधारणव्युत्पत्तिविषयत्वमेव पदत्वं व्युत्पत्ति-स्तु कश्चित् सङ्केतः कश्चिच्छब्दसम्बन्धः । न च वाक्येऽतिप्रसङ्गः तत्रासाधारणव्युत्पत्त्य-भावात् यथा घटमानयेत्यादौ इत्याहुः ॥ This is a clear refutation of Gaṅgeśa.

JAYADEVA alias PAKṢADHARA MIŚRA : ■ the only scholar of the post-Gaṅgeśa period in Mithilā who succeeded in setting up a new school (sampradāya) of Navyanyāya through his immortal work—the Āloka on the three parts of Gaṅgeśa's work (omitting the small Upamāna part) It dominated Nyāya studies throughout India for a long time Paksadhara's invincible career as a dialectician is immortalised in the line पक्षधरप्रतिपक्षो न लक्ष्यते कापि लोकेऽस्मिन् । The story of his encounter with Vyāsātīrtha (1460-1539 A.D.) of Karnāta when he is said to have claimed in admiration of the latter¹ .

यदधीत तदधीतं यदनधीतं तदप्यधीतम् ।

पक्षधरप्रतिपक्षो नावेक्षि विनाभिनवव्यासेन ॥

or the far more well-founded victory over him of Śīromani of Bengal is really a reflex from his great glory The following account of him collected from authentic sources, some of which were not yet properly investigated, gives many new facts about him

His works —He is universally known as the author of a single book, the Āloka, which practically superseded all previous commentaries on the Tattvacintāmaṇi. But among the Sanskrit manuscripts procured by Colebrooke when in India about a century and a half ago and subsequently presented by him to the India Office Library there are two works by Paksadhara viz. Dravyaviveka (as it is called by the author himself) and Nyājalīlāvativiveka A thorough examination of the two books, which it appears were not carefully scrutinized by Colebrooke himself or any other scholar, throws a flood of new light on the history of Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika literature in Mithilā and reveals certain puzzling problems about Paksadhara himself The Dravyaviveka (I O , I, p. 665) contains no verses, devotional or otherwise, at the beginning and the name of its author is nowhere found in the body of the book itself, except the cryptic and somewhat misleading colophon at the end (fol. 103a) —इति श्रीवर्द्धमान-टीकायां पञ्चधर्या द्रव्यपदार्थः संपूर्णः ॥ The superscripts on the leaves are पाख (foll. 1-3), पञ्चधर (foll. 10, 12-14, 103) and पक्ष (foll. 15 onwards to the end). On the cover of the last leaf, the title runs किरणावली पञ्चधरी. It is a brief but useful commentary on the Dravyaprakāśa of Vardhamāna and is once referred to in the Līlāvativiveka (fol. 36b) thus :—एतच्च द्रव्यविवेके सम्यक् प्रपञ्चितमितोहोपेक्षितम् । We have traced the reference on folio 54 of the present work (read along with Dravyaprakāśa of Vardhamāna, B. I. ed. of Kiraṇāvalī, pp. 204-6) Both the works entitled Viveka are therefore from the same pen. But the most wonderful thing discovered is that the author frequently refers here to his commentary on the Tattva-antāmaṇi also entitled the Viveka and not the Āloka. We quote one passage for example —(fol. 7a, vide Kiraṇāvalī B. I ed., p. 10) तथापीति । यद्यपि निषिद्धकर्मासक्त्येति पूर्वदृष्टमिहापि, आचारे च विशेषणं तत्रापि समानं तथापि तस्याभावगर्भतया गौरवकरत्वं अत्र विधिमुखतया लाघवमिति हृदयेनैतदेव लक्षणं सिद्धान्तितम् । शेषं च प्रत्यक्षविवेके प्रपञ्चितमितोहोपेक्षितम् ॥ The Pratyakṣaviveka is also referred to in foll. 60a, 76a, 79b and 101b. Besides the Anumānaviveka (fol. 14a, 15b, 83a-b), the Guṇaviveka is mentioned once (fol. 86b) as well as the Kusumāñjaliviveka (fol. 83a — अलयानुमानं कुसुमाञ्जलिविवेके द्रष्टव्यम्). There are four more references to a Viveka under a single topic (fol. 16a-b) which from the context points to the Pratyakṣaviveka. The rare authorities cited in the book are listed below alphabetically.

1 II N Krishnamurti Sarma in a Vol of Eastern & Indian Studies in honour of F W Thomas II 273 We have slightly amended the verse to suit the metre Sri Sarma reads विशो and नवेनव्यासेन ।

Kandaḷikāra (fol. 27b —ननु भीमांसकोऽत्र चादी-स तु द्रव्यमन्धकारं चदति न तु गुणमित्यप्रामाणिकोऽयं चक्षुः इत्यतो चादिर्न दर्शयति कन्दलीकार इति । Kusumāñjali-Vardhamāna (36b).

Vilāsa 90a & 96a identical with Dravakīranāvalīvilāsa of Divākaroṣādhyāya (q. v.)

The Līlāvativiveka (I O, I, p 668) is a much bigger work and begins with the following prayer-verse —

घन्दे तं देवकीपुत्र पवित्रं पद्मलोचनम् ।

उन्मीलति यत् सर्वं यत् सर्वं निमीलति ॥

But the name of the author here again is nowhere mentioned in the body of the book which ends (fol. 129a) with the colophon इति श्रीपद्मधरकृतो लीलावतीविवेक परिपूर्णः । There are references to the other works of the author viz. Pratyaksaviveka (15a, 20a, 39b, 43a, 86b 88b, 92b, 106b, 114a & 118b), Anumānaviveka (18b, 93a, 103b 104b & 115b), Śabdaviveka (52b), Cintāmaniviveka (45a & 114b) Dravyaviveka (36b) and Gunaviveka (28b) The list of authorities cited, a much longer one, is given below arranged alphabetically

Ācārādarśa (22a), Uddṛyā (18a) Upādhyāya (93b : identical with Prabhākara) Kandalikāra (39b), Kalāpa-parīṣṭa (66a), Kīranavalīprakāśa (28a), Caturthaparakāśa (57b), Jateśvara (q. v. 100b), Darpana (1a, 2a, 6a, 7b & 28b), Dvitiyaparakāśa (18a & 53a), Dvitiyavārtika (60b), Nibandha (103a), Padamañjarī (2a), Puruṣottamadeva (2a), Prabhākaropādhyāya (q. v 2a &c 11 times), Prameyaparakāśa (53a), Bhavadeva (21b), Mahābhāṣya (2a), Renukakārikā (22a), Harimīśra (2a)

Two more works of Pakṣadhara we are told (S. B. S. III. p 136) exist at Varanasi, a Ṭippanī other than the Āloka on the Cintāmaṇi, which on examination may prove to be a part of the Viveka, and a Śaśadhara-vyākhyā. Jayadeva's nephew Vāsudeva, who was a pupil of Jayadeva, refers to another long-lost work of Jayadeva named Pramāṇanallava, which seems to have been an independant treatise rather than a commentary. The passage of Vāsudeva runs — अतएव प्रमाणपह्लवेऽपि अन्योन्याभाव-मर्मेव हेतुरिति सिद्धान्तित गुरुचरणेनापीति । (Cintāmanitīkā, London Ms, fol 31b)

The identity of this Vivekakāra Pakṣadhara as distinguished from the Āloka is now a great puzzle before us difficult to solve. Pakṣadhara as a surname of the Āloka is well-known and the scribe of the Dravyaviveka undoubtedly supports the identity of the two—the Āloka and the Viveka—when he uses the peculiar abbreviation of the surname 'Pākhū'. For, in the family records of Jayadeva we come across exactly this very form of his nickname as current in Mithilā. In the Bhauāla branch of the Sodarapura family the Pany records — मिश्रगुणेश्वरौ निश्रनाथ-जयदेवापरनामकमहामहोमिश्रपाखू-प्रसिद्धपक्षधरौ । But this identity can only stand on the supposition that Jayadeva wrote two separate commentaries on the Tattva-cintāmaṇi, the Viveka and the Āloka and that while the former is absolutely unknown in Mithilā and Bengal the latter became a standard work throughout India. That an early work of a celebrated scholar, who himself refers to it frequently, would become extinct among his own direct disciples is extremely doubtful. At the beginning of the Pratyakṣaloka, Jayadeva after saluting Śiva (also invoked in the next part) clearly states —

अधीत्य जयदेवेन हरिमिश्रात् पितृव्यत ।

तत्त्वचिन्तामणेरित्यमालोकोऽयं प्रकाशयते ॥

This normally means that the Āloka was his first literary venture and it would almost amount to an absurdity if we suppose, as we must in case the Viveka be also ascribed to him, that the Āloka was composed after finishing a large number of scholia on almost all the standard works of Navyanyāya (including the Tattvacintāmaṇi) under the common appellative Viveka.

Among the direct pupils of Jayadeva, Bhagīratha (alias Megha) covered the same ground as the Dravyaviveka and the Līlāvativiveka of Paksadhara. He very frequently refers to a previous commentator entitled 'Mīśrāḥ' (Līlāvati, Chowkhamba ed., pp. 4, 11, 18 &c. more than 25 times), who, as we have ascertained, was neither Śāṅkara Mīśra (who did not comment on Vardhamāna) nor the author of the Līlāvativiveka under discussion. One passage of Bhagīratha (p. 45) runs — एष चेयं फक्किा किमितीत्यनन्तरमत्र तु वज्जित्वेन प्रसादादिति मिथ्या लिखनं चिन्त्यम् । We have traced this peculiar solution of an intricate text in Paksadhara also. Thus — (fol. 13a of the Līlāvativiveka) साप्रदायिकासु किमिवोति फक्किफानन्तरमियं फक्किकेति फक्किा सचार्यं योजयन्ति । This proves that Mīśra of Bhagīratha preceded the Vivekakāra, whose arguments against the solution are not reproduced by Bhagīratha. It is impossible, therefore, to identify the Vivekakāra with Jayadeva in the present state of our knowledge.

The Dravyaviveka was superseded by the much more expansive works of Rucidatta and Bhagīratha. Many passages of the Viveka are found incorporated in Rucidattā's commentary without acknowledgement. Bhagīratha also seems to have referred to the Viveka e.g. under the term 'kechit' (Līlāvati, Chowk. ed., p. 53 cf. Līlāvativiveka fol. 15a). It is therefore, certain that the Vivekakāra preceded both by a length of time and he probably lived about 1450 A.D. He cannot be identical with Paksadhara Upādhyāya of the Māndara family, who lived about 1400 A.D. Moreover, the author of the Darpana, cited in both the Vivekas before us, was Vateśvara, the father of Paksadhara Upādhyāya. But this filial relation is not at all borne out in the two Vivekas.

while in the Tattvamarṇaya, a Smṛti work of this Pakṣadhara. (L 1845) his father Vateśvara is praised and saluted eloquently We conjecture that the Vivekakāra is a third Pakṣadhara of unknown parentage and in our opinion, he is identical with 'Śrīmat-Pakṣadhara' of Amarāvati who transcribed the Viṣṇupurāṇa in 345 L. S. Jayadeva never refers to his nickname 'Pakṣadhara' in the Āloka and it is extremely doubtful if a scholar of his eminence and celebrity could find time to transcribe a Purāṇa. But hitherto all scholars have taken this Pakṣadhara of Amarāvati as identical with Jayadeva (Vidyābhūṣana, l. c., p 456 fn &c.)

Jayadeva's Professors —As we have stated above Jayadeva distinctly mentions the name of his uncle Harimiśra as his teacher in Nyāya both in the Pratvaksā and the Anumāna parts of the Āloka. The Pañjis record that 'Mahāmahopādhyāya' Harimiśra was the eldest of the three brothers, but he was not a 'Mahāmahopādhyaya' of great eminence and did not probably compose any work The following quotation in the Līlāvativveka probably refers to a grammarian of earlier date¹ हरिमिश्रास्तु—कर्मधारय एव समास । न चोत्तमपदपूर्व-
निपातापत्ति विशेषणविशेष्यभाव प्रति कानचारात् । यथा हि, उत्तमोत्तमत्वं

Many portions of Jayadeva's Āloka were published long ago in the complete edition of the text of Gaṅgeśa, as complements to Mathurānātha's commentary In the Pratyakṣa part the published portion covers the sections from Samavāyavāda to Nirvikalpavāda (B I ed pp. 640-838) In the Anumāna part the whole of the Īśvaravāda as well as the last section of the main part (B I ed, pp 983-97) is adorned with the Āloka In the Śabda part, where the Āloka begins

1 For Harimiśra the grammarian and a commentator on the Kāśikā, vide Purusottamadeva's Paribhāṣāṭṭī &c (Rajshahi, 1946) App., p 128 & Introd p 5 with a salutation to Viṣṇu (न जाने बीजाने) instead of Śiva as in the first two parts the sections from the Jātiśaktivāda to the end (B I ed, Pt II, pp 556-866) are illuminated by the Āloka. It is a pity however that no complete edition of the Āloka, the greatest post-Gangeśa work of Navyanyāya in Mithilā is likely to be published in the near future

But there is almost an universal tradition in Mithilā and Bengal that Jayadeva was a pupil of the celebrated Yajñapati Upādhyāya. For instance we find in the Śabdakalpadrūma (Pt II 1749 Śaka p 1791) यज्ञपत्युपाध्यायच्छात्र पञ्चधर्मिभ्रष्टान्तामणै-
रालोककार । (“न्याय” शब्दे) This tradition is substantially corroborated by Jayadeva himself. Any one who will take the pains of comparing the works of Yajñapati and Jayadeva will be struck by the interesting fact that Jayadeva has controverted the views of Yajñapati at every step. In one such passage cited below, Jayadeva distinctly refers to Yajñapati as Guru. Commenting on the text of Gangeśa beginning with the word यद्वर्मावच्छेदेन (Anumāna, Upādhyasiddhānta, B I ed, p 436) Jayadeva writes (Anumānāloka, A S Ms III A 25 fol 56a) — यथा च व्यजनत्वेऽतिप्रसक्तिर्न दोषाय तयोक्तम् । एव सति तत्रातिप्रसङ्गमाशङ्क्य तन्निरासप्रयासगौरव च गुरुणा किमर्थ-
मिति न जानीम । The whole controversy has been elaborately treated by Yajñapati's son Narahara (foll 57-66 of Tanjore Ms No 6268) . Moreover, Padmanābha Miśra while explaining the above passage of Jayadeva clearly writes in the Pksadharoddhāra (Poona Ms. No 785 of 1887 91, fol 54b) —
एवमिति । व्यजनवत्त्वेऽतिप्रसङ्गमङ्गाय यज्ञपत्युपाध्यायैर्यद्वर्मावच्छिन्नसाध्यव्यापकता तद्वर्मावच्छिन्नसाधनाव्यापकतेति लक्षणायां निरुक्ती न चैव तत्र याति (vide Narahara's Dusanoddhāra, fol 60)

Mithilā's glory in Navyanyāya — This conflict between the professor and the pupil marked the most glorious period of Navyanyāya studies in Mithilā and its echo reached the farthest corners of the country. The whole intelligentsia, so to speak, of Mithilā and Bengal was divided into two rival camps. Yajñapati's son Narahari himself a direct pupil of Jayadeva, gave a spirited reply to all the points of controversy raised by his teacher and defended his father's views Vāsudeva, a nephew and pupil of Jayadeva, defended his uncle against the attacks of Narahari and many others of the rival camp Padmanābha Miśra, belonging to a Bengali family settled at Varanasi and adorning various royal courts of North India, wrote a commentary on the Āloka named Paksadharoddhāra wherein he met the arguments of Narahari and others. Padmanābha's date falls in the latter half of the 16th century A.D. The healthy controversy, therefore raged in Mithila and the adjacent tracts for well over a century It is a curious and significant fact that with the cessation of this controversy Mithilā's literary glory practically came to an end

Studies in Pratyakṣa and Anumāna—The above controversy was confined to the first two parts of Gaṅgeśa's work and in consequence, studies on the earlier classics of Udayana, Śrīvallabha and Vardhamāna considerably declined from this period An intensive and extraordinary switch on Gaṅgeśa henceforth assumed proportions which have no parallel in the literary history of the world By Nature's laws the highest pitch, reached specially in Bengal on portions of the Anumāna part alone, marked after a certain period of lull a sharp decline that swept out the very foundations of Navyanyāya including the solid work of Jayadeva

Jayadeva's family still survives in Mithilā He belonged to one of the premier Śrotriya families of Mithilā named Sodarapura of Sāndilya gotra. Varāhanātha, 10th (or 11th) in descent from the first ancestor Halāyudha, settled in the village Bhauāla, after which this branch of the family came to be known He was Jayadeva's grandfather. According to tradition Jayadeva lived in the village named Yamasama. He had a son named Mahāmahopādhyāya Mādhava. There is evidence that this worthy son of Jayadeva wrote in defence of his father against the arguments of Narahari. The following passage in the Manitīkā of Jayadeva's nephew Vāsudeva refers to the long-lost work of Jayadeva's son. In the section on Kevalānvayī (B. I ed., p 566) Jayadeva's views (fol 93a) are refuted by Narahari (fol. 83b) Vāsudeva begins his long note here thus —(fol. 58a) ननु तदा रूपाभाववति बायो रूपसमवायो न स्यादभावाभावरूपत्वात्तस्य । न चेष्टापत्तिः स्पर्शसमवायोऽपि तदा स्यादेकत्वादिति चेत्—(these are Narahari's words in a nut shell) न, सत्र विशेषणत्वादिद्विरूपभावरूपसद्भावात् रूपविशेषणता च नास्त्येव । इयान् परं विशेष— सा विशेषणता वायुतैवास्मन्मते । सन्मते समवायेन फलतो न कश्चिद्विशेष इति । सोऽयं पितृवचनादवबोधनिबन्धनो न्यामोह । इह ॥ चिन्त्यते ।

This proves that Mādhava, son of Paksadhara, was senior to Vāsudeva. This is exactly corroborated in the family records. Gāngu of the Māndara family had five daughters. Mādhava (son of 'Pākhū') married the third daughter named Gaurī, while Vāsudeva married the daughter of the second daughter Jayamati¹.

Date of Jayadeva It can now be confidently asserted that all evidences, internal and external, point to the latter half of the 15th century A. D. as Jayadeva's period of activity and the Āloka was written sometime between 1465-75 A. D. Those who speculated on his date and identity without examining his work and without consulting a single person of Mithilā, where Pākhū's name is a house hold word, naturally made astounding statements. Keith, for instance, took Jayadeva to be 'no doubt' identical with the author of the Prasannarāghava against a volume of evidence to the contrary (I. O., II, p. 560). It need hardly be stated that Jayadeva, son of Mahādeva of the Kaundinya gotra and with a title Pīyūsavarsa is quite a different person, who flourished two centuries before the Āloka-kara. Moreover, the gotra Kaundinya is of a very inferior rank among Maithilā Brāhmanas. Similarly the long-drawn controversy about the date of a copy of the Pratyakṣāloka (L. 1976)—whether it was 159 L. S. or 1509 Śaka—is quite meaningless. There should not have been any question but that it is 1509 Śaka. Jayadeva must have survived till about 1500 A. D. when he gave lessons to the illustrious Bhagīratha, one of his last pupils. On the other hand he was a generation later than Śaṅkara Miśra who belonged to the same family and was his uncle (पिहृष्य) in relation.

Jayadeva's style The formidable and intricate style of Navyanyāya works which first took shape from the pen of Gaṅgeśa and some of his predecessors, further developed in the hands of Jayadeva, whose manner of arguing a point became the delight of all serious and hard scholars. Methodology now became the highway of almost all these scholars who cared very little, as time went on, for the original doctrines and their sources. Gaṅgeśa Jayadeva or Śiromani with whom this intricate style culminated by joining hands with a formidable conciseness, rarely name their sources and their works are almost completely wanting in historical materials. The only specific names we could trace in the Āloka are Vatseśvara, author of the (Mīmāṃsā) Mahāmava, Makaranda (a lost commentary on the Kusumāñjali) and the Darpana in the Pratyakṣa part and Bhāṣkara and a very rare name Pramāṇapārāyana (fol. 131b) in the Anumāna part.

Jayadeva's pupils There was perhaps no scholar in Mithilā and Bengal who could claim so many and such a galaxy of distinguished pupils as Jayadeva had in his seminary. He gave lessons to Narahari, the son of his professor, to Mādhava, his own son, to his nephew Vāsudeva, to Sucikara Upādhyāya (according to tradition), to the famous scholiast Rucidatta (who gives him the highest literary title known in India 'Jagad-guru') and last of all to the great prodigy Bhagīratha. We should state here that according to the latest evidence neither Vāsudeva Sārvabhauma nor his pupil Śiromanī of Bengal ever came to Mithilā for studies (vide Vange Navyanyāyacarcā, pp 36 37 & 40). Śiromanī's pupilage under Jayadeva is therefore a myth.

Jayadeva's popularity in Bengal We heard a curious tradition in Mithilā, though not widely current there, that Jayadeva left Mithilā in his old age and took shelter in Bengal. This tradition is without foundation, but it is substantially correct in a cultural sense. Jayadeva's school emerged out of his great conflict with Yajñapati, whose adherents were ultimately routed at the hands of Jayadeva's followers. No author, except perhaps Śiromanī, could claim like Jayadeva a band of scholars forming in his very life time a separate school on the basis of his work, which they adorned with regular commentaries. One of his earliest commentators was Jaleśvara Vāhinīpati, a son of Jayadeva's contemporary Vāsudeva Sārvabhauma, he wrote a Śabdālokodyota (Vange Navyanyāyacarcā, p 43) probably in the lifetime of the *Āloka*kāra. His preference for the Āloka over his own father's commentary the Parikṣa (ib., pp 37-41) is an eloquent tribute to the spectacular success of Jayadeva. This popularity of Jayadeva among Bengali scholars is a fact of supreme importance. It is now completely forgotten that all the scholars of Navadvīpa who commented on Śiromanī almost invariably commented on Jayadeva also. This continued for about two centuries and what is a marvellous fact, the Āloka survived as a text book at Navadvīpa for over a century after it practically disappeared in Mithilā itself. For, in the 17th century Gadādhara Bhaṭṭācārya (1604-1709 A. D.) the last great scholiast of Bengal commented on all the three parts of the Āloka (ib., pp. 178-79). At Varanasi the Bengali scholars Rudra Nyāyavācaspati, Raghudeva Nyāyālaṅkāra and Jayarāma Nyāyapañcānana of the same century commented on the Āloka. We have already stated that Padmanābha of Bengal origin commented on the Āloka, but not on Sīromaṇi. We refrain from mentioning all the earlier names from (Sīromaṇi's fellow-mate) Haridāsa Nyāyālaṅkāra onwards, full accounts of whom are given in our Bengali work.

In South India only the renowned scholar Annam Bhaṭṭa is known to have written a commentary named Siddhāntya on the Āloka (R 1536-37) A more recent and less-known scholar named Agnihotra Bhaṭṭa wrote a Sphūrti on the Āloka, of which parts of the Pratyakṣa and Anumāna sections exist in manuscripts at Tanjore (Nos. 6095-97). It is however a curious fact that Jayadeva's pupil Rucidatta became more popular in South India His Cintāmaṇiprakāśa much more than the Āloka succeeded in founding a sort of a sub-school of Navyanyāya and many distinguished scholars wrote sub-commentaries on it.

Jayadeva is described by his pupil Bhagīratha as a 'Paṇḍita-kavi' i.e. he was both a scholar and a poet like his namesake who wrote the Candrāloka and the Prasanna-rāghava and with whom he is mostly confused Whether any poem can be ascribed to him should be a matter of investigation. His poetic talents are also expressed in the following obituary verse about him which was discovered by us on the cover of the Ms. of Pragalbha's Upamānasaṅgraha preserved in the Asiatic Society (No. 1752 dated 1643 V. S.) It is a magnificent panegyric of the great scholar evidently from the pen of his direct pupils :

कुन्दावदातयशसा जगदेव सत्यं
साध्वीपयेन कवितापि गता नताङ्गी ।

स्वलोकमागिनि गुरो जयदेवमित्रे

रे तर्क फर्करा तवैव न कोऽपि पन्था. ॥

T V' A N T O P Ā D H Y Ā Y A The extra ordinary eminance of Jayadeva alias Pakṣadhara put to shade all the previous scholiasts of Gaṅgeśa, whose commentaries became extinct in no time. In our attempt to rescue the names of some of these long forgotten scholars we came accross the extremely peculiar name of Tvantopādhyāya which was completely lost. Some years ago we thoroughly examined the Ms copy of the Anumānakhaṇḍa of a commentary named Pakṣadharoddhāra (B O R. I. Ms. No 735 of 1887 91 vide fol 39b for the actual name of the commentary) In this commentary Padmanābha wrote learned discourses on favourite topics of Navyanyāya and one of them is a long note on the (Vyāpti—) Siddhāntalaksana (fol. 22a 26a) Towards the end (fol 25b) we come across the following passage — तस्यापि ब्रह्मिणोभयवानसौ भूमादित्यत्रातिव्याप्तिं वारयितुं यदवच्छिन्नाधिकरणत्वा- वच्छेदेन साध्यसामानाधिकरण्यस्यावश्यं वक्तव्यतया पूर्वप्रतीकवैयर्थ्यस्य त्वन्त-मते दूषणत्वादिति विचारसंक्षेपः । (The very unusual name found in the manuscript here looks like 'Tkanta', altogether a doubtful reading) Our suspicion, that the name of one of the earliest commentators of the Tattvacintāmaṇi has been preserved in this passage, turned into a conviction in a most unexpected manner. Sometimes ago we went to Trivenī (in the Hooghly district of Bengal) to examine what remained of the library of Jagannātha Tarakapañcānana (1694-1807 A. D.) the greatest scholar of his age in Bengal. A bundle of stray leaves was all that we could lay our hands upon, from which we recovered a very old copy in corypha leaves of Aniruddha's Pitṛdayntā.
 A stray palm leaf, torn at both ends was found in this copy containing a most interesting book list. We reproduce the whole of it below as a piece of direct evidence on the courses of advanced studies in Bengal in the middle of the 16th century.

It is dated 'Sam 430, 23 Śrāvaṇa' evidently referring to the Lākṣmaṇa era which was adopted by the Nadia scholars from Mithilā. The date falls in the 5th decade of the 16th century A.D. The superscript reads 'Tālika-pustaka-bandha(ka) Nadia' (i.e., a list of books bartered at Nadia, the popular name of the city of Navadvīpa) :

(Column 1) Kāvya-prakāśa, Pūrvakhaṇḍana, Anumāna-Miśra, Pratyakṣa-Kaṇṭako(ddhā)ra, Bauddhādhikāra (5). (Column 2) Śabdakhaṇḍa, Tattvāloka, Pratyakṣa-Miśra, Vyavahā(ra)cintāmaṇi, Bauddhādhikāra-Śaṅkaramiśra (5). (Column 3) Līlāvatyupāya (i. e. Līlāvati-prakāśa of Vardhamāna). Tat-Jalada (i. e. comm. on-do-(the above) by Bhagīratha whose surname was 'Megha', and 'Jalada' is again a synonym of Megha), Kusumāñjali-upāya, Guṇa (i. e. the portion of Udayana's Kiraṇāvali on Guṇa, Śrāddhakalpa (5). (Column 4) Dravyopāya (i. e. Vardhamāna's comm. on the Dravya part of Kiraṇāvali), Kusumāñjali-Jalada, Śabda-Tvanta, Guṇa-Jalada (4). (Column 5, torn) Guṇopā(ya), Śabda-Gopī(nātha), Ācārā(darśa), Manu, Dra(vya?) (5).

The list is a good evidence that the Bengali scholars at that time assiduously studied all up-to-date Maithila works, specially on Navyanyāya. The mention of Pratyakṣakaṇṭakoddhāra by Madhusūdana Thakkura is important as indicating the later limit in the date of its composition. The mention of 'Śabda-Tvanta' (the reading is quite clear and beyond any doubt) is certainly the most valuable feature of the list. It proves that the long-forgotten Maithila scholar Tvanta wrote a commentary on the Tattvacintāmaṇi, of which the last part (Śabda-khaṇḍa) was procured for the private library of Nadia. Padmanābha's reference is to the second part of the same commentary. That he commented also on the first part of Gaṅgeśa's work is proved by the following quotation traced by us in a unique copy of the Pratyakṣālokaprasāraṇi by Kṛṣṇadāsa Sārvabhauma, one of the earliest scholars of Nadia.

who lived in the second quarter of the 16th century A. D. (vide Kṛṣṇadāsa's full account in our Bengali work Vaṅge Navyanyāyacarcā, pp. 114-23)

दूषणमाहुः । (fol. 7a of a dilapidated Ms in our possession: beginning of Mangalavāda, B I ed., p 9). At the present state of our knowledge this Tvantopādhyāya happens to be the earliest known commentator on Gaṅgeśa's Tattvacintāmaṇi, for he preceded both Jayadeva Miśra (Paksadhara) and Śāṅkara Miśra as we shall presently see Tvantopādhyāya's commentary on the Kusumāñjali named Makaranda. The Kāṅkāś of Kusumāñjali were commented upon, among others, by Rāmabhadra Sārvabhauma and this 'Rāmabhadrī' was extensively studied in the Nyāya seminaries of Bengal till the last century. This Rāmabhadra was a son of the famous Jānakīnātha Bhaṭṭācārya Cūdāmaṇi, author of the Nyāyasiddhāntamañjarī. He mentioned his father's name in most of his works, e g, (I) in the beginning of the Nyāya-rahasya, श्रीमद्वाचस्पत्यचूडामणितनय इव रामभद्रस्तनोति. This commentary on the Nyāyasūtras goes to the end of Chapter IV only, where the colophon runs—इति महामहोपाध्यायश्रीमद्वाचस्पत्यचूडामणितनयश्रीमद्वाचस्प-त्यसर्वभौम-रामभद्रविनिर्मिते न्यायरहस्ये चतुर्थोऽध्याय (fol 120b of Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika manuscript. No 9 of the Sarasvatī-Bhavana, Benares.

The commentary on chapter V proves on examination to be a separate work named Ānvīkṣikī-tattavivaraṇa by Rāmabhadra's father Bhaṭṭācārya Cūdāmaṇi himself (Vide Sāhitya Pariṣat-Patricā, Vol. 51, pp. 69-70) (2) In the beginning of the Guṇarahasya —

चूडामणोस्तार्किकाणां पुत्रैर्गुणरहस्यम् ।

रामभद्रसर्वभौममद्वाचार्यैर्विधीयते ॥

(v. 2, Ms in our possession)

(3) In the beginning of a small work on Smṛti named Samaya-rahasya —

हरिहरचरणौ पितरं तार्किकचूडामणिं नत्वा ।

क्रियते समयरहस्यं श्राद्धानां सार्वभौमेन ॥

(Ms. in our possession)

(4-5) In a well known verse in the beginning of Rāmabhadra's Padārthatattvaṭīkā (Benares Ed , p. 81) and Nañvādātīkā R A S. B. Ms. No III G. 148, a unique copy dated 1957 Śaka) —

सातस्य तर्कसरसीरुहकाननेषु, चूडामणेर्दिनमणेश्वरणौ प्रणम्य ।

श्रीरामभद्रसुकृती कृतिना हिताय, जीलावशान् किमपि कौतुकमातनोति ॥

All doubts about the identity of Rāmabhadra and his father should now be finally dissolved (cf. I. H. Q. , XX, pp. 190-92). The strange introductory verses found in the beginning of Rāmabhadra's Kusumāñjalikāṅkāvyaśekhya in all available Ms. copies—and we have examined scores of them—which created a baffling problem before two generations of scholars, must now be regarded as the composition of some scholar other than Rāmabhadra. The first verse of benediction (आमोदैः परितोषिताः) has been traced in the Āmoda, a commentary on the whole of Kusumāñjali (and not on the Kārikās alone) by the famous Śaṅkara Miśra of Mithilā, whose parents are again unmistakably invoked in the second verse —

भवानीभवनाथाभ्या पितृभ्या प्रणमाम्यहम् ।

यत्प्रसादादिदं शास्त्रं करचीरोपमं कृतम् ॥

Śaṅkara has referred to his father Bhavanātha's instructions in many of his works, e g., Vādivinoda, Līlāvāṭīkā thābharana and Upaskāra. It was MM. Dr Gopinātha Kavirāja who first discovered a superscript in a Ms. copy of the 'Rāmabhadri' (fol. 6a, इत्यन्तं शंकरमिश्रकृतं ततः सार्वभौमीयम्), which clearly stated that the first 4 or 5 leaves of the book were of Śaṅkara Miśra's composition and the rest Śārvabhauma's. (Kusumāñjalibodham, S. B. Text, Introd., pp. II-III f. n) The 'Rāmabhadri', has been published in the 'Āśutosa Sanskrit Series' of the Calcutta University (edited by Prof N C Vedāntatīrtha) There is indelible evidence in the commentary itself that it is a medley of two different compositions The fourth kārīkā ('sāpekṣa-tvāt.. ') is introduced twice in two different places, once on p 11 (falling under Śankara Miśra's portion of the commentary) thus —तत्र चार्वाकस्येदमाकृत, न हि कारणत्व प्रत्यक्षं प्रमाणं दण्डादौ दृष्टेऽपि तत्र सन्देहात् कथमेवमत आह—सापेक्षत्वादिति । It should be noticed that the prose line immediately preceding the kārīkā is explained in this portion On pp 13-14 again we read, तत्र चार्वाकस्यायमात्रं कार्यकारणभावे न तावत् प्रत्यक्षं प्रमाणं.. कारणतायाः समावयनयैव तदुपपत्तेरत्राह—सापेक्षत्वाद् । Here the explanation of the prose line is omitted and the rest of the earlier gloss is presented in a more elaborate and improved language We should mention that this twice repeated explanation is found in all the Ms copies we have examined including the two in our own possession That the earlier part was from the pen of Śankara Miśra is directly stated in three more manuscripts we have examined. We are in possession of a very old copy where it is written distinctly in the margin of the front page, 'Śankaramiśrasya Kuṣumāṇjali-vyākhyā' and on fol. 5a after लिङ्गादेरभावादिति the portion अत आह सापेक्षत्वादिति is cancelled by smearing yellow pigment upon which it is written clearly इत्यन्ता श्रीमच्छंकरमिश्रकृता कुसुमाञ्जलिकारिका-व्याख्या । अतः परं सार्वभौमीयम् । In the ancestral library of the late Pandita Dakṣiṇācarana Smṛtītīrtha of Calcutta we found another copy where it is written (fol. 6a) लिङ्गादेरभावात् इत्यन्तं शङ्कर-मिश्रीय तत्र सार्वभौमीयम् । Yet another copy was examined by us in a village Sātgeche in the Burdwan district among the remnants of a magnificent library which belonged to (Rāma) Dulāla Tarkavāgīśa (1731-1815 A D.), one of the greatest Navyanyāyas of Bengal, whose 'Patrikās' on Navyanyāya became popular at one time throughout India. On fol. 5a it is written, सापेक्षत्वा-दिति । इति शङ्करमिश्रकृतं समाप्तं अतः परं सार्वभौमीयम् । This earlier portion, however, is not identical with the extant Āmoda commentary of Sankara. Why this is so and what became of the first part of Rāmabhadra's own commentary are not known and are likely to remain an unsolved mystery.

The third verse in the beginning of Śaṅkara Miśra's part of the Rāmabhadra is as follows —

मकरन्दे प्रकारे या व्याख्या परिमलेऽयथा ।

उतोधिका पितुर्न्यास्यामास्यातुमयमुद्यमः ॥

Of the three earlier commentaries on the Kusumāñjali mentioned in this important verse the Prakāśa by Vardhamāna is long available in print. The 'Parimala' is by Divākaropādhyāya and a direct commentary on the text.

Who was the author of the Makaranda, mentioned in this list by Śaṅkara Miśra? Not certainly Rucidatta, the author of the sub-commentary Prakāśamakaranda, who as a direct pupil of Jayadeva Miśra (Paksadhara) was at least one generation later than Sankara Miśra. In fact this Makaranda is an earlier commentary directly on the Kusumāñjali and we have traced a citation from it in the Pratyakṣāloka of Jayadeva (towards the end of 'Prāmānyavāda') — अतएव मकरन्दे अनभ्यास-द्वयेति न पक्षविरोधस्तथा व्याख्यातमिति । (fol 28a of a very old copy with us). Jayadeva was not certainly referring here approvingly by name to any work of his own pupil Rucidatta. In fact a comparison with the corresponding passage in Rucidatta (St. II, p. 7) proves that the view cited by Jayadeva does not belong to Rucidatta. So the Makaranda happens to be a long-lost commentary on the Kusumāñjali. Fortunately about two years ago we succeeded in getting hold of the above mentioned copy of the 'Rāmabhadra' in the collection of Dulāla Tarkavāgiśa, where an inquisitive copyist wrote down the following invaluable marginal notes upon the third verse cited above

(1) Makarande—“Tvantopādhyāya—krta-śāstre”

(2) Prakāśe—“Vardhamānopādhyāya-kṛta-? gra-)nthe”

(3) Parimale—“Granthaviśeṣe”.

Date of Tvantopādhyāya ? Śāṅkara Miśra in the above list of previous commentators has omitted other famous names, notably the Bodhani of Varadarāja, who was a Kasmirian. It may be presumed that he preferred to confine himself to Maithila works only. As Vardhamāna came after Divākara, we are of opinion that Śāṅkara drew up the above list in an ascending order of chronology. In other words, Tvantopādhyāya came after Vardhamāna, though all three preceded Śāṅkara's father Bhavanātha as the words of Śāṅkara seem to imply. Now Śāṅkara's father and teacher Bhavanātha lived about 1400 A. D. and the date of composition of the two works of Tvantopādhyāya—Mañṣikā and Makaranda—may be placed within 1375-1400 A. D. We can hail the latter's name, therefore, as the earliest commentator of Gaṅgeśa so far discovered. We should state here that Kṛṣṇadāsa Sārvabhauma's quotation from Tvantopādhyāya, reproduced above, is followed by two other quotations from unnamed scholiasts, who evidently came after Tvantopādhyāya.

ŚĀṆKARA MIŚRA : is a name to conjure with in Mithilā. He was a poet (in Paṇḍitavijaya and Rasārṇava), a dramatist (in Gauri-Digambara-Prahasana), a Smṛti writer and above all a foremost Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika scholar. He belonged to a most distinguished Śrottriya family of Mithilā and maintained two large seminaries in his celebrated homestead which is a place of pilgrimage in Mithilā. We shall confine ourselves in this account to his philosophical works only. The late M. M. Dr. Gaṅgānātha Jha published in 1915 an edition of his Vādivinoda with an introduction containing a most interesting account of the great scholar of extra-ordinary talents. He confronted the reigning monarch (probably the famous Śivasimha) when barely five years old with the extempore verse, still recited by Maithila students in wonder and worship :—

अपूर्णे पंचमे धर्मे वर्णयामि जगत्त्रयम् ॥

this royal visit fetched him money which by promise went to the drummer woman, whose drum sounded by itself at the time of Śaṅkara's birth ! She dug a tank with the money, which still goes by her name in the vicinity of Śaṅkara's house. There is a copy of the Harivamśa preserved in his house which was written by his students in one night. A copy of the Gītātikā from his house ends —

अहो सर्पसाम्राज्यमेतज्जानोत सत्त्वना ।

यामयुस्मेन यत्रासीदेक्षपत्रशतद्वयम् ॥

These are some of the wonderful relics still bearing testimony to the halo that strode over Mithilā 500 years ago.

Nyāya Vaiśeṣika works of Śaṅkara In the first flash of his great genius Śaṅkara tackled all the hard classics of Navya-nyāya without exception and wrote commentaries on each of them. His earliest work in this line seems to be (1) the Mamīmāyūkha radiating on the work of Gaṅgeśa. It has been mentioned by him in most of his works, e.g. in the Vādivinoda (p 59), Kaṇādarahasya (p 103), Līlāvatīkhanthabharana (p 73), Upaskāra (pp 154, 161 189, 341, 351 & 405) and the Ātmatattvavivekakaḥpalatā (B 1 ed, p 534). He seems to have regarded it himself as one of his best contributions. But the fact remains that in the heyday of Navya-nyāya studies over the work of Gaṅgeśa under Yajñapati and his disciple Jayadeva the Mayūkha of Śaṅkara practically lost all its lustre. As far as we are aware none of the eminent Navyanyāya authorities of Mithilā and Bengal from Yajñapati downwards ever took any notice of the Mamīkā of Śaṅkara, whose name is quite unknown in the main group of Navya-nyāya led by Gaṅgeśa. Why it is so is really a great mystery. Uptill now only one single copy of the last part of Śaṅkara's Mayūkha has been discovered proving that its circulation was very much limited. This unique copy is now preserved in Jammu, Kasmira beyond the reach of scholars. It is complete in 55 folios only (Stein's Jammu Cat., p. 144, Ms. No. 1537). Fortunately Stein realising the great importance of the copy has given extracts from the beginning and end (p. 332). We reproduce them below.

There are certain revealing features even in the small extracts. In the post-colophon statement the titles (M. M. and Sanmīśra) are attached to Bhavanātha alone, who was evidently still alive, and none to Śaṅkara, confirming our suggestion that this was his first work. In the opening verse Śaṅkara betrays his predilection for a book named Mahārṇava; it was Mīmāṃsāmahārṇava by Vateśvara belonging to the school of Prabhākara. This Prabhākara influence upon him might be one of the reasons for his unpopularity in the Gaṅgeśa group, though, pathetically, he claimed the Mañi as his own. In the first verse at the end Śaṅkara absolves himself curiously from both merits and demerits of his work, which attach only to his father and not to him; his task was only to write down what his father said! This sentiment is expressed by Śaṅkara in most of his subsequent works (vide Līlāvatikanṭhābharaṇa, the lacuna in the last verse should be filled up accordingly and Ātmatattvavivekakaḥpalatā at the end).

(2) Trisūtrīṃbandhavyākhyā : a commentary directly on the first portion of Udayana's Panśuddhi which was popularly known as Nibandha. A single copy of this extremely rare book of Śaṅkara was discovered by H. P. Śāstrī at Dīnājpur (Notices, III, No. 136) . It was complete in 123 folios written in the Bengali script Śaṅkara admits at the commencement that he endeavours only to construe the text, which was adorned already with three illuminating commentaries viz, Prakāśa (of Vardhamāna), Darpana (of Vateśvara) and Uddyota (of Divākara). The book is practically lost, Śaṅkara has not referred to it in any of his works

(3) Kīrtanārahmrūpaprakāśa this also seems from the name itself to be an analysis of the great treatise of Udayana. It is referred to only once in the Kanādarahasya (p. 177) It also remains yet to be discovered

(4) Bhedaprakāśa , published fortunately in the Sarasvatī-Bhavana Texts (under the name of Bhedaratna 1933 pp. 73 from a Ms dated 1579 V. S) It is a bold refutation of Vedāntic Monism from the standpoint of the stout dualism of the Nyāya. In striking contrast with Vācaspati's Khandanoddhāra, which lost itself sô to speak on dialectic skill without grappling with the fundamental doctrines Śaṅkara struck at the very root of the controversy with an array of both Vedic texts and arguments. It was for this reason selected as the target in preference to Vācaspati's work by Madhusūdana Sarasvatī, who as the leader of the Śaṅkarite saints of Varanasi, wrote a full refutation in the Advaitaratnarakṣanam in a violent and most unsaintly language. There is an imaginary conversation towards the end of the latter book where Śaṅkara is addressed as an aged bull (वृद्धोत्त) . And Śaṅkara's mild protest also is recorded The Bhedaprakāśa was one of Śaṅkara's earliest works. It is mentioned already in the Vādivinoda (p. 44). Hall (Index, p. 85) examined a copy at Varanasi and the very same copy is now preserved at Jammu (Stein's Jammu Cat., 1894, pp. 327-28). The date of transcript is 1519 V. S. Caitra-Pūrṇimā, Tuesday (corresponding correctly to March 16, 1462 A.D.) and it was copied at Kāśī, in the lifetime of Śaṅkara.

(5) Khaṇḍanaṭīkā : This was completely published from Varanasi as early as 1888 A. D. (edited by Bhāgavatācārya, pp. 732) and made Śaṅkara's name well-known throughout the learned world. It was written after the Bhedaparakāśa which is twice cited (pp. 61 & 124 : विप्रपञ्चितश्चायमुद्धारो भेदप्रकाशे) and before the Vādaṇoda probably. Like most of his works Śaṅkara wrote this after taking 'illuminating' lessons from his father, who again was indebted to his elder brother Jīvanātha (not Jayanātha). The concluding verse as printed should be emended slightly thus :

स्वभ्रातृजीवनायस्य व्याख्यामाख्यातवान् यतः ।

मत्पिता भवनाथो या तामिहलिखमुज्ज्वलाम् ॥ (p. 732)

There is an interesting colophon at the end of the section on Anupalabdhi (p. 415) :—

व्याख्यानमिदमस्माकं यथा पितृवचस्तथा ।

व्याख्यानगुणदोषाभ्यां संबन्धो मत्पितुर्न मे ॥

The next section begins with another interesting verse :

या सूक्तिर्भवनायवक्त्रकमलादुद्भूतरी तत्कृतं

सौभाग्यं प्रतिपद्य शुद्धमतिभिः श्लाघापदं लम्बिता ।

न्यस्ता सज्जनमानसे विजयतामापुष्पवन्तोदयं

ग्रन्थग्रन्थिविमोचनाय रचना वाचामियं शाङ्करी ॥

It is a magnificent expression of his own talents coupled with a sense of rare filial obligation. Śaṅkara evidently regarded this commentary as one of his masterpieces and the learned world seems to have endorsed it by accepting it as Śaṅkara's best work. In the very life time of Śaṅkara a superior scholar Pra-galbhācārya, who it should be noted, was not a Maithila, regarded it as an authoritative work, upon which his own commentary on the Khandana was based. For, Pragalbha clearly states at the beginning of his commentary, Khandanadarpaṇa श्रीमच्छङ्कर-वर्द्धमानरचितोपायान् विलोड्यापि च (verse 4 Khandana with 5 commentaries Chowkh ed., p. 4) Śaṅkara appears in a dual role in this undertaking. In the first place he attempted to explain the views of Śrīharṣa faithfully from the standpoint of the Vedānta, but in many places (vide pp. 93-124) he attempted equally to meet the arguments of Śrīharṣa from the standpoint of dualism. Everywhere, however, he marvellously concluded with a compromise on behalf of Śrīharṣa and the phrases he used are quite amusing. Such are — तथापि “आपाततो यदिदमद्वयवादिनोनाम्” इत्यादावेव वात्पर्यम् (p 95).

तथापि “स्वप्रकाशसिद्धमेव ब्रह्माद्वैतम्” इति भावः । (p. 98).

तथापि “तत्त्वप्रकाशपरमार्थचिदेव भूत्वा” इत्यत्र वात्पर्यम् । (p. 103).

तथापि “स्वप्रकाशोऽद्वैते वात्पर्यम्” । (p 109).

Śaṅkara's comments must have raised protests from staunch followers of the Vedānta. One of them was Raghunātha (Vidyālankāra) author of the Bhāṣāmaṇi, the longest commentary on the Khandana. We have cited elsewhere Sārvaabhauma's retort as recorded by Raghunātha, who was his grand-pupil. The passage of Śaṅkara exactly occurs in the Khandanaṭīkā (p 95) In one place Śaṅkara answers Śrīharṣa in a masterly way by twisting a verse of the latter —

सुदूरभाषनाश्रन्ता वाधबुद्धिपरम्परा-

विनिवृत्ताद्वयान्नायैः पाष्णिष्माहैर्न जीयते ॥ (p. 98)

Raghunātha's criticism here, quoted in the footnote, ends with a most interesting remark, throwing a side-light on Śaṅkara's popularity among his contemporaries as a poet rather than a scholar.

इत्यलं काव्यरचनाकुशलानां तेनैव स्वशिष्यानामोदयतां स्तण्डनकयया ।

There is a very old copy of Śaṅkara's Khaṇḍānakā, preserved in the Sarasvatī-Bhavana, Varanasi (Ms. No. 134 of the Dhundhīrāja collection). The post-colophon runs :

शुभमस्तु पुस्तकस्य कर्तुर्लोकस्य च ।

गौड राज्यमनुत्तमं सुविदितं यत्रास्ति पूगोच्चयः

भृङ्गारामृतवापिकापुरतय X X X सलीतये ।

संयत् १५०६ समये आचरणं यदि द्वादशी शुक्रदिने । श्रीमत् कार्या विश्वेश्वर-
राजधान्या । The date works out to be August 1473 (not 1472)
A. D., when Śaṅkara Miśra was alive, as the scribe clearly indicates.

(6) Kaṇādarahasya A very useful Vaiśeṣika manual of moderate length fortunately published at Varanasi (Chowkh., 1917, pp. 177). Śaṅkara gives here a complete survey of all Vaiśeṣika doctrines after the manner of Prasastapāda and though he has not indicated his sources, it is clear that he wrote after consulting all up-to-date works on the subject. The fling at the 'Gaudas' (p 48) for their incorrect pronunciation of the three sibilants is exactly borrowed, for instance from the Līlāvatī (p 445) As we have stated before (p. 10), Śaṅkara wrongly ascribed three views of the Vyomāvatī to the Kandali (pp 81, 82 & 87), each of them refuted by Udayana. Śaṅkara has punctuated the manual with many Kārikās drawn from various sources (pp. 7, 23, 25, 26, 47, 88, 93, 98, 100, 109, 123, 152 & 163). He betrays the influence of his age by waxing eloquent whenever a Gaṅgeśa brand topic crops up (e.g. Vyāptivāda and Upādhivāda on pp. 93-100) Like an orthodox Vaiśeṣika Śaṅkara divided the book into six sections without adding one on Negation.

(7) Vādavinoda a remarkable manual exclusively dealing with rules of debate and specially how to defeat a proud opponent. It was edited by M. M. Dr. Gaṅgānātha Jha (Allahabad, 1915, pp 4+73) It is divided into 5 Ullāsas under the scheme set forth in verse :

कथातः प्रश्नतः प्रश्नज्ञानात् प्रश्नपराहृतेः ।

प्रश्नानुत्तरतः कापि पराहृद्वाशात्तनम् ॥

The bulk of the book is taken up by the first chapter (pp. 1-14) on the rules of debate and the third (pp. 47-71) on the exact connotation of a problem containing a brilliant survey of all philosophical topics. Unlike the other works of Śaṅkara this book refers to many early authors and works, some of which are important. An alphabetical list is appended here.

Anumānamayūkha (p 59), Ācārya (17), Candra (53), Cintāmaṇi (17), Jīvanātha Mīśra (61), Nyāyalocana (57), Bhedaprakāśa (44), Maṇikanṭha Mīśra (17, 35-36), Ratnaśoṣa (2, 17), Mahārṇava (53), Murāri Mīśra (53), Līlāvatī (41), Vallabhācārya (41), Śaṅkara (41), and Sānātani (2). The Vādrvinoda is mentioned in the Kaṇādarahasya (103 & 177) and the Upaskāra (p. 397).

(8) Vaiśeṣikasūtropaskāra The original Vaiśeṣikasūtras of Kaṇāda, like the Sāṅkhyasūtras of Kapila, were neglected by scholars ever since Praśastapāda composed the excellent manual named Padārthapraveśa which ousted all previous works of the school and came to be regarded as the Bhāṣya, which it was strictly not. The paucity of literature upon the Sūtras as against that upon the so-called Bhāṣya of Praśastapāda is well-known and by a stroke of genius Śaṅkara Mīśra immortalised himself by writing this running commentary upon the Sūtras. Śaṅkara was quite conscious of the adventurous nature of his task, which he likened to sporting in the sky, but his ambition was more than fulfilled when we find that the Upaskāra became the standard work on the subject throughout India. Śaṅkara had written thus at the commencement of the book :—

सूत्रमात्रावलम्बेन निरालम्बेऽपि गच्छत ।

स्वे खेलवन्ममाप्यत्र साहसं सिद्धिमेष्यति ॥ (verse 3)

The only previous work Śaṅkara had before him was ■ certain Vṛtti, which he had frequently cited (B. I. ed , 1861, pp 6, 51, 55, 58, 161, 200, 260, 264, 283, 411, 414 & 419). It was an early work, as indicated by Śaṅkara and is now completely lost. But Śaṅkara admits in the second verse of the introduction that he was indebted to two persons for his knowledge on the Tantra viz the ancient sage Kaṇāda and the recent scholar Bhavanātha, his own father. Probably he had only fragments of the Vṛtti before him. Naturally Śaṅkara had adorned his commentary with brilliant summaries of Navyānyāya topics, whenever he found an opportunity. For instance, the Maṅgalvāda (pp. 3-6), the Mukti-vāda (pp. 10-18) the Vyāpti-vāda (pp 149-55), Pākānumāna (pp. 285-92), Dvītvaprakarana (pp 318-24) and references to his own Manṭikā betray his predilection. Nevertheless the Upaśkāra is the only work now available on the Sūtras of Kaṇāda, which were shaped into a regular text-book, though how far they represent the original work of Kaṇāda remains a matter of investigation and speculation

(9) Līlāvatīkaṇṭhābharāṇa A complete commentary on the work of Śrīvallabha It explains the original text and ■ not a sub-commentary of Vardhamāna's Prakāśa It was written after the Vādivinoda and the Kaṇādarahasya (both mentioned on p. 777. The references to Bhāsarvajñācārya (wrongly printed in the Chowkh. ed , p. 771) and the Kandalī-kāra (p. 842 vide Kandalī p. 119) should be noted As this work is now fortunately published along with Vardhamāna's Prakāśa (Chowkh , ed , 1934, pp. 834) we invite the attention of scholars to a remarkable feature in it Śaṅkara has nowhere mentioned the name of Vardhamāna in this commentary. On the other hand in many places Vardhamāna's views have been cited anonymously (e.g. इत्येके p. 13) and mostly criticised (अनादेयम् p. 2, अयुक्त्म् pp 10 & 76. Also pp 47-48 where Vardhamāna had refuted the words of a previous commentator). Śāṅkara apparently did not belong to the group of Vardhamāna who was looked upon somewhat in a spirit of rivalry. This feeling towards Vardhamāna was undoubtedly acquired by Śāṅkara from his father and senior uncle. For he has stated at the end of his commentary that all his explanations had been derived from his father, who again learnt them from his elder brother.

स्वभ्रातुर्जीविनाथस्य न्याय्यामाख्यातवान् यत ।

मत्पिता भवनाथो या तामिहालिखमुत्तमाम् ॥

(p. 864 also Ātmatattvavivekakalpalatā B I ed, p. 948)

VĀCASPATI MIŚRA II One of the greatest academic figures of Mithilā and regarded as the foremost authority in Maithilā Smṛti. He wrote in his old age the Śrāddhakalpa (i.e. Pitr̥bhaktitaranginī) when he was the crest jewel of all the assemblies of (Maithilā) scholars (according to the epithet सकलपण्डितमण्डलीशिरोमणिना found in the colophon of the book L 2001). In the following verse at the end of the book he recorded the total number of his previous works —

शास्त्रे दश स्मृतौ त्रिंशन्नियन्था येन यौवने ।

निर्मितास्तेन चरमे वयस्येप विनिर्ममे ॥

'Śāstra' as distinguished from 'smṛti' means here the Nyāya philosophy. For, Vācaspati himself states at the end of his Kṛtyapradīpa (Des Cat of Mithilā Mss Vol I p 67) —

धरो जात क्लृपरहिते कर्ममीमांसकानाम्

अन्वीक्षाया गुरुकुरुण्या लब्धतत्वावबोध ।

श्रीमान् वाचस्पतिरहमिह श्रीवये पुण्यभाजा

नत्वा नत्वा कमलनयन कृत्यदीप तनोमि ॥

The smṛti works of Vācaspati have engaged the labours of many distinguished scholars, notably M. Chakravarti (J.A.S.B. 1915, pp. 394-400) and Kane (Hist. of Dharmasastra, I, pp. 399-400). We shall only attempt to give a brief account of the Nyāya works of Vācaspati in this book and assign his proper place in the history of Navyanyāya in Mithilā .

Vācaspati wrote, what appears to be one of the best commentaries on the Nyāyasūtras of Gotama—(1) the Nyāya-(or Naya)-Tattvāloka, better known as Tattvāloka. No complete copy of the book has yet been discovered. The largest fragment is preserved in London (I. O., I, pp 610-11)¹ which was examined by us thoroughly. The third introductory verse, cited by us before (p 2), where the six earlier commentaries are respectfully mentioned, proves along with the author's sense of diffidence exhibited in vv. 4-5 that it was one of the earliest works of Vācaspati, if not his very first work.

धीरसङ्गममवाय मादशैरल्पधीमिरपि यन्निबध्यते ।

An alphabetical list of the authorities cited in the book is given below.

1 Eggeling's descriptive note requires correction. The last folio with a blank reverse which is marked '182' in a decidedly later hand is really '164' which is missing in its proper place, this real page mark is still visible behind the present correction. Fol. 165-181 contain the commentary on the whole of the first 'āhnikā' of Chap III (with its colophon in 176a) and of the whole of the first three 'prakaranas' of the second 'āhnikā'. This portion has a new pagination (fol 1-17) along with the old one. The Ms. is in the Bengali script from three different hands (1-120, 121-26, 127-81). Fol. 113 is missing, in its place there is a f l., marked 33, from the same hand but belonging to quite a different book. Of the five colophons two (81a, 176a) name the book 'Nyāyatattvāloka', two (134b, 164a) 'Nyāya' and one (92a) simply 'Tattvāloka'.

We have omitted in the above list the numerous references to unspecified sources like Prāñcaḥ, Navyāḥ, Saugatāḥ, Śāṅkhyāḥ, etc. The largest number of references belongs to Gaṅgeśa. In fact the Tattvāloka is one of the earliest attempts to explain the Nyāyasūtras under the new light of Gaṅgeśa's epoch-making work. Whole chapters of the Cintāmaṇi have been summarised by Vācaspati under different sūtras, e.g., Maṅgalavāda in the beginning, Muktivāda under I. i. 22, Vidhivāda under II. i. 63 etc. With the ever increasing popularity of the Cintāmaṇi the study of the original Nyāyasūtras declined. It is a remarkable and interesting fact that the Tattvāloka is more than double the size of the Nyāyarahasya the next commentary on the Nyāyasūtras which was written by Rāmabhadra Sārvabhauma of Navadvīpa more than a century after Vācaspati—the corresponding portion of the present fragment of the Tattvāloka ends on folio 88a of the Baranasi Ms. of the Nyāyarahasya of about the same size. About a century later again, Viśvanātha Pañcānana wrote the Vṛtti, which is much smaller in size than the Nyāyarahasya and in the 18th century, the Vṛtti of Viśvanātha again was summarised by an unknown scholar¹ It should be noted that Vācaspati has not referred to any of his own works in the Tattvāloka

The text of the Nyāyasūtras as determined by himself was shown by Vācaspati in a separate booklet named (2) Nyāyasūtroddhāra It was written when he was adorning the court of a certain king of Mithilā. The total number of Sūtras according to him is 531 as against 528 arrived at by the earlier Vācaspati in the Nyāyasūcīmbandha It appears that the late Mahāmahopādhyāya V. P. Dvivedi had access to a Ms. of this work copied in Caitra 1428 The so-called Gautamsūtram printed along with the Nyāyabhāṣya in pp. 28 with the introductory verse, is not an edition of the Nyāyasūtroddhāra, as is sometimes supposed, but only a text of the Nyāyasūtras prepared by the editor of the Bhāṣya after consulting various books including a copy of the Sūtroddhāra.

श्रीवाचस्पतिमिश्रेण मिथिलेश्वरसूरिणा ।

लिख्यते मुनिमूर्धन्य श्रीगौतमसवं महत् ॥

The next work of Vācaspati—(3) the Nyāyaratnaprakāśa—seems to have escaped the notice of all scholars It is a commentary on the Nyāyaratna of Manikantha Miśra, a pre-Gaṅgeśa Navyanyāya scholar of Mithilā

There is a complete copy of Vācaspati's commentary at Poona which we have thoroughly examined The beginning and the end of this unique book are exactly reproduced below —(B. O. R I Ms No. 775 of 1884 87, foll 71)

The date of the copy works out regularly to be 1616 V. S. when Kārtika Badi 3 actually fell on a Friday, corresponding to Nov 17, 1559 A.D. The commentary was written by Vācaspati at the request of Padmāvatī, queen of Mahārājādhirāja Pratāparudra (son of Vīryabhānu), a ‘Chauhānī’ prince of Pañcālabhūmi. We are unable to trace the name of the king who must have flourished somewhere in the United Provinces in the second quarter (1425-50 A.D.) of the 15th century. A doubt will naturally arise whether this Vācaspati is identical with the famous scholar of Mithilā. The following facts however substantially prove the identity. The last verse at the end of the commentary embodying the author's diffidence and humble approach towards scholars is exactly reproduced in the beginning of the Khandanoddāra.¹ The views expressed in the present commentary regarding mangalā carana' exactly tally with those found in the Tattvāloka.² Moreover, a Navyanyāya work of Mithilā is not likely to engage the labours of a non-Maithila or non-Bengali scholar in the 15th century.

The question now is what led Vācaspati to leave his native land and seek patronage of a foreign prince. We conjecture that there was trouble at Mithilā when Narasimha of the junior-most branch of the Raj family became chief after the death of Sivasimha and Padmasimha of the senior branch sometime between 1425 and 1435 A. D. He came back probably when Bhairavasimha became the undisputed king of Mithilā.

1 Introd verse 4 (with the reading निर for निव)

The first leaf which is torn leaves lacuna in the first two verses which are filled up from readings in a small fragment (foll 30 only) of this very commentary preserved in the Oriental Institute Baroda (Ms. No 10287) this fragment goes up to the fol 11b of the Poona Ms

2 Fol 2b विदितमपि यम न्यवन्धि, न हि उपनिबन्धोऽपि सन्न उपमिति ।

The Nyāyaratnaprakāśa, unlike other works of the great author, is not discursive but concise. It practically contains no references to works and authors other than those found in the Nyāyaratna itself. Manikanṭha quotes from the Ratnakōśa, one of the passages is — सशयविरोधिर्मद्वयविषयानुमितिजनकत्व सत्प्रतिपक्षत्वमिति रत्नकोश¹. Vācaspati comments तद्विभिन्नमतमाह-सशयेति and then (fol. 37b), exactly reproduces the argument of Gaṅgeśa in refutation of this view. This finally settles Taranūmisra's authorship of the Ratnakōśa.

Vācaspati next wrote three independent treatises viz ,

(4) Pratyaksasūtrnaya, not yet discovered but cited in the Khandanoddhāra (p 139)

(5) Anumānamrāya, also cited in the Khandanoddhāra (pp. 72, 83-4 & 90), a Maithila fragment of this work is reported from Nepal, wrongly described as a commentary on the Anumānakhandā. The introductory verse cited below proves that like the Tattvacintāmaṇi it analyses the Nyāya and Mīmāṃsā views on inference (Sastri Nepal Cat, I p 94)

(6) Śabdanāmaya cited in his own Dvaitanāmaya (Darbhanga ed p 8)

(7) The Khandanoddhāra is a bold refutation of Śrīharsa's Khandana from the standpoint of the Nyāya. It is a learned work and best displays the author's dialectical skill and vastness of learning. The numerous references found in the book are collected here alphabetically.

Vācaspati's contemporary Śaṅkara Miśra of Mithilā also wrote a Bhedaratna about the same time. Both of them were regarded as the greatest opponents of the Vedānta at that time and drew forth a sharp and interesting retort from their younger contemporary Vāsudeva Sārvabhauma of Bengal, who had a distinct leaning towards the Vedānta, though he was also a distinguished commentator of the Tattvacintāmaṇi. We quote this important passage of the Khaṇḍanabhūṣāmaṇi of Raghunātha .—

किं च, सर्वमभिन्नं घटपटौ भिन्नाविति बुद्धयोः प्रामाण्ये सति क बाध्यबाधक-

1. vide fol. 68b of Ms No 95 of Sans Coll, Calcutta and fol 50b of Ms at Sarasvatī-Bhavana, Varanasi. Compare Bhedaratna (S. B. Text, p. 53) and Khaṇḍanoddhāra (pp. 45-47)

The implication of the passage should not be ignored, Raghunātha the author of the Khandanabhūsāmanī, who calls Sārvabhauma his 'Paramaguru' becomes quite different from the famous Raghunātha Śiromanī who was according to reliable evidence his direct pupil (vide Vāṅge Navyanyāyā-carcā, pp 36-37) The language of the above couplet of Sārvabhauma seems to show that Vācaspati slightly preceded Sankara Mīśra, for, by ordinary rules of grammar, the compound should have been शङ्करवाचस्पत्यो as in the Dandanivekā of Vardhamāna II (introd., v 6)

(8) Vācaspati also commented on the Tattvacintāmanī, perhaps last of all¹ for, he has not referred to this commentary in any of his previous works as far as available. There is a unique Ms of the Pratyakṣa chapter of the Cintāmanīprakāśa preserved in the *Sarasvatī Bhavana*² The colophon runs—

इति महामहोपाध्याय-सन्मित्र-श्रीवाचस्पतिकृती चिन्तामणिप्रकाशे प्रत्यक्ष-परिच्छेदः । अलेखि शुचिनायेन

As we shall presently see it is probably the earliest extant commentary on the Tattvacintāmanī

(9) That Vācaspati also commented on the Anumāna chapter of Gangeśa will be apparent from the following evidence Kanāda Tarkavāgīśa, who was by tradition a fellow-student of Śiromanī, commented on the Cintāmanī. We have come across the following passage in the (Vyāpti) Pūrvapakṣa-prakarana of Kanāda's Anumānamanivyākhyā —

वाचस्पतिमित्रास्तु प्रागुक्तयोरत्यन्तान्योन्याभावगर्मलक्षणयो सिद्ध्युद्घावलोकन-न्यायेन दूषणान्तरमाह—महानसादाविति । सकलक्षणाभावात् = प्रागुक्तयोरलक्षण-

प्राहुः । आलोकयितुम् (fol 15b of a Ms in our possession)

This peculiar interpretation of Vācaspati has also been cited under his name by Jagadīśa Tarkālaṅkāra in the *Maṇi-mayūkha*¹ apparently borrowing from Kaṇāda Pragalbhācārya also respectfully quotes the interpretation under the flattering epithet 'Sampradāyaviḍaḥ'.² Moreover, in the Anu-miṭi-prakarana of Anumānāloka of Jayadeva (Pakṣadhara) the passage न च संशयस्थले निश्चिष्टधीरेव न सादृशीति वाच्यम् (fol. 4b) refers, according to Bhavānanda Siddhāntavāgīśa, to an interpretation of Vācaspati वाचस्पतिमतमाशङ्क्य निषेधति—न चेति'. It should be noticed that both the passages of Vācaspati cited above have reference to particular text of the Cintāmaṇi and are not likely to belong to his independent treatise Anumānamṛṇya.

What was the tenth or the last work of Vācaspati on the Nyāya remains a matter of speculation. It may be the Śabda-khaṇḍa of this Cintāmaṇiprakāśa or a commentary on the Nyāyalīlāvati, if the following passage, which we traced in a fragment of an unidentified commentary on the Līlāvati-Śiromaṇi preserved in a private collection at Navadvīpa warrants such a conjecture.—न च व्याप्ती चरमद्रव्यपदं मणिव्यसंज्ञन्यदाहस्य मय्युपादानोपादेयत्वाभावात् व्यभिचारवारकमस्तु आद्य तु किमर्थमिति वाच्यं स्वार्ग-शरीरस्य आत्ममनःसंयोगध्वंसरूपप्रयागमरणजन्यत्वेन व्यभिचारवारकत्वात् इति वाचस्पतिमित्राः । तन्न, (fol. 103b). Vācaspati also wrote a Sahasrā-dhikāraṇa on the Pūrvamīmāṃsā rules of interpretation. Two references to this work were traced by us in the Navyadharma-pradīpa of Kṛpārāma Tarkavāgīśa written in 1686 Śaka (1764-5 A. D.)³ अत्रौडुम्बरी वाग्नी प्रतिमेति सायनः "उडुम्बरशाखेति माधवाचार्यः इति सहस्राधिकग्यो वाचस्पतिमित्राः । This long lost work on the Mīmāṃsā may also have been included in his philosophical works.

Vacaspati and his contemporaries As the author of the above ten works Vacaspati chronologically stands at the top of a galaxy of Navyanyāya scholars of Mithilā and Bengal. As we have stated above Vācaspati preceded both Jayadeva and Pragalbhācārya. A more convincing proof of Vācaspati's relation with the other great scholars of the period has been traced by us. In the Prāmānyavāda (of the Pratyaksakhanda) Vācaspati comments on the second 'Vipratipatti' thus —

अत्र प्रामाण्यग्रहस्य तज्ज्ञानविषयकेऽन्वयज्ञानजन्यतया तज्ज्ञानविषयकज्ञान-
जन्यत्वं न्यायनयेनासिद्धं तज्ज्ञानप्रामाण्यस्यैव तज्ज्ञानविषयतया च तज्ज्ञानविषयक-ज्ञानाजन्यज्ञानप्राप्त्यत्र परतः पक्षेऽप्यक्षतमिति न वाच्यं तज्ज्ञानविषयकसमानाधि- करणज्ञानाजन्यसमानाधिकरणज्ञानविषयत्वस्य विवक्षितत्वात् । जन्यपदद्वयप्रक्षेपेण तु न समाधानं परं प्रति व्यावर्त्योपसिद्धेः¹ ।

Both the solutions suggested here for meeting the two objections the word 'Samānādhikarana' as an addendum being Vācaspati's own peculiar solution in preference to the word 'Janya' suggested by a previous commentator have been referred to and rejected by Jayadeva viz — 'न च समानाधिकरणवद्वजन्य पदार्थुपादानमेव तदर्थं त्रियतामिति युक्तं परमते व्यर्थविशेषणत्वात्' Bhavānanda Siddhantavāgiśa in his Pratyaksalokasaramaṇījari stated in his comment on the present passage उपाध्याय-वाचस्पतिमित्रयोर्मतं निराक्षप्ते-न चेति । द्वितीयतृतीयज्ञानयोः समानाधिकरणत्वं जन्यत्वं वा विशेषण-मित्यर्थः । In this comment Bhavānanda mentions the name of Upadhyāya (i.e. Yajñapati) before Vācaspati. This is not chronologically correct. Bhavānanda was a pupil of Kṛṣṇadāsa Sārvabhauma from whom evidently he got the information Kṛṣṇadāsa's Pratyaksalokaprasāraṇi has been recently discovered by us. He correctly notes here — वाचस्पतिमित्रोपाध्यायोर्मत-माराध्य निषेधति—न चेति (fol 34a of Ms in our possession). It was known to Kṛṣṇadāsa that both chronologically and exegeti-

2 Fol 14a of a Ms. of the Pratyakṣāloka in our possession

cally Vācaspati preceded Upādhyāya¹. Pragalbhācārya has also referred to the above solution of Vācaspati, but the ground of his rejection of it is different — यद्वा ईश्वरज्ञानेन सिद्धसाधनवारणाय तदादायासंभववारणाय च तज्ज्ञानविषयकसमानाधिकरणज्ञानाजन्यसमानाधिकरणज्ञानप्राप्तमिति साध्यम् । तच्चिन्त्यम् । वस्तुत्वादिसामान्यलक्षणाप्रत्यासत्तिजन्यज्ञानेन वृत्तरूपवता न्यायमते सिद्धसाधनात्, न्यायनये व्यतिरेकसाधने बाधाद्वा² । Rucidatta, the pupil of Jayadeva, reproduces here both the grounds of rejection (fol 32a, of A S Ms No III C 120) :—परमते व्यर्थविशेषणत्वात्, सामान्यलक्षणादिजन्यज्ञानप्राप्तत्वेन तथापि पूर्वोक्तदोषानतिवृत्तेश्च । Vāsudeva Sārvabhauma's comment on the point is not available, but his pupil Śiromani, curiously enough, sticks to the solution of Vācaspati ignoring the adverse criticisms (Prāmānyavāda, 1901, p. 66) For the purposes of chronology all the above important references are, however thrown to the shade by the momentous discovery that Yajñapati formulated his own solution of the problem after rejecting that of Vacaspati. Yajñapati comments on the point :—अग्रे त्वीश्वरज्ञानेन सिद्धसाधनवारणाय तदादायासम्भवस्य च वारणाय तज्ज्ञानविषयसमानाधिकरणज्ञानाजन्यसमानाधिकरणज्ञानप्राप्तमिति साध्यं वर्णयन्ति । (Pratyaksaprabhā, Paris copy fol 23-24) Yajñapati's son Narahari reproduces his father's argument in the Pratyaksadūsanoddhāra thus —(fol 29b of London copy). न च तज्ज्ञानविषयकसमानाधिकरणज्ञानाजन्यसमानाधिकरणज्ञानप्राप्तमिति विधिकोट्यर्थ इति वाच्यं तथापि सामान्यलक्षणादिजन्यज्ञानादिना सिद्धसाधनस्य तादवस्थ्यादिति चेत्—अत्रास्मत्पितृचरणा, तज्ज्ञानविषयकसमानाधिकरणज्ञानाजन्यतन्मात्रविषयकज्ञानप्राप्तमिति विधिकोट्यर्थं तत्र सिद्धसाधनम् । तज्ज्ञानविषयकज्ञानप्रामाण्यं न पक्षे तेन तत्र न बाधो दोष इत्याहुः । Vācaspati, therefore, composed the commentary on Gangeśa's work sometime before the whole band of brilliant scholars, both of Mithilā and Bengal, occupied the field. Jayadeva, who wrote between 1460-75 A. D., was preceded by his teacher Yajñapati (about 1450 A.D. who again came after Vācaspati. On the other hand, Śiromani's teacher Sārvabhauma was preceded by Pragalbhācārya, who was slightly senior to Jayadeva. All of them Sārvabhauma, Pragalbha and Jayadeva criticised Yajñapati and sometimes violently. All these point to the conclusion that Vācaspati's Nyāya works were composed not later than 1440 A.D. and among his Nyāya works, it should be noted the Mamaprakāśa was probably the latest. Vacaspati lived long enough to witness in his old age the flying colours of Yajñapati and Jayadeva which fully eclipsed the glories of his early life in the field of Navyanyaya. It is thus that the pathetic appeal at the end of his last work the Śrāddhakalpa becomes significant

अवलोकयत कृतिमिमा कदृणाश्चरणात्तयेन हृदयेन ॥

Vācaspati probably concentrated on studies in Smṛti since the advent of Yajñapati and Jayadeva in the field of Navyanyāya.

Vacaspati's family As stated by himself Vacaspati belonged to a 'spotless' family of Karmamīmāṃsakas. In other words, all his ancestors were devotees of the Vedic culture and well versed in Mīmāṃsā, the logic of the Veda. The Mūlagrāma of his family is named 'Palī' or 'Pallī' belonging to the Vatsya gotra, of which a branch is named after Vācaspati's native village 'Sarnaulī'. Quite a bewildering mass of materials of Vācaspati's family connections are scattered in the Pañjīs, where he is given the supreme title 'Paramaguru', which was never enjoyed by any other scholar in Mithilā with the single exception of Gangeśa. These valuable genealogical data have been critically studied and published by Prof Jha (Svadeśa, I. in pp 137-44). We need only refer to a few prominent details of chronological significance. He had four wives. His first wife's father was a grandson of Mahārāja Bhogīśvara and his eldest son (by this wife) Laksmīnātha married the daughter's daughter of M. M. Rudradhara Upādhyāya, the famous Smārta, who was thus an exact contemporary and probably slightly senior in age to Vācaspati. His second wife's father was the daughter's son of Mahārāja Bhavēśvara. His third wife of the respectable 'Satalakhā' family was the first cousin of Śaṅkara Miśra's third wife. His fourth wife of the respectable 'Sodarapura' family was a cousin of Śaṅkara Miśra, who was thus his exact peer in age, relation and, let us add, learning. His youngest son (by the third wife) Mahopādhyāya Śrīhari Miśra gave his daughter in marriage to Bhavanātha, a son of M. M. Śucikara Upādhyāya of the Kujauli family. Vācaspati had a very large number of descendants, he had at least 28 grandsons, among whom only one M. M. Keśava (son of M. M. Narahari) made his name in the learned world as the author of the Dvaitapañiṣṭa.

Vācaspati's patrons In his early life Vācaspati went abroad and was patronised by Queen Padmāvatī of Pañcāla. His connection with the rulers of Mithilā was, however, long and intimate. He wrote many works on Smṛti in the name of Harinārāyaṇa, the royal title of King Bhairavasīṅha, who was a cousin of his third wife. The most famous compilation of Vācaspati ascribed to Harinārāyaṇa is the Smṛtimahārṇava. This king Bhairava had five wives, according to the Pañjīs, and the second wife named Jayāno is abundantly praised by Vācaspati in the introduction to his great discursive work Dvaitanirṇaya (verses 4-10). She was the mother of 'Rājādhirāja' Puruṣottamadeva, who was younger to Rāmabhadra and did not evidently ascend the throne. She ceremoniously employed Vācaspati, 'the master of all sciences' (v. 7 : निम्निलतन्त्रविद्) to write that book. It was written when Bhairava was still reigning. This Prince Puruṣottama was sonless, though he had four wives.

There is a copy of Mahādānanirṇaya at Nepal (Sastri : Nepal Cat. Vol. I, pp. 122-3) ; it is ascribed to Harinārāyaṇa in the beginning and to Rupanārāyaṇa at the end. This has caused some confusion, and it has been surmised that Bhairava enjoyed both royal titles (S N Sinha · Hist Tirhut, p 75) But it is extremely unlikely that father and son should have the same 'Virudā'. The copy is not available for examination It is much more likely that Bhairava was dead when the book was finished and his son Rāmabhadra was on the throne at the time. Vācaspati's last work the Pitr̥bhaktitaranginī was expressly written at the fag end of his life at the request of the latter king.

Date of Vācaspati Since the discovery of the Kandahā Inscription of Narasinhadeva (i e Darpanārāyaṇa, the father of Bhairava &c) dated 'शकादे शराज्यमदनाङ्किते' which undoubtedly means 1375 Saka corresponding to 1453 4 A. D.¹ it is clear that Bhairava and his two sons Rāmabhadra and Puruṣottama, all mentioned by Vācaspati, were living about 1480-1590 A. D. We should conclude, therefore, that the birth-date of Vācaspati cannot be placed before 1400 A. D. nor can it be placed after 1410 A. D., in consideration of the fact that his philosophical works all written in his 'youth', could not have been composed after 1440 A. D., as we have stated above He must have survived till about 1490 A. D. if not later still Perhaps he was a man of the whole century

YAJÑAPATI UPĀDHYĀYA Better and more commonly known as simply Upādhyāya was the author of a commentary named Prabhā on the three parts of Gaṅgeśa's work (omitting as usual the Upamāna part). Copies of the Prabhā are extremely rare There is a copy of the Pratyakṣa part in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (A. Cabaton's Cat of Mss, 1907, II 150, No. 904, foll 100), a rotograph is now preserved in the Asiatic Society It is in Maithilī script (not Bengali as written in the Cat) and begins —

There is an old copy of the second part of the Prabhā preserved in the Darbhanga Raj Library (foll 125, 5 lines to a page the copy belonged to one Balarāma Chakravartī, 7 foll of Sūtras are added in the copy ending with the date 1408 Śaka Śrāvaṇa 28 i. e. 1486 A. D.). It begins —

No copy of the last part of the Prabhā has yet been discovered as far as we are aware. That Yajñapati had commented on this part also may be inferred from the fact that a quotation of his son Narahari, who defended his father against the attacks of Jayadeva, has been found in Rāghavendratīrtha's

Nyayadīpa on the Tarkatāndava (Mysore ed , Vol II, p 35) referring to the Yogyatā section of the last part Upādhyāya is also cited in the Sabda-Pragalbhi (Poona copy, fol. 2) Many unfounded traditions existed about Yajñapati in the seminaries specially of Bengal . It was given out for instance that Yajñapati was a son of Vardhamānopādhyāya and was more brilliant than the latter . In the Śabdakalpādruma (p. 1791 under the word 'Nyāya ') it was stated that he was a pupil of both Gangeśa and Vardhamāna (तयोश्चात्रौ मणिमिश्रयज्ञपत्युपाध्यायौ मणिप्रभाकारौ) The extracts given above dispell all these traditions as entirely baseless and prove the following facts which should be carefully noted (1) His father named Śivapati had written a certain book (grantha) which does not seem to be a commentary and was probably an independent treatise on the Nyāya doctrines and Yajñapati based his commentary on that book of his father . He does not clearly state that he read with his father

(2) Yajñapati's Prabhā superseded all previous commentaries on Gangeśa's work and laid, so to speak, the solid foundation upon which the latest phase of Navyanyāya studies upon Gangeśa flourished and quickly attained almost inconceivable heights in subtlety. Some of the views of Upādhyāya are now permanently embodied in the current texts. The Prabhā created quite a sensation in the learned world . We have cited above the commencement of the second part of the Prabhā on the initial point of relevancy ('sangati') Yajñapati's pupil Jayadeva boldly characterised his reading of the text as spurious (केचित्तु पूर्वापर इहापि परम्परया कार्यकारणभाव सङ्गतित्वमि- सन्धिना प्रत्यक्षोपजीवकत्वादिति पाठ कल्पयन्ति । Anumānāloka, fol. 1). Unlike Jayadeva, Pragalbhācārya exactly quoted the words of Yajñapati and improved upon it by adding two arguments (see Anumāna Pragalbhi). Śiromani also accepted the reading of Yajñapati and wrote his brilliant thesis on 'sangati', where Upādhyāya's views were not ignored. The antagonism of Jaya-deva towards Yajñapati had far-reaching effects as we have stated elsewhere on the cultural history of Mithilā.

Hundreds of passages are now available where Yajñapati has been criticised by various scholars besides Jayadeva. We shall refer to two great names whose works are still unpublished. Pragalbha (whose Mangalavāda has been published in the S. B. Texts under the wrong idea that he belonged to Mithilā) cited Yajñapati's views at every step and criticised them. We believe Pragalbha referred to his name only twice in the second part, the first time, it should be noted, respectfully in the plural number (इति यज्ञपतयः । तत्र प्रगल्भाश्चिन्तयन्ति Anumāna-Pragalbhī, fol. 22b under the section Kevalānvayī also 63a under the same section) and his criticisms have always been sober and dignified. Not so, however, Sārvabhauma who was slightly junior to Pragalbha. In the only existing fragment of Sārvabhauma's Anumānamaniparīkṣā we counted as many as 52 references to Yajñapati by name (from fol. 29a), by far the largest number to a single author and some of Sārvabhauma's criticisms have been violent. For instance, इति यज्ञपतेस्तच्छिक्षितानां च प्रलपितम् (fol. 42b under Viśeṣavyāpti), तत्को यज्ञपतेरन्यः प्राज्ञमन्यो भाषेत (49a under the same section) अत्र यज्ञपतिस्तत्प्रसारितश्च (66a under Tarka & 84a under Upādhi), इति यज्ञपतिपान्थपर्वदितः पन्थाः (150a under Kevalānvayī). Who were the scholars "deceived by Yajñapati" cannot be spotted now in Mithilā or Bengal. When Sārvabhauma wrote, somewhere between 1460-80 A.D., Yajñapati and his unknown pupils formed a powerful group in Mithilā, as indicated by Sārvabhauma.

We shall refer here to an interesting passage, upon which a somewhat heated wrangling continued for sometime both in Mithilā and Bengal. In the section on Kevalavyatirekī Gaṅgeśa scrutinised a passage of Udayana (B. I. ed. pp. 599-601), for both Pragalbha उदयनाचार्यभिमतं पञ्चमाशङ्कते—अथेति (fol. 67b) and Sārvabhauma आचार्यमतमाशङ्कते—अथेति fol. 161a) clearly indicated the source here. Gaṅgeśa is extremely sober and dignified in almost all his criticisms, but surprisingly enough he closed his criticism here with the phrase इति शिष्यधन्धनम् (p. 601. the word धन्धनम् 'causing confusion', though not Sanskrit, is locally used in Mithilā and Bengal). Gaṅgeśa's stricture against Udayana was rightly answered by Yajñapati (as found in the Manusāra Trivandrum ed., p. 98) with a closing retort शिष्यधन्धनत्वाभिधानं शिष्यधन्धनम् Jayadeva as usual with him, attacked Yajñapati closing with the phrase शिष्यधन्धनत्वाभिधाने शिष्यधन्धनत्वाभिधानं स्वस्यैव शिष्यधन्धनम्! ib. p. 98). Upon this Gopinātha correctly observes तत्र शिष्यधन्धनत्वारोप एव महतामनुचित इति। A rare case of a confusion many times confounded! It should be noted that Gopinātha cited a 'Gauda' view also on the topic (p. 99) which, however, cannot be traced in Sārvabhauma or Pragalbha and Śiromani did not touch the topic at all.

Yajñapati's age and family. We have stated under Vācaspati Miśra II that Yajñapati cited and refuted an exposition of the latter. His date of composition of the Prabhā cannot, therefore, be placed before 1450 A. D. Nor can it be placed after 1460 A. D. when his pupil Jayadeva along with the Bengali scholars Pragalbha and Sārvabhauma became probably acquainted with his views. This is confirmed in our opinion by his family history, so elaborately treated in the Pañjis of Mithilā. We shall refer to some of his numerous alliances.

(1) He belonged to the celebrated Māndara family of Kāśyapa gotra. He was closely and doubly related to Śankara Miśra as shown in the chart below.

This makes Yajñapati only slightly junior to Śankara, both belonging to the same generation. Viśvanātha's daughter was the second wife of Paśupati and Śivapati her second son. Paśupati's sister's husband Ravinātha again was the first son of the second wife of Viśvanātha. If Śankara Mīśra was born in the first decade (1400-10 A. D.) of the century Yajñapati was born, say, in the second decade (1410-20 A. D.)

(2) Yajñapati was also related to his distinguished pupil and critic Jayadeva (Paksadhara), though not quite so closely, as shown in the chart below.

Yajñapati is thus one generation senior to Jayadeva, but as Jayadeva belongs to the senior most branch of the family, Rāmanātha being the first son of the first wife of Viśvanātha, his difference in age with Yajñapati cannot be more than a decade or two. Jayadeva's birth date would be about 1435 A. D. according to our surmise. In other words Yajñapati was about 20 years senior to him. This date of Yajñapati is not in conflict with that of this great grandfather Vateśvara, who preceded him by one full century and was born, according to our surmise, in the first decade (1300-10 A.D.) of the 14th century. It should be noted that between Vateśvara and Yajñapati all except Śivapati were eldest sons and it would be reasonable to take 35 years to a generation as the average in this case.

Yajñapati was a Mahāmahopādhyāya, which in Mithilā generally meant ■ master of all sciences. Apparently Yajñapati was regarded in his times as an authority on the Dharmaśāstra also. For, his son Narahari in his critical work on Smṛti named Dvaitamrta quoted a passage of his father (p 7 दद इत्येव प्रयोक्तव्यमिति पितृचरणा) on the topic of Daksinā-dāna) It is probably a verbal verdict and does not refer to any Smṛti work of Yajñapati.

VATEŚVAROPADHYĀYA a doyen of his times in the cultural aristocracy of Mithilā though his name is now almost forgotten. He was universally known as the Darpanakāra both in Nyāya and Smṛti. In the Pratyaksaloka Jayadeva answers an adverse argument of the Darpana to a passage of Gangeśa in the Siddhānta portion of Mangalavāda (B L. ed., pp. 89-90. Gangeśa handled the intricate नागृहीतविशेषणान्याय in his argument here) The particular passage of the Āloka runs इह विप्रो मे माभूदित्यत्रेदमशक्यमपि विशेषणत्वात् न्यायसाम्यमिति । दर्पणस्य दूषणमनुचितमयमेव इदन्त्वस्य प्रतियोगिनि विप्रे विशेषणत्वात् न तु तन्भावे । (From an old Ms in our possession, vide p 157 of Tattvacintāmaṇi with comm., S B Texts, 1939, wrongly printed in the Pūrvapakṣa portion) The name of this Darpanakāra was quite unknown till we discovered the passage fully cited by Narahari Upādhyāya in the Pratyaksadūṣanoddhāra (fol 19a of a unique Ms preserved in I O London) तदापि नागृहीतेति । अत्र वृद्धप्रपितामह-वद्वेषरोपाध्यायचरणा —यत्र कल्पनीय-कल्पनोपपत्तिः न्यायसाम्यमवर्जनीयमेवेति दृष्टम् । The of Vateśvara's argument (not cited in the Āloka) was restated by Vateśvara's great grandson Yajñapati, who was cited and criticised by many scholars (vide the Pragalbhī printed in the S B Texts, pp 162, 164, Madhusūdana's Kantakod-dhāra, ib. p 158) We need only cite an unpublished note of Mādhava Miśra in the Pratyaksāloka-dīpikā on the point वटेशाना मतमुपन्यस्यति—इह विप्र इति । अत्रायमाशय—यत्र कल्पनीय कामनाया अविषयत्याश्च । (fol 44b of a unique Ms preserved in the Darbhanga Raj Library) It can now be stated confidently that the healthy conflict between Yajñapati and his pupil Jayadeva (so aptly described by Gokulanātha once as a 'family quarrel' इति मिथ्यायामुपाध्याये सह स्वगीतकलहोऽवशिष्यते fol 88b of A. S Ms. of Siddhāntatattvavivēka) which marked the most glorious period of the literary history of Mithilā really started about a century earlier with Vateśvara as a bold opponent of Gangeśa. This rivalry subsisted for about two centuries mainly through the descendants and relatives of Vateśvara and exercised a profound influence upon the cultural history of Mithilā as we shall presently see

Vateśvara must have written several works both on Smṛti and Nyāya with the appellative 'Darpana' But he was more famous as a Nyāya scholar One of his sons Paksadharopādhyāya wrote at the beginning of his Smṛti work named Tattvanirnaya —

न्यायार्थवपरिश्रान्तसुरितारणसेतवे ।

गुरुवे श्रीवटेशाय ससर्कमृतये नम ॥

श्रीमत्पक्षधरैरेष प्रणम्य पितरं गुरुम् ।

वटेश्वर विमूढानां त्रियते तत्त्वनिर्णय ॥

(Ms preserved at Mithilā Institute : compare L 1845) In the fragment examined by us (foll 40 only) Paksadhara has quoted his father's views on Smṛti topics (fol 5b, 28a & 35b), of these the second passage (28a) is long and extremely important, as Vateśvara has cited therein with approval an opinion of Divākara Miśra's Śuddhubimba which is quite a new discovery in the Smṛti literature of Mithilā Vateśvara has also been cited twice by his descendant Narahari in the Dvaitanirṇaya (Darbhanga ed pp 10 & 32) The first passage (बृद्धश्रुतिमह-वदेशरोपाध्यायव्याख्यानमव्यमुमेवार्थं सबदति । तथाहि इति दर्पणे तल्लिखितम् p 10) where Vatesvara quotes approvingly from a work named Śraddhapallava proves that his Smṛti work was named (Smṛti) Darpana

Among his Nyāya works all of which seem to be now lost we have so far discovered the following names.

(1) Nyāyambandhadarpana Sankara Misra at the commencement of his Trisutrimbandhavyakhya (H P Sastri, Notices II No 136) wrote —

प्रकारादर्पणोद्घोतकृद्विर्याद्या कुतोऽज्जला ।

तथापि योजनामात्रमुद्दिश्याय समोद्यम ॥

Of the three illuminating scholia on Udayana's Nibandha which Sankara had before him the Uddyota (by Divākara) is the earliest and possible the three names have been mentioned in the ascending order of chronology In that case the author of the Darpana must have slightly preceded Vardhamāna, whose Prakasa is mentioned first of all This Darpanakāra is undoubtedly Vatesvara (and not Maheśa Thakkura as surmised by M Chakravarti J A S B, 1915, p 259 vide S B Studies III pp 148-49) Only one Darpanakāra was known in Mithilā in the 15th century A ■ whose identity was beyond any question

(2) Nyāyalīlavatidarpana A reference to this long lost book is found in the following passage of Paksadhara's Dravya-trivēka अतएव लीलावतीप्रकाशदर्पणयो —“भावत्वे सति सयोगान्यप्रत्यासत्त्या-पेयत्वम्” इत्येव पाठ (London, I O copy, fol 35a vide Līlavatī Chowkh ed p 798) Five more references have been traced in Paksadhara's Līlavatitrivēka, these are —

यद्यपीति । अयं प्रतीकं पुरुषोत्तमाय नमः इत्यनन्तरं कर्तुमुचितः दर्पणेपि तथै-
वास्तीति (London I O. copy, fol. 1a, very beginning), संज्ञाशब्दत्वे
नात्र व्युत्पत्तिरिति दर्पणः (fol. 2a) न च भावपददानं कल्पितं दर्पणे
भावपदप्रक्षेपात् (fol. 6a vide Līlāvati, p. 18), अत्र मीमांसकानामिति
(ib., p. 21) अर्थापत्तिरूपप्रमाणप्रदर्शनार्थमुक्तम् इति दर्पणः (7b), अत्र
विशुद्धसन्ततिजत्वमिति मूले (p. 101) अत्र यद्यपि सर्गादाविदमव्यापकं तदा
सन्ततेरभावात्तथापि ब्राह्मण्यव्यवस्थापकासाधारणाध्यापनादिकमनेनोपलक्षितमिति दर्पणः (fol. 28b). The name of the author is not mentioned in any of these references but, as we have stated before, there was only one Darpanakāra known in Mithilā in the middle of the 15th century and he was undoubtedly Vaṭeśvara Upādhyāya

There is an anonymous work named Upādhidarpana preserved at Poona (B. O R. I. Ms. No 6 of 1898 99, foll. 9).
It begins —

श्रीरामचन्द्रं शिरसा प्रणम्य गुरुं च यज्ञेश्वरमस्मदीयम् ।

उपाधिसामान्यविशेषलक्ष्यविनिर्णयोऽयं क्रियते गमीर ॥

The references are to Udayana (fol 2b, 5a), Varadarāja (2a), Vādīndra 6b वादीन्द्रास्तूपाधिदूषणमेव न भवतीति भणन्ति), Śivāditya Miśra (3a तर्हि साध्यसाधनसंबन्धव्यापकत्वे सति साधनाव्यापकत्वमिति शिवादित्यमिन्नीकमेवोपाधिलक्षणं भवतु) and Śrīdharācārya (3a). They prove that the author was fairly old and probably preceded Gaṅgeśa, as we are unable to trace any Gaṅgeśa-brand passage in the book. Moreover, Vaṭeśvara is not likely to suppress his name if he were the author of the book, as the title would tempt one to surmise.

Vaṭeśvara's passage, where he had criticised Gaṅgeśa was probably taken from the Nibandhadarpana. The following passage, which we traced in Sārvabhauma's Maṇiparikṣā, is likely to be from the same source.

उच्यते । अवच्छेदकत्वमनेन रूपेण इदमिति प्रतीतिनियामक. स्वरूपसंबन्धः
प्रतियोगित्ववत् । तदुक्तं दर्पणे—अवच्छेदकत्वं विशेषणताविशेष स चातिरिक्तः स्वरूपस्येत्यन्यदेतदिति (fol. 50a under the section on Viśeṣavyāpti,

B I, ed., pp. 156-57) It should be noticed that Sārvabhauma cited the extract in support of his own contention. It appears that the intricate analysis of the term 'avacchedakatā', which subsequently culminated in the works of Śiromaṇi and his followers, was first taken up by Vateśvara

• Vateśvara's Age and Family Vateśvara must have been a leader of the Maithilā community in his times. In the following verse of the Harīharasubhāṣita Vateśa has been held as an ideal Śrotriya, he adorned his scholarship by successful teaching and his riches by charities

विद्यामभ्यापनैर्दानैर्वित्तं नित्यमलङ्कृतम् ।

पुरा कीर्तिर्वटेशादीनां विवेशामुना ध्वजा ॥ (XII. 25)

He was a distinguished member of the Māndara family, which has for its first ancestor, as recorded in the Pañjis, one Narasimha with a very peculiar title तर्काचार्यास्त्रमहास्त्रविद्यापारंग-महामहोपाध्याय proving that at that time (in the 12th century A.D.) some of the scholars at least had a kind of military training. Vateśa was 7th in descent from this Narasimha. But in an old Palm leaf copy of a Śākhāpañjī, preserved in the Darbhanga Raj Library the genealogy of the Māndara family starts from one Trinayana Bhatta, about 15 generations before Narasimha (the leaf unfortunately is torn with many names lost) the antiquity of the family, one of the oldest in the whole of India, going back to about 600 A.D. Vateśa was the third son of his father M M Jagannātha and his maternal grandfather was one महत्तर्कविद्याधर belonging to a family named गङ्गनिरुत्ती. Vateśvara himself had a numerous family and was closely connected with many distinguished families of Mithilā. His date can be fairly fixed from reliable clues furnished by his family alliances, some of which we have examined elsewhere. His father was a contemporary of Gangeśa. This is confirmed by the following fact Vateśvara was a close relative and contemporary of M. M. Viśvanātha of the Sodarapurīa family, two of whose daughters were given in marriage to the eldest (Paśupati) and third son (Āṅgaṇi) of Vaṭeśvara by his first wife, while a daughter of Vaṭeśvara was married to the third son (Ravinātha) of Viśvanātha. Now Viśvanātha's second wife (i.e. the mother of Ravinātha) was a daughter of Prītiśarmā of the Naronaye family, who again was an exact, if not a bit younger, contemporary of Bhavaśarma and consequently of Gaṅgeśa also. For, Prītiśarma's mother's mother was the younger sister of Bhavaśarma's mother's mother Paśupati as we have stated under Yajñapati, was the latter's grandfather.

Vaṭeśvara's second son Raghupati had a son named Prajñapati who married Kamalā the daughter of Maharaja Śivasinha's own sister. According to the latest evidence Śivasinha was defeated by Ibrahim of Jaunpur in 1415-16 A.D. (Bengal, Past and Present, LXVII, 1948, p. 36 fn) and not earlier. Śivasinha's sister's daughter was born say, in 1385 A.D. at the earliest and her husband's grandfather Vaṭeśvara was born not earlier than 1300 A.D.

Vaṭeśvara's youngest son Surapati was the father of Viṣṇupurī's mother's mother. This also places the birth of Vaṭeśvara not earlier than 1300 A.D.¹

Vaṭeśvara's fifth son (i.e. first son of his second wife) was Pakṣadhara, whose eldest son Mahipati was the father of M. M. Rucidatta's sister's husband Amarapati. Even if we

1. Prof R. Jha calculated Viṣṇupurī's date from that of Śivasinha (Patna University Journal, offprint, pp. 9-11). Taking 1416 A.D. as the date of Śivasinha's death, the birth of Surapati's daughter's daughter Maura should be 1400 A.D. and Vaṭeśvara's birth cannot be placed before 1300 A.D., even if we assume an interval of 120 years between the birth-dates of Vaṭeśvara and his granddaughter (i.e. Surapati's daughter) Bhavani, the mother of the above-mentioned Maura.

suppose that Amarapati was born in 1425 A.D. at the earliest, Vaṭeśvara's birth cannot take place before 1305 A.D. We conclude, therefore, that Vaṭeśvara was born in the first decade of the 14th century.

CHAPTER V

THE AGE OF FOUR M's

MĀDHAVA MIŚRA Son of the famous Jayadeva Miśra alias Paksadhara (q. v). He was also a M M. and probably wrote a work, where he defended his father against the arguments of Yajñapati's son Narahari and others of that group

MĀDHAVA MIŚRA Son of Gadādhara wrote a Bheda-dīpikā in refutation of Vedantic monism Pandit Ramanatha Tarkaratna of the Asiatic Society visited Tirhut in search of Sanskrit manuscripts. He came across a copy of this extremely rare book sometime in 1878-79 A D (L 1879 foll 60) and gave a good summary of it from which it appears that the author was well-read in the Vedānta. The Bhamati, the Khandana and the Citsukhī are among the works examined and refuted by him. Two verses are reproduced here from the Report

य श्रीमती श्रीरपरा गदाधरा
 दसूत शास्त्रान्बुधिपारदृश्वन ।
 श्रीमाधवो न्यायमहान्वीतदे
 प्रवेश्य सिद्धान्तपथे स खेलति ॥
 माधवेन हरिमक्तिभञ्जिता- शेषकिस्त्वपमरेण तन्यते ।
 भेदवर्त्मनि निवेन्द्रीपिका
 मायिमोहतिमिरापनुत्तये ॥

Fortunately the name of the author has been traced in the Pañ-jis. He belongs to a senior branch of the famous Sodarapura family, a common ancestor of which named Ratneśvara had three sons, M M. Haleśvara being the eldest one. Mādhava's descent from him is as follows Haleśvara—Rāju—Yogīśvara—

Varāha—Rati—Hore—Gadādhara—M. M. Mādhava. He was thus three generations later than Śaṅkara Miśra of the same family, who was fifth in descent from the second son of Ratneśvara. This Mādhava Miśra lived, therefore, in the middle of the 16th century A. D., about a century after Śaṅkara Miśra. Mādhava Miśra, son of Jayadeva, was a generation earlier.

BHAGIRATHA THAKKURA An elder brother to Mahārājadhurāja Maheśa Thakkura was a celebrated logician of Mithilā. He completed his studies under Jayadeva at the age of twenty years. He commented upon the Dravyaprakāśa, the Guṇaprakāśa, the Kusumāṅjali and the Līlāvati. His works are either called Prakāśikā or Jalada or Megha after his nickname 'Megha'. It is presumed that Vardhamāna's Prakāśas on the Nibandha, the Nyāyapañiṣṭa and the Ātmatattvaviveka were not so much in use during Bhagiratha's time. He read the Prakāśa on the last named work (cf. Līlāvatimegha, Baranasi ed. p. 9) but commented on the Ātmatattvaviveka (published in the Bibl. Ind. series) itself.

Bhagiratha and Raghunātha Śiromaṇi were contemporaries and lived in about 1500 A. D. but did not see the works of each other. His Līlāvati, Jalada, Kusumāṅjali and Guṇajalada are mentioned in a list of books prepared in 430 L. S. (p. 129). Again the Dravyamegha and the Guṇamegha have similarly been mentioned in another list of 409 L. S. The lowest limit of his scholastic activities may thus be fixed in 1905 A. D.

MAHEŚA THAKKURA One of the best scholasts on the Āloka of Jayadeva. The Darpana, as his sub-commentary is named, seems to have extended to the first two parts of the book as no copy of the Śabdālokadarpana has yet been discovered. The first section (Mangalavāda) of the Pratyakṣa part has been published along with the Āloka and two other commentaries in the Sarasvatī-Bhavana Texts. A new edition of the Āloka and the Darpaṇa is being published from the Mithilā Institute. Maheśa read Nyāya with M. M. Śucikara Paṇḍita of the Kujauli family; this fact is stated in the introduction to a drama named Ānandavijaya by Śucikara's great-grandson M. M. Rāmadāsa Upādhyāya :—

तव पङ्क्तयः अकुरुन्

करोत्तमो शुद्ध परिहृतो ।

तीर्थ सिक्ख महेश लक्ष्म-

नरेस आणइ मण्डितो ॥

[तर्कपङ्क्त्यार्क्यरूप-करोत्तरः शुचिपरिहृतः ।

तदीयशिष्यो महेशो लक्ष्मनरेसानतिमण्डितः ॥]

This Nāṭikā was written for Sundara Ṭhākura, a grandson of Maheśa, and, therefore, it is stated afterwards in the Prastāvanā :—तर्हि गुरुकुलतया पूजनोद्योऽयं कविः सुन्दरनरेशस्य । It is not known if this Śucikara had written any book, but in a book-list dated 409 L. S. we found the name of a work 'Līlāvati-Śuci', which may be a work of this Śucikara, a commentary on the Nyāya-līlāvati.¹ There is evidence that Maheśa, probably after finishing his Nyāya studies, went to Vārāṇasi, where he read (Vedānta and Mīmāṃsā) with Rāmeśvara Bhaṭṭa. Rāmeśvara's grandson Śaṅkara Bhaṭṭa wrote his family history in a Mahākāvya : named Gādhivaṃśānuvarṇanam (fragment now preserved in the Sarasvati Bhavana). In the sixth sarga of the poem we find —

1 This Śucikara belonged to the Bhakkharauli branch of the Kujauli family of Kātyāyana gotra. There was another Śucikara belonging to the Govindavana branch of the same family and his grandson Śaṅkara, author of the Smṛtisūdhākara (composed in 1677 A.D.) stated that his grandfather was a renowned Naiyāyika.

As a result of his studies at Varanasi he formed a bias towards the Vedānta which was reflected in the following remarkable passage in the Anumana portion of the Darpana — तदेतत् सहेषेण वेदान्तिमतं लिखितं न दूषितं श्रुतिपुराणस्मृत्यविशिष्टानुशिष्टत्वात् । (cited by M M Dr Kaviraja in S B S III p 142) Mahesa's fame as a logician spread far and wide as proved by the interesting epithet (the great dialectician of Tirabhukta?) used by Sankara Bhatta who was himself a leading scholar of Varanasi. Moreover Annam Bhatta the famous polymath of South India wrote his commentary on the Aloka named Siddhāntya after consulting previous glosses (on the Aloka) notably by the four great M's of Mithilā—Megha Mahesa Madhusūdana and Madhava (R 1536). He has actually cited and refuted Mahesa's views (R 1537). This fame of Mahesa rested on his single work in logic viz the Darpana and it is not known that he had written any other book in Nyaya. A thorough examination of the book is necessary for ascertaining Mahesa's position among contemporary scholars.

The date of composition of the Darpana can be fairly fixed from the following evidence

(1) Sankara Bhatta has left clear chronological date in his family history. Narayana Bhatta the eldest son of Ramesvara was born in Vaisakha 1435 Saka (early in 1513 A D) (V 6). The family removed from Vidyānagara to Dvaraka in the 4th year of Narayana whose Upanayana was performed there (V 16). Ramesvara settled at Kasi sometime after say in 1522 A. (VI 1). His first disciple at Kasi was a Konkani (VI 2) then two ascetics Damodara and Madhava Sarasvatī (VI 3). Mahesa's name is found in VI 5 and in the very next verse it is stated that a Gurjara pupil read the Mahābhāṣya along with Śrīdhara the second son of Ramesvara who was born on his way to Kasi (not earlier than 1521 A D). It is therefore probable that Mahesa read with him sometime bet ween 1530-35 A. D. and the Darpaṇa was written within 1535-40 A. D. very early in his literary career.

(2) According to genealogical works authentically preserved in Mithilā Maheśa was the youngest child of his parents —youngest of four brothers and six sisters. All his brothers were great prodigies viz. Mahādeva, (q. v) and Dāmodara, who composed their works within the first quarter of the century. At the end of his very first work the Dravyaprakāśikā Bhagīratha has mentioned the name of Maheśa, who was born, therefore, just within 1500-10 A. D. and wrote the Darpaṇa when his age was about 30 only.

(3) This agrees with the tradition that he went to the court of Rāṇī Durgāvatī of Garh Mandla, probably after the death of his immediate elder Dāmodara, who was patronised by Saṅgrāma Sāha (d. 1530 A. D.).

(4) The acquisition of the Darbhaṅga Raj by Maheśa is is dated in 1478 ('randhra-turaṅgama-śruti mahi') Śaka : e. 1556-57 A. D. , when his age was about 50 according to our calculation.

(5) In his old age he abdicated the throne and most of his works on Smṛti were composed after abdication. For, in his Tīthitattvacintāmaṇi he has referred to Raghunandana and Gopāla of Bengal (Ms. No 66 of the Mithilā Institute, fol. 9a - गौडरघुनन्दनगोपालप्रवृत्तस्तु). Raghunandana wrote the Jyotisatattva (No 20 in the list of his works) after 1489 Śaka (1567 A. D.) Maheśa, therefore, must have written this treatise in the last quarter of the century. But the mention of Gopāla is a great puzzle, for both the smṛti writers of that name, the Kaumudī-kāra Siddhāntavāgīśa and the Nirṇaya-kāra Nyāyapañcānana were junior to Raghunandana and were living still in the first two decades of the 17th century. Probably the reference was to an earlier Gopāla. At any rate Maheśa becomes a contemporary at least of Raghunandana and his date of birth can never be placed before 1500 A. D

It should be mentioned here that the late Dr H. P. Sastri discovered a letter written by Maheśa to one 'Tārkakā-cūdamanī', whom he took to be identical with the famous Raghunātha Śiromanī. This letter was exhibited by him in the Asiatic Society in April 1907 (Proc. A. S. B. p. lxxv) and was discovered in a book named Vaiśvasvatasiddhānta written in 1529 A. D. (Ind. Ant. 1912 p. 9). The letter has been published in vol. X of the Des. Cat. of the Society (p. 235). Dr. Sastri's conjecture about the identity of the person (Maheśa Śarman) who wrote the letter is entirely wrong. The letter was written in the Bengali script, and though not dated is somewhat later than the manuscript of the work (named Jyotiśśārasāgara composed in 1450 Saka, Vaiśvasvatasiddhāntasāra being only a part). The author of the work (Gaurinātha of the Mukherji family) and all the persons referred to in the letter including Maheśa undoubtedly belonged to Bengal. Maheśa Thakkura of Mithilā could never be supposed to have identified himself so immediately with the family of a Bengali scholar. There is absolutely no evidence that he was a pupil of Śiromanī or Cūdamanī of Bengal. The very idea of a Maithilī pupil taking lessons from a Bengali scholar was quite unthinkable at that period.

MADHUSUDANA THAKKURA might be regarded as the greatest Nyāya scholar of Mithilā in the first half of the 16th century A. D. The first section (Mangalavāda) of his masterpiece the Kantakoddhāra has been published (Tattvacintāmaṇi with Comm., S. II Texts, 1939). In the third introductory verse he has boldly stated that his able arguments have removed all thorns in the Āloka and the Mani and in the fourth verse he proudly advertised his scholarship in eight different branches of literature (Nyāya, Vaiśeṣika, Mīmāṃsā, Vedānta, Mahābhāṣya, Kāvya, Dharmaśāstra and Mantraśāstra). That it is not a mere idle boast will be apparent even from a study of the small printed portion of his work. His masterly elaboration of Mīmāṃsā doctrines (pp. 60-64, 94-103, 141-45) and his quotations from Śrī-datta (p 40), Njāyamahārṇava (p. 41), Mahābhāṣya (p. 42), Dravyaprakāśa (p. 60), Vāteśvara (p. 37, 67, 175), Uddyota (p. 67, 119) and his own father (p. 34, 37, 76, 183) as well as his frequent refutations of previous glosses of unnamed scholars are some of the exceptional features of his performance. Unfortunately the printed portion forms only a hundredth part of his whole work. We add, therefore, brief notes on the unpublished parts.

The first part of the Kaṇṭhakoddhāra ends with the colophon : इति महामहोपाध्याय-सदृशश्रीमधुसूदनकृतकण्टकोद्धारे प्रत्यक्षरखण्डः परिपूर्णः (fol 120a of A. S. Ms. No. G. 1439, dated 491 L. S., copied at Vikramapura in Mithilā). The copy extends from the Prāmāṇyavāda to the end. We traced three references to Pragalbha (4a, 12b & 16a) and an interesting one to an unknown scholar (20b : कल्पकम्मन्यास्तु...तदचातुर्यम्). We quote one remarkable passage (fol. 58b) :—अनुगतं वैशिष्ट्यमिति मूलम् (p. 653 under Samavāyavāda).

वैशिष्ट्ये यदि वैशिष्ट्यं तदा स्यादनवस्थितिः ।

अथ सत्र न वैशिष्ट्यं तदा स्यादनवस्थितिः ॥ .

वैशिष्ट्ये तदभावेऽपि वैशिष्ट्येनैव निर्वहेत् । .

तदन्तरेण नाभावे वैशिष्ट्यं हि त्वयेष्यते ॥

तथा च कथमेतदिति चेत्—मैवम् । There are two fragments of this part at Tanjore (Foll. 27 and 131 : vide Tanjore Cat., pp. 453-437). The colophon cited (p. 4537) from the larger fragment (fol. 126, at the end of the section on Sannikarṣa) is extremely important. According to it Madhusūdāna wrote this commentary under the patronage of one 'Mahārājādhirāja' Rāmarāja described, among others, as 'Karnāṭaka Cakravartī'. The identification of this monarch is a great puzzle, there was no paramount king of that name in South India in the 16th century A. D. as far as we are aware. We shall discuss the point later on. In a Darbhanga copy of this part (No p. 321, foll 94) the author refers to his own invincibility thus (verse 2)

वादीन्द्रमानमातङ्गसूदने मधुसूदने ।

वादिन्यादीयतामैव मुघा पञ्चान्तरं बुधा ॥

There are two copies of the second (Anumāna) part in the Asiatic Society (Nos G. 1444, foll 174 and G. 1572, foll 142) both incomplete towards the end. It begins with the third verse of the first part. Madhusūdana is commonly believed in Mithilā to have successfully controverted the views of Śiromanī of Bengal. This tradition is partially correct. There are eight passages in this part where Madhusūdana has cited and refuted 'Gauda' views (No 1572, fol 21a, 23a, 28b, 31a, 71b 81a, 91b & 103b). Of these the second quotation is the well known definition of the term Vyāpti technically known as कूटपदित originally formulated by Sārvabhauma (Anumānamāṅgi-parīkṣā, fol. 14) and included among the famous 'fourteen definitions' of Śiromanī. Here Madhusūdana also cited and refuted a passage of Pragalbha (fol. 23a). The next passage runs —
 तथा च साध्यवद्वृत्तिसकलपदार्थमाववत्त्व यदधिकरणताया अन्यूनवृत्ति सत्त्वं फलितमिति गौडव्याख्यानमप्यपास्त वेदितव्यम् (fol 28b). The passage exactly occurs in Śiromanī at the very beginning of the Pūrvapakṣa section of Vyāptivāda. It is an original explanation of Śiromanī and not borrowed from Sārvabhauma or Pragalbha. As far as we are aware Madhusūdana was the first among Maithilī scholars to quote from Śiromanī. The long passage quoted in the section on Tarka (fol. 71b) is also taken from Śiromanī, who under the heading वेचित् put in a nutshell various comments on the point found in Sārvabhauma (fol 63-65)

The remaining five passages cannot be traced in Śīromaṇi, Sārvabhauma or Pragalbha and were evidently cited from other Gauḍa scholars, whose names and works were lost during Śīro-maṇi's great mastery The ending verses and colophon of this part is cited below from a Palm-leaf copy preserved in the Darbhanga Raj Library.

मध्ययनशालिना श्रीभवदेवशर्मणा भौरामाभेऽपूरीदमिति ॥ The scribe happens to be a grandson of the famous Bhagiratha Ṭhakkura, the elder brother of Maheśa Ṭhakkura. The author's extra-ordinary confidence about his own ability is reflected in the last verse.
It should be carefully noted that this valuable copy gives the author's patron the important epithet 'Kārnāṭa-Cakravartī' found in the Tanjore copy and it is a clue to the identity of the unknown monarch, who evidently belonged to the famous 'Kārnāṭa' family of Nānyadeva and not to the Kārṇāṭa country.
It is our conjecture that after the overthrow of the last
'Oṁwara' monarch Lakṣmīnātha Kaṣṇanārāyaṇa about 1526
A. D. and before Maheśa Ṭhakkura acquired the kingdom of Mithilā in 1556 A. D. there was confusion in Mithilā for about 30 years when many distinguished scholars left Mithilā to seek foreign patronage. For sometime at least a scion of the long lost Kārṇata' family might have taken the reins of Government in Mithila and under this monarch named Rāmarāja Madhusūdana wrote his monumental work somewhere within 1525-40 A. D. If it were written in a 'foreign' land Madhusūdana would not have failed to refer to his Maithilā origin in the colophon

The last part (Śabda) is preserved at Darbhanga Raj Library in three different fragments constituting the whole. The first portion (Ms No P 110, foll 148, up to Vidhivāda) begins as usual with the verse मधुसूदनसयुक्ति—&c. The next portion (No P 981 foll 81) is on Apūrvavāda and the last portion (No 97, foll 72) goes to the very end closing with the verse मधुसूदनेन यन्नात् &c with the usual colophon, without however the mention of the patron's name as found at the end of the first two parts. Perhaps the reign of Rāmarāja had ended by that time,* though the non-mention of the patron's name should be confirmed from other copies. The Varanasi copy (S B. Studies, III, pp 155-6) also seems to omit the patron's name

Madhusūdana composed a commentary named 'Jīmoddhāra' on the Smṛti work Samayapradīpa of Śrīdatta (Ms No P 326 foll 43, dated 1652 Śaka) and another on Vācaspati's Daitanirṇaya (vide L. 1853 foll, 121, named 'Jīmoddhāra'). We examined the A S copy (No G. 1589 foll 107, called -Prakāśa) of the latter. It was written after Śabdakantakodhāra (mentioned in fol 31a) and after the Samayapradīpa-jīmoddhāra (fol 86a). He refers once to his own Śāradātīkā (fol 15a). Partly due to maturity of age and partly also to the nature of the subject Madhusūdana's style is distinctly more sober here. He does not, moreover, refer to his royal patron, whose connection with the great scholar must have been short lived. We quote an interesting passage where the viewpoints of the Nyāya and the Smṛti are contrasted न हि तर्कशास्त्र इव धर्मशास्त्रेऽपि पामरादिपुरुषशक्तिनिरूपणाय न्यायारम्भोऽपि तु धर्माधमनिर्णयायैवेति (fol. 38a).

Madhusūdana's age and family : Madhusūdana belonged to one of the premier Śrotriya families of Mithilā named Ghusota' of the Vatsa-gotra . He was the seventh son of his parents and his father was Govinda Thakkura, the celebrated author of the Kāvya-pradīpa and Pujya-pradīpa . Madhusūdana has quoted many passages of his father in the Kantakoddhara as well as the Jīrnoddhāra (fol. 106a), proving that his father was also a scholar of the Nyaya and the Smṛti in both of which he must have given lessons to his pupils though it is doubtful if he had actually written any works on the two subjects. Madhusūdana's date is quite beyond any dispute now. It can be fixed from the following evidences . In the first place his elder brother Devanātha the fifth son of Govinda wrote one work in 400 L. S. and his last work in 1486 Saka (1564 A. D.) at a very old age . Taking Madhusūdana to be about 6 years younger to Devanātha his date of birth would be about 1500 A. D. So that he was an exact peer in age of Maheśa Thakkura. As a matter of fact the Darpana and the Kantakoddhara do not refer to each other, as far as can be ascertained . In the first flush of youthful zeal Madhusūdana must have wielded his powerful pen somewhere between 1525-35 A. D. to combat the opponents of the Āloka both of Mithilā and Bengal. In a book-list dated 430 L. S. (i.e. within 1540-50 A. D.) the mention of the Pratyakṣa Kantakoddhāra (see p. 129 above) proves that the book already circulated in Bengal in 1540 A. D. This is confirmed by the following fact Madhusūdana's mother was a daughter of Mahopādhyaya Vacaspati of the Māndara family, a first cousin of the famous Yajñapati Upādhyāya . In other words she was a sister of Narahari. A copy of the Pūjāpradīpa was transcribed in 432 L. S. at the request of Madhusūdana (preserved at Darbhanga)

Madhusudana's eminence Madhusūdana, more than any other scholar of his age in Mithilā, was recognized as an authority in other lands. Besides the famous Annam Bhatta of South India he has been quoted by name in the Vyākaraṇa-Siddhāntasudhāmdhi of Viśveśvara (Varanasi ed., pp. 58 & 69) and in the Nyāyasiddhāntamālā of Jayarāma (S. B., Text, p. 161). Moreover, it is our conjecture that one of the greatest scholars of Bengal Gunānanda Vidyāvāgīśa was a student of this Madhusūdana. For, in one of his works the Sabdāloka-viveka he referred to his professor thus (Ms. No. 366 of the Sarasvatī-Bhavana)

मधुसूदनसद्व्याख्यासुधाचलितचेतसा ।

गुणानन्देन कृतिना शब्दालोको विविच्यते ॥

This echoes Madhusūdana's opening verse in all the parts of his work. Gunānanda was a contemporary of Bhavānanda and flourished in the last half of the 16th century A. D. His pupilage under a Mithilā scholar, if true, is a fact of supreme importance in Bengal's relation with Mithilā, which continued to attract superior scholars from Bengal even after the great mastery of Śiromaṇi.

M M MĀDHAVA MIŚRA One of the last great Navyanyāya scholars of Mithilā who had written regular and expansive commentaries on the Āloka. He was the last of the four great M's of Mithilā, whose names are respectfully mentioned by the great Annam Bhatta of South India at the beginning of the latter's Ālokatikā named Siddhāntajana (Madras copy R. 1536, verse 5)

मेघी महेशमधुसूदनमाधवादे-

व्याख्या ॥ १०८ ॥

सिद्धाञ्जन मणिविलोकनलालसाना-

मालोकमार्गगमिनामहमातनिष्ये ॥

Annam Bhaṭṭa who consulted all the four great authorities upon the Āloka evidently mentioned their names in the chronological order · Mādhava therefore, came last of all and this is confirmed by internal evidence

As far as we are aware there is only one copy of the first part of Mādhava's commentary now preserved in the Darbhanga Raj Library This unique Ms in palm leaves (Ms No 130, foil 204) is unfortunately incomplete towards the end It goes up to the end of the section on Anyathākhyāti and stops in the next sentence upon the original text of Gangesa (B I ed p 538) Madhava calls himself a satkavi and this is amply borne out by the elegant verses at the beginning of this part which are fully reproduced below examined of this book proves that a vast literature had grown up round the Āloka of Jayadeva and Mādhava has cited passages from many authors, whose works are now lost

There are several passages from a 'Gauda' (fol. 48, 158 etc), of which the first passage is from Śiromaṇi. The Dūṣanoddhara (of Narahara) is cited in the section on Prāmānya (fol 49), we have actually traced it in the Pratyaksadūṣanoddhāra (London I O copy, fol. 20b) Several passages are cited from 'Gurukaraṇa' (i.e his father and teacher Khāntara Miśra fol. 49, 194 etc). But by far the largest number of quotations are from Upādhyāya (i.e Yajñapati) almost on every page from folio 1. We shall specially refer to a passage, which probably refers to the Darpana of Maheśa, who is curiously called by the contemptuous epithet 'unreasonable' निर्युक्तिस्तु नान्ययेत्यादिकारणतामधिकृत्य सद्धारमादयत्त्वविचार. 'अपि तु स्वरूपसयन्धरूपा
कारणतामधिकृत्य "इत्येकमेव मिलितनिषेधात्मकं साध्यमित्याह । तन्न । (fol. 4)
This substantially agrees with Maheśa's views (Ālokadarpana,
S. B. Text, pp 17-18)

There is a complete copy of the Anumāna part of Mādhava's work, cited by himself under the name of Anumāna- lokaprakāśa in the former part (fol 3-4), in the Saraśvatī Mahal Library of Tanjore (Des Cat. pp 4523-24). There is no opening verse It ends (fol. 293)

इति महामहोपाध्याय-श्रीगाधवकृतानुमानालोकदीपिका संपूर्णा । समाप्तोऽयं ग्रन्थः ।

The manuscript is dated 1632 V. S. 'Aṣṭādha-Sudi 6 Some'—this corresponds regularly to June 13, 1575 A.D. Monday. It was transcribed at the instance of Viśvanātha Tīrtha (probably of Varanasi, author of a commentary named Komalā on Śaśdhara's Nyāyasiddhāntadīpa) The colophon proves that Mādhava did not comment on the last part of the Āloka. The most important fact stated in the ending verse is that Mādhava became famous by vanquishing the proud scholars of the court of Gajapati Mukunda, evidently the last great independent monarch of Orissa. Mukunda reigned from about 1552 A.D. to 1568 A.D. when he was defeated by the Sultan of Bengal. Mukundadeva's name is mentioned in the Saccaritamīmāṃsā of Vidyānīvāsa composed in 1480 Śaka (1558 A.D.) (Vide Vaṅge Navyanyāyacarcā, p. 69 & 75). Mādhava, therefore, must have composed this work about 1555 A.D., probably before Maheśa Thakkura (whom he had characterised as 'unreasonable') acquired the kingdom of Mithilā. The date of the transcript (1575 A.D.) also points to the same conclusion. The author's triumph as a debater and a scholiast is further confirmed by Annam Bhaṭṭa, who mentioned his name in his own comentary.

Mādhava's family : Mādhava Miśra's name has been traced in the Pañjīs of Mithilā. He belongs to the famous Sodarapura family, whose celebrity is considerably enhanced by the discovery of his name and that of his father there. His name is found in the 'Kataka' branch of the family and his descent is as follows. Ratneśvara's second son was M. M. Sureśvara, the common ancestor of many distinguished scholars. The branch of Sureśvara's family runs M. M. Sureśvara—M. M. Viśvanātha—Ratinātha—Dālu—Aphela—Divākara—'Prabhākarāparanāmaka—M M Khāntara'—M. M Mādhava—Mahopādhyāya Bhagīratha This Mādhava is, therefore, one generation later than his namesake (the son of Jayadeva) and the author of the Āloka, on which he commented, was his grand-uncle It was for this reason probably that Mādhava expressed his contempt for Maheśa Thakkura, who belonged to a different family This Mādhava like many distinguished scholars of Mithilā was equally famous in Smṛti, in which he wrote a book named Dvyaḍīpikā. A copy of it is preserved in the Darbhanga Raj Library (vide Mithilā Mss, Vol. I, pp 225-26). One of the charming opening verses is cited below

श्रीगोपालगुरोर्गिरो गुरुतरा मुक्ता इवाम्भोनिधे-

KEŚAVA MIŚRA TARKĀCĀRYA author of a commentary on the original Nyāyasūtras named Gautamiya-sūtraprakāśa. There is a copy in palm leaves (Ms No. 52, foll. 92) preserved in Raj Library, Darbhanga. The total number of Sūtras is thus recorded at the end :
I. 40 + 20 = 60 / II. 68 + 68 = 136 / III. 69 + 73 = 142 / IV. 68 + 49 = 117 / V. 43 + 24 = 67. After this there are three figures 60/5/22. The number of Sūtras totalling 522 is lesser than the earlier standard versions. This copy on paper belonging to one Gopi Bhaṭṭa is very old, but the Darbhanga copy is older still. The title 'Tarkācārya' is not found in the Darbhanga copy, where at the end of the first chapter the following important colophon occurs :

तोरभुक्तिमहीपाल-परिपन्नेह्यसूरिणा ।

श्रीकेशवकवीन्द्रेण कृता सूत्रप्रकाशिका ।

इति महामहोपाध्याय-वेदान्तव्यासश्रीकेशवमिश्रकृते गौतमसूत्रप्रकाशे प्रथमोऽध्यायः । ल सं ४२४ ।

It is also recorded at the end of II. 1 that the author taught both Nyāya and Vedānta at Kāśī :

सुखेनाध्यापयन् कार्यां न्यायवेदान्तदर्शने ।

श्रीकेशवकविश्चक्रे न्यायसूत्रप्रकाशनाम् ॥

It was apparently due to his residence at Varanasi that his fame as a teacher of more than one thousand pupils reached the shore of the ocean. The following two notes found in the fifth chapter of the book prove that he had previously written a treatise named Tarkatāṇḍava अनाधिक्यं च तत्सर्वं दर्शितं तर्कताण्डवे (fol. 23a) यथा च सङ्करजात्यनन्तर्भावौ तथा प्रपञ्चितं तर्कताण्डवे (fol. 34b).

Fortunately the author has clearly mentioned the name of the family to which he belonged as well as the particular branch of it, in another treatise named Sankhyāparimāṇam (Ms No. 43-2 of the Darbhanga Raj Library, foll. 31). Verses 4-5 at the beginning of this work run —

तीरभुक्तिमहोपालपरिपन्मुल्यसूरिणा ।
 श्रीकेशवकबीन्द्रेण निबन्धोऽयं विधीयते ॥

In the Pañjy the name of the author has been traced exactly in the Kataka branch of the famous Sodarapura family. The genealogy is as follows : M. M. Viśvanātha—Ratinātha—Miśra Dālu—Miśra Gadādhara—Mahopādhyāya Viśo (3rd. son)—Mahopādhyāya Keśava. He had four sons and his wife's name was Śobhā. He was thus a second cousin of Khāntara Miśra (q v) and two generations later than Śankara Miśra. He must have written his works about 1525 A.D. and was the leading scholar evidently at the court of Mahārāja Lakṣmīnātha Kansanārāyana of Mithilā, the last monarch of the Oinwara dynasty. His name, therefore, is one more addition to the list of the galaxy of scholars belonging to the Sodarapura family that shed lustre on the cultural history of Mithilā for several centuries.

DEVANĀTHA THAKKURA, TARKAPAÑCĀNANA : a renowned author of Mithilā, better known as the 'Sapta-kaumudikāra'. The names of these 'seven' Kaumudis are —

1. Adhikaraṇakaumudī on Mīmāṃsā as applied to the Dharma-śāstra (Varanasi ed , 1926, pp 62).
2. Kāṭhakaumudī on Smṛti (vide Mithilā Mss , Vol. I, p. 54, foll. 70)
3. Kāvyaakaumudī on Rhetorics. (Peterson's 3rd Rep.)
4. Tantrakaumudī written in 1486 Śaka (1564-5 A. D.)¹.
5. Mantrakaumudī written in 400 L. S.
6. Siddhāntakaumudī (cited in No 1, p. 6)
7. Smṛtikaumudī (published in Mithilā Granthamālā up to p. 144). None of these works, however, belong to Navyanyāya in which he is known to have composed a work named Āloka-parīkṣā. A copy of this rare book was discovered at Dinājpur in Bengal (H. P. Sāstrī . Notices, III, pp. 74-5, foll 143), it was transcribed at the request of the author himself (महामहा-ठकुरभीक्षेयनाथमहाशयानुशासनात्) in 443 L. S. (चैत्र्यदि एकादश्यां चन्द्रे) There is a copy preserved at Poona (B O. R. I., No. 310 of 1880 81 foll. 1-42, 48-105). It begins —

रामेण दारारथिनाधिसमं पिनाक-

दाह्याशङ्कुरवे जनकात्मजाया ।

पातु प्रमोदमवसेलदनद्वन्द्व-

माकसिकस्मितसमुल्लसितः कपोल ॥१॥

1. The date 'Śaka 1486' at the end of a copy in Assamese bark (in possession of the present writer) is certainly that of composition as the copy itself is not so old. The date of the Mantrakaumudī is thus recorded in copies of 436 and 442 L. S. (examined by Prof. R. Jha) — शब्दे लक्ष्मण-सेनस्य विद्यच्छून्याभिलक्षिते । The reading विद्यच्छून्या (Mithilā Mss , II, Introd , p 4) seems to be wrong

करणस्येति । अनुमितिकरणस्यानुमानत्वेन तस्य जानित्वाभावादित्यर्थः । यत्तु व्याप्ति-
ज्ञानत्वेन करणत्वमेव नेति—तत्र ।

It should be noticed that unlike the present copy where the author proves himself an worshipper of Rāma and Sītā the Dinajpur copy makes him a devotee of Śiva, though the 2nd introductory verse is the same in both. The first passage is from the Āloka. It ends with a long note on a passage of the Upamāna part, which no other scholar of Mithilā (except the versatile Gokulanātha) ever touched

मूले योपलक्षणेति ।...मूले सामान्यतो दृष्टस्येति.. इत्यलं विस्तरेण ।

पक्षपातमनालम्ब्य विलम्ब्य गुरुगौरवम् ।

देवनाथो यथावस्तु परिशिष्टमचिन्तयत् ॥

इति भीतस्यचिन्तामण्यालोकपरिशिष्टेऽनुमानोपमानपरिच्छेदः ॥ Devanātha has recorded many important facts about himself and his father. He was the fifth son of his father (गोविन्दपञ्चमसुतो विदितो जगत्याम्, Mantrakaumudī, v. 7, Tantrakaumudī v. 4) When the Mantrakaumudī was written in 400 L. S. (not later than 1519 A. D.) his father was alive (गोविन्द एव भुवने विदितो चकास्ति v. 3). He must then have been quite young, for he states at the end of the book —

स्वगौरवेण कर्तव्या नोपेक्षा मनीषिभिः ।

मनुराह यतो ग्राह्यं बालादपि मुमापितम् ॥

He has given his genealogy from Ravikara (v. 3) and described his father as well-versed in Mīmāṃsā, Vedānta and Nyāya . (v. 4).

मीमांसामवतार्य यः सदसत्तामदा विवेके गुरुः

यो वेदान्तविचारधारुपरिते सिद्धान्तवाचस्पतिः ।

आचार्योऽपि विचार्यते यद्वधिनैयायिको वा न वा
गोविन्दोऽयमखण्डमण्डलयशश्चन्द्रो जगत्पाप्तवान् ॥

At the end also his father is extolled as wedded to Lady Logic -

यस्तर्कतन्त्ररमणीकमनीयकान्तो
गोविन्द एष भुवने विदित सुकीर्ति ।

There cannot be any doubt therefore that Devanātha (and his younger brother Madhusūdana) read Nyāya with his own father and the 'Gurucarana' mentioned in the Ālokapanīṣṭa evidently refers to his own father . In the Adhikaranakamudī Devanātha mentions a separate teacher named Soma Bhaṭṭa, who seems to have been a non-Maithila scholar possibly of Varanasi . At the end of the Tantrakaumudī he advertised his all round scholarship, just like his brother Madhusūdana, as follows —

मीमांसारमृतितर्कतन्त्रकवितालङ्कारकोपागम-ज्योतिर्वेदपुराणभारतमतिर्यस्तर्कपञ्चानन ।
देवोऽसौ कमलेश्वर क्षितिपतिस्त देवनाथ चिरात्
सप्राप्य स्वयमादरेण विदधे विद्वन्मुदे कौमुदीम् ॥

Here we are confronted with the problem of his patronage by the king of Kamatā, which is identical with the kingdom of Kuchvihara. Devanātha distinctly says in the colophon that the book was written at the request of Malladeva Naranātāyana, who reigned from 1555 to 1587 A. D. The colophon runs — इति समस्तप्रक्रियाविराजमानमहाराजाधिराजश्रीमल्लदेवनरनारायणकारिताया महा-
महोपाध्यायतर्कपञ्चाननश्रीदेवनाथकृताया तन्त्रकौमुद्या पद्धतिपरिच्छेद समाप्त ।
शक १४८६ ॥ (fol 100) The date of composition (1564-5 A. D.) falls in the first decade of the reign, proving that Devanātha came to Kuchvihara soon after the coronation of Malladeva in 1555 A. D. The Tantrakaumudī also states that before he came to Kuchvihara he had enjoyed the patronage of another monarch Gajapati Govindadeva —

एतन्मूलकमेव—

सर्वत्सरद्वयेऽतीते वर्जितोर्जादिपञ्चकम् ।

षष्ठोमासोऽधिमासः स्यात् खोबालैरपि गण्यताम् ॥

इति परमानन्दकुरवचनम् । इदं च कस्याचिदयनस्थितौ सवाद्यपि न नियतम्—
अस्मिन्नेव एकत्रिंशदधिकषोडशशताब्दिते १६३१ शककाते वैशाखे मलमास ॥
(fol. 8a of Ms No 592 of the Mithilā Institute) Gokulanātha's statement is correct as there was actually a Malamāsa in Vaisākha in the year 1631 Śaka corresponding to 1709 A.D. falling in the reign of Mādhava Śunha.

Among the 13 professors mentioned in the above mentioned declaration only Gokulanātha is specially panegyricized in the following words ये हि सकलसिद्धान्त युक्त्या खण्डयन् शिरोमणो- र्मानमपनेतु सिद्धान्ततत्त्वप्रभृतीन् न्यायनिबन्धनान् बहुश प्रणीतवन्त सर्वसिद्धान्त-
दीक्षागुरवो भूमौ व्यराजन् (lines 8 10) Gokulanātha rose to be the Supreme Head of the University of Mithilā, so to speak, making decisions on all conceivable subjects. The greatest literary achievement of Gokulanātha was his attempt to discredit Śiromaṇi, the great refuter by arguments of all previous decisions and he wrote many works like the Siddhāntatattva to that end. This statement of his grandson is important for the history of Navyanyāya in Mithilā and as we shall presently see, is substantially correct.

NYĀYA WORKS OF GOKULANĀTHA. Among all the branches of Sanskrit literature mastered by Gokulanātha the hardest nut cracked by him was of course Navyanyāya, which had already reached the final stage of development in the hands of Gadādhara of Bengal (1604-1709 A.D.) about a generation before Gokulanātha. In the final colophon to his work on Smṛti named Kundakādamvari (Ms at Raj Library, Darbhanga) Gokulanātha's title is recorded as Mahamahopādhyāya Śattarka-pañcānana' (1 e a lion in all the six divisions of dialectics), a true description of his invincible career as a dialectician. Among his works on Navyanyāya the following have been so far discovered

- (1) Cakraraśmi—commentary on the Tattvacintāmaṇi;
- (2) Dikkālanurūpana—Ms Raj Library, Darbhanga
- (3) Didhitiudyota—com. on Raghunātha's Tattvacintāmaṇidhiti
- (4) Kusumañjalitippana.
- (5) Khandanakuthāra—Ms Raj Library, Darbhanga
- (6) Lāghavagauravarahasya.
- (7) Mithyātvamrukti
- (8) Nyāyasiddhantatattva.
- (9) Padavākhyaratnākara
- (10) Śaktivāda.

GIRIDHAROPĀDHYĀYA The chance discovery of a single manuscript and the enterprise of an eminent logician of Mithilā Jīvanātha Miśra Tarkatīrtha Nyāyaratna¹ are responsible for the publication of the Vibhaktiyarthanirṇaya (Chowkh ed., 1902, pp. 477), one of the best books on the subject ever written in India. A cousin and pupil of the great Gokulanātha of Mangroni, the author treated the subject in such a masterly way both from the grammarian's and logician's point of view that even Gokulanātha must have yielded his palm to him in many places. When Giridhara wrote, say, about 1720 A. D. the most glorious period of Navadvīpa has definitely ended with the death of Gadādhara in 1709 A. D. and the signs of a distinct revival of the ancient glory of Mithilā were discernible at Mangroni. Pāṇinian studies, which never influenced the works of Jagadīśa and Gadādhara of Bengal, shed lustre on Giridhara's

1 Jīvanātha was the second 'Tarkatīrtha' of Mithilā and passed in 1893 as a pupil of Yadunātha Sarvabhauma of Navadvīpa. He lived at Sugaunā and belonged to the Sodarapura family. The first 'Tarkatīrtha' of Mithilā was Santagopala Jha who passed in 1892 as pupil of Kailāśa Śiromani of Varanasi. Umeśa Miśra (pupil of Śivacandra Sarvabhauma of Mulajore College) and Vecana Jha (pupil of Yadunātha Sarvabhauma of Navadvīpa) passed in 1895. In the very first year of examination in 1879 passed two scholars evidently of Mithilā who should be identified.

work, which succeeded in keeping the enormous subtleties of Gadādhara within reasonable bounds without discarding them. Unlike his professor Gokulanātha, who had displayed some animus against the Bengal authorities, Giridhara cited Śiromani with due regard Giridhara began his work with an obeisance to the god Śiva and to his own parents. It is interesting to note that he gives the epithet अन्वोत्तानलिनीप्रमोदनरवि to his father Mahopādhyāya Vāgīśa who was also, therefore, a distinguished logician. Vāgīśa was the younger brother of Gokulanātha's father, being the fourth son of his parents (vide the family table published in the Proc. Or. Conference, Benares session, p 318) He frequently refers to his teacher Gokulanātha and his famous work Padavākhyaratnākara and mostly approves his views with additional arguments (गुरुचरणास्तु " इति पदवाक्यरत्नाकरे प्राहुः । युज्यते चायमर्थः ॥ pp. 37-40 See also pp. 45, 58, 126 30 142, 166, 184, 207, 225, 284-5, 312, 323 25, 342, &c. up to p 443) To give an idea of the courses of studies then current in the greatest centre of Sanskrit culture in Mithilā an alphabetical list of the authorities cited by Giridhara is given below.

Anumānadīdhiti (p 369), Ākhyātavāda (pp 24, 85 & 114) of Śiromani Āmatattvavivekadīdhiti (194), Kārikā (51, 53 4), Kusumāñjali (कुसुमाञ्जलिप्रवृत्तिमूलपत्रे p 31), Kaiyyata (375) Kaunda Bhatta (p 200), Gaudah (339, 346-47 being a refutation of Jagadīśa's Śabdaśaktiprakāśikā II. 129 & 359), Darpane Thakkurāḥ this important passage runs as follows -

अतएव सस्थानविशेषवत्त्वादिनेति मूले (Pratyakṣa part, II I. ed. 833) व्रतविशेषवत्त्वादिरादिपदार्थ इति दर्पणे ठक्कुरा । व्रते विशेषो जटासबन्धतावच्छेदको दर्शित एव गुरुणा टीकेत्यत्र विवरणवाक्य टीकाशब्दार्थः । Dīdhitakṛt (p 80) Prakāśa (प्रकाशे महामहोपाध्यायचरणा p 366 the reference is to the Dravyakīrtanāvalīprakāśa of Vardhamāna) Pratyakṣāloka (प्रत्यक्षालोके मिश्रै p. 251), Bhattapāda (p. 106), Bhāṣya-Vārtika-Tatparya (p. 117), Mandana Miśra (p 121-22), Māgha (p. 74), Miśra i. e. Jayadeva (pp. 37, 202 & 251), Śabdāloka (शब्दालोके मिश्राः p. 202), Śāṅkarabhāṣya (p. 137), Śivāditya (p. 251), Soddandopādhyāya (? read Sondada p. 161), Hari i. e. Bhartṛhari, author of the Vākya-padīya (pp. 128-9 & 449), The Kārikā हन्तेः कर्मण्युपष्टम्भात् &c. has been ascribed to Bhartṛhari evidently on the authority of Jagadīśa's Śabdaśakti-prakāśikā ; the mention of Bhābhāṭa, who was most probably posterior to Bhartṛhari, proves the ascription to be extremely doubtful, if not positively wrong. The Kārikā has not been quoted by any writer before Jagadīśa and seems on the face of it of non-Pāṇinian origin.

Giridhara proves himself very well-read in the Mithilā and Bengal authors of the Navyanyāya as well as the recent Pāṇinian works written at Varanasi. The mention of Maheśa Thakkura's Darpaṇa proves that it was studied at Maṅgronī, obviously from patriotic considerations. No other commentary on the Āloka is mentioned in the list.

M. M. RŪPANĀTHA THAKKURA (TAREKATNA) : a protege and close relative of Mahārāja Mādhava Siṃha (1775-1807 A.D.) of Mithilā, at whose request he wrote a sub-commentary on the Āloka-darpaṇa of Maheśa. We reproduce below verses 3-6 from its beginning :—

The colophon runs : इति महामहोपाध्यायश्रीमुनेष्वरमहोपाध्याय-श्रीमद्वरूपनाथविरचिता सिद्धान्तलक्षणीय-दर्पणभावप्रकाशटीका समाप्ता । It is thus a gloss on the first part (up to the Vyāptivāda) on the Anumānāloka-darpana. Rūpanātha also composed advanced notes called Vivecanā on the knotty parts of Navyanyāya, according to the then current standard of scholarship obtaining in Mithilā and Bengal. 'His' notes on the Sāmānyanirukti of Gadādhara were 'discovered'. Rūpanātha also wrote at the request of his patron a Chandogāhnika on the religious duties of the Sāmavedins ; it is still current in Mithilā.

Rūpanātha was a direct descendant of M. M. Dāmodar Thakkura, the immediate elder brother of Maheśa Thakkura.
He belonged to the village Sarvasīmā, where his descendants still survive. He was 7th in descent from Dāmodar and was born evidently about 1750 A.D. For, in the interesting Judgement (Vyavasthāpatra) in Sanskrit dated in 1716 Śaka (1794
A.D.) Rūpanātha's name along with that of his eldest son Madhusūdana is mentioned, Rūpanātha's father was the defendant in the suit. Rūpanātha died shortly before 1750
Śaka (1828 A.D.), in which year his son Mahāpādhyāya Acyuta Thākura established a temple of Śiva named 'Acyuteśvara'¹.

1 All the above details about Rūpanātha are taken from an excellent monograph in Mathilī named 'Candrapīkūlaprasāsti' written by Pandit

It should be noticed that Rūpanātha prosecuted his studies on Navyanyāya neither at Navadvīpa nor at Varanasi, but in Mithilā under Mahāmahopādhyāya Subodha, who must have been a superior scholar in the second half of the 18th century, though his name is now completely forgotten. Among the own sons of Rūpanātha two became scholars of repute viz Acyuta and M. M. Mukunda Thākura and both of them specialised in Navyanyāya but they are not known to have composed any work on the subject.

VIŚVANĀTHA JHĀ a celebrated Naiyāyika of Darbhanga. He belonged to a famous Srotriya family of Thadhī. He originally read with Parameśvara Jhā and Rddhinātha Jhā the talented scholars of Cakauti village and finished his studies at Navadvīpa with Goloka Nyāyaratna the famous Patrikākāra, and after his death with Prasanna Tarkratna. He was exclusively a scholar of the latest phase of Navyanyāya. When Maheśa Nyāyaratna visited his seminary at Darbhanga in 1891 he had eight students the largest number of Nyāya students in the whole of Mithila. He wrote a learned Patrikā named Siddhāntasāra on Vyadhikarana one of the knottiest sections of Gangeśa. He also composed an extensive commentary named Prakāśa on Udayana's Lakṣaṇavali, which was fortunately published from Varanasi (1822 Śaka, pp 195). At the end of the book he has given the following account about himself —

आसीत् सोदरपूरमूलमहियाग्रामो भवानांपति-

यां ब्रह्मैकविचारनिर्मलमतिं रयात्तामिलैः सद्गुणैः ।

Jivananda Thakura great great grandson of Rūpanātha (1999 V S, pp 82) and Asst Librarian Raj Library, Darbhanga. Vide pp 24-32 for Rūpanātha's account, pp 35-36 for 'Acyuteśvara' and the reading of its inscription and pp 77-80 for the Judgement reproduced from the J B O. R S, 1920. It is a full and authentic account of Damodara and his composed in Caitra 1805 Śaka (1884 A D. शरवियद्गजचन्द्रमिते शके p 195) There are quotations from the Muktāvalī (p 19) Jagadīśa (p 24), Śankara Miśra whose views on Tejastva are refuted (p 47) and the Vādivinoda of Śankara (p. 55), which was not yet printed Viśvanātha has divided the original book into four parts (Pratyaksa etc) after Gaṅgeśa (pp. 113, 163 Upamāna finished in only a few lines) This is quite novel, though quite in keeping with the commentator's profession. For, all up-to-date scholars of Navyanyāya bring down every topic under the four grand divisions of Gaṅgeśa's work.

KAVIRATNA There is a copy in palm leaves of a commentary on the Pratyaksakhanda of Gaṅgeśa by one Kaviratna preserved in the Darbhanga Raj Library (Ms No.
P. 10, foll 88 incomplete towards the end) It begins

प्रत्यक्षेऽपि प्रपश्यद्भिः प्रत्यक्षे दूषणं मुहुः ।

अथ श्रीकविरत्नेन क्षीरे नीर निरूप्यते ॥

It seems to be an attempt to point out all erroneous explanations upon Gaṅgeśa. The only Kaviratna known in Mithilā is a grand pupil of Gokulanātha. He is thus eulogised by the famous Maithilā poet Candā Jhā

(Kāśī-Sivastuti cited in Sinha's Hist. of Tirhut, p. 144)
Narendra Sinha of Mithilā (reigned 1743-70 A. D.) was the son of Gokulanātha's patron Rāghava Sinha Kaviratna flourished, therefore, in the third quarter of the century, when studies on the original text of Gaṅgeśa were almost forgotten

It should, however, be mentioned here that Vāgīśa was the name of an uncle (younger brother of the father) of Gokulanātha and it is extremely unlikely that the uncle took lessons from the nephew. If some other Vāgīśa, pupil of Gokulanātha, is mentioned in the above tradition it requires careful investigation. Otherwise the tradition cannot be accepted as beyond any dispute

DHARMADATTA JHĀ (alias BACCĀ JHĀ) was the most renowned scholar of Mithilā in recent times who earned for his versatility and profundity of learning the title 'Master of all sciences' (Sarvatantra-svatantra). He belonged to one of the premier Śrotriya families of Mithilā named Gaṅgauli of the Śāṇḍilya gotra His grandfather M. M. Ratnapāṇi Jhā adorned the courts of Mahārāja Chatra Sinha (1807-39), his son Rudra Sinha (1839-50) and the latter's son Maheśvara Sinha (1850-50) Under their patronage he wrote a dozen works, mostly on Smṛti. Baccā Jhā was born in March, 1860 A. D. He studied, taught pupils and composed works all his life and died in harness in August 1918 at the age of 59 only, when he was serving the Muzaffarpur Sanskrit College as its Principal. He took lessons successively from Jatādhara Jhā (of Pilokhwar), Viśvanātha Jhā (of Thādhī, his maternal uncle), Babujana Jhā (of Pilokhwar), Bāla Śāstrī and Viśuddhānanda Sarasvatī (both of Varanasi) When M. M. Maheśa Nyāyaratna, Principal of the Calcutta Sanskrit College, visited his seminary at Nowari in 1891, he had 19 students with him reading six different subjects. As a consummate scholar he wielded his powerful pen in many subjects, though most of his works remain unpublished. In Vedānta he wrote a gloss on the Advaitasiddhicandrīkā, while his sub-commentary Gādhārthatattvaloka on Maṇḍusūdana's Gitāṭīkā has been published. He wrote besides a Campū named Sulocanā-Mādhava. He wrote many dissertations and glosses on the latest phase of Navyanyāya, some of which have been published securing for him a permanent place among the authors of Mithilā. The published books are

1. Vivṛti on Jagadīśa's Vyāptipañcaka (Varanasi, 1923, pp 41).

2. -do- -do- Siddhāntalakṣaṇa (-do- , 1925, 193)

The closing verses are reproduced as a specimen of his style

3. Vivṛti on Gadādhara's Sāmānyasrukti (Varanasi, 1935, pp.)

4. Gādhārthatattvaloka on Gadādhara's Vyūtpattisūtra (Bombay, 1912, Published in his lifetime). This elaborate work made the author's name celebrated throughout India.

The following is a list of his unpublished works. Advanced notes on Jagadīśa's Avacchedakatvamrukti, Vyāptyanugama, Pakṣatā, Avavava, Savyabhīcāra, Satpratīpakṣa and Gadādhara's Śaktivāda. He also commented on the Khaṇḍana and on Vardhamāna's Kusumāñjalīprakāśa. His explanation of Ānanda-pūrṇa's two knotty phrases on Īśvarānumāna, which taxed the brains of all the best scholars of his times, has been published (Chowkh. ed. of Khaṇḍana with 5 commentaries, pp. 5-7). He, moreover, proved his acumen by writing commentaries on the older classics the Nyāyabhāṣya and Vācaspati's Tātparyatīkā, whose studies revived only late in his life. His masterly style is illustrated in the following closing verses of his gloss on the Avacchedakatvamrukti, which convey a double meaning

Many of his pupils and grand pupils are still carrying his banners in various parts of India¹.

1. We are indebted to one of his worthy pupils Pandit Saśmath Jhā for some of the details given above. He has himself emulated his great teacher by writing a very advanced thesis on 'Trītalāvacchedakatā' (lit. three storied edifice of the term Avacchedakatā), which, happily, has been published by the Mithula Institute. For list of Baccā Jhā's works vide Introd. to his gloss on Samānyanrukti (Kashī Sans Series, 1935).
